BOSTON. — Paul Revere rides again on the 165th anniversary morn of the "nineteenth of April, '75"—but this year the galloping tradition of Paul Revere will not halt at Lexington's battle-green or Concord's bridge. This year he'll go careening on across the continent to rally another army of patriots from a wider nation that stretches to Rio Grande valley and Oregon farms. This year the annual national convention of the American Legion meets for the second time in historic Boston. The dates are September 22 to 26.

Paul Revere's is the figure that adorns the bronze of the Legion's twenty-second convention medal. He is the rousing spirit of the Bay State Legionnaire organization at national convention headquarters, 8 Beacon street, now going full tilt on its mission to make this return-visit of their land, sea, and air-force comrades from every state and United States possession, the greatest patriotic pilgrimage to the "Cradle of Liberty" this land has ever seen. The Legion's 1940 war-cry, "Keep Out and Keep Ready," will be, they say, "the shout heard 'round the world."

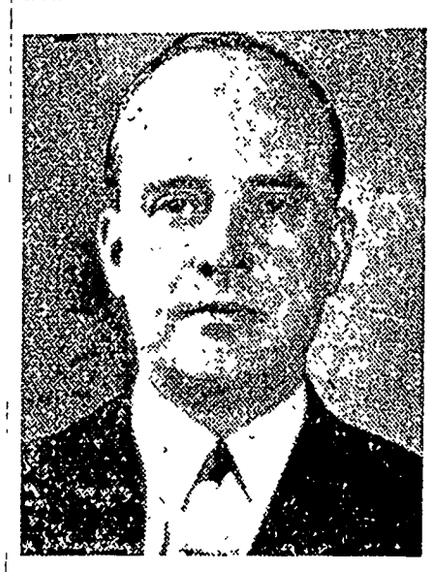
FRANK'S G. O. P. PLATFORM

If you have been following the campaign speeches of the Republican candidates, you probably have been struck by this interesting coincidence:

That on all major issues their views are practically identical; and that all these views are strikingly similar to the ideas expressed in the report of the Glenn Frank Program committee.

As one Republican veteran on Capitol Hill sagely observed, "The boys apparently are writing their speeches with a Thesaurus in one hand and the Frank report in the other."

This quiet borrowing from the Frank report is particularly evident on the farm issue. The Frank committee, in effect, approved the AAA but criticized allegedly inefficient and bureaucratic administration.



GLENN FRANK
No platform intended.

Also it advocated that the emphasis on benefit payments should be on "soil conservation" rather than on the New Deal's "crop control."

The Frank "farm plank" unquestionably scored in the crucial grain belt. It was widely republished and enthusiastically endorsed by many prominent local Republicans. This was not lost on the three leading G. O. P. candidates, Dewey, Taft and Vandenberg.

Since publication of the report they have followed its "farm plank" very closely. In his Omaha speech, Dewey practically echoed the plank. Taft, who last December in Des Moines took a poke at farm subsidies, sang a more Frank-like tune in his second try at the farm issue at Springfield, Ill. And Vandenberg's senate declamations on the subject also have been along the lines of the Frank report.

Liberal Gospel.

This attitude of the candidates is very significant.

The Frank report is a lot more liberal than the views held by certain powerful eastern G. O. P. leaders, who will have a great deal to say behind the scenes at the Philadelphia convention. That the candidates nevertheless are echoing the doctrines enunciated by the report indicates clearly that they deem this liberalism necessary to win public favor.

It also is a good tipoff that when the G. O. P. platform emerges it will read very much like the Frank report. In his preface, Dr. Frank stated that it was not the intention of his committee to write a platform. But party insiders will give you odds that that is just what he did.

F. D. R. and the Lenses.

Remarked Tony Muto, newsreel impresario, of the President of the United States:

"That guy could wear a gunny sack and nobody would know it. He's got a personality that steals the show. His facial mannerisms are dramatic, and nobody sees anything else."

Roosevelt was not wearing a gunny sack, but a black velvet smoking jacket when he and Henry Wallace were broadcasting from the "radio room" of the White House the other evening. The occasion was the AAA dinners for farmers throughout the country, and the President, a veteran in such matters, was offering his Secretary of Agriculture a little good humored coaching before they began to speak.

He explained to Henry that the newsreels would use three lenses during each talk—a small lens for a distance shot, the larger lens for middle range, and finally a big lens for a closeup.

"That's the lens you've got to watch, Henry," said the President. "That big one is the boudoir lens; it shows up all the blemishes!"

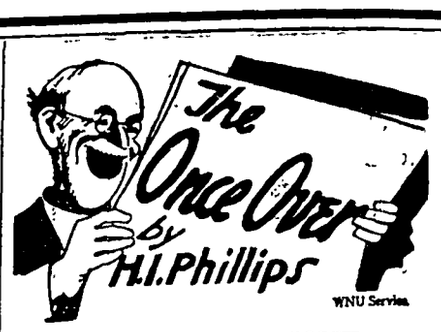
Stamp Collectors.

Collectors, who have had a field day under Jim Farley's variegated stamp regime, are complaining bitterly that the latest federal stamps cannot be had for love or money. They can be bought only by people on relief.

The office of Federal Surplus commodities, which operates the food stamp plan, has received indignant letters from philatelists demanding to know why they cannot buy food stamps for their collections. But they get no satisfaction.



HOME, SWEET HOME

"There's the doorbell."

"What! Again?"

"You'd better answer it."

"Why?"

"It might be somebody who ISN'T looking for any information."

"Optimist! You answer the bell. I answered it last time."

"No, you didn't."

"Yes, I did. I remember distinctly. It was one of those Gallup poll fellers."

"Well, I answered the Gallup poll before that one. It was the one where he wanted to know whether I favored public officers with or without whiskers."

"He's still ringing. Are you going to sit there and let him ring forever?"

"I'm standing on my rights."

"What rights?"

"Fifteen minutes between rings."

"After all, why so obstinate?"

"I'm sick of answering questions. A man's house is his castle, not a quiz program."

"Suppose it's the letter man?"

"Let him leave the mail and go away. I'm taking no chances on him asking me any questions, either. I answered a knock on the door from the milkman yesterday. And what do you think he wanted?"

"What?"

"He wanted to know the height of Mount McKinley and the name of the inventor of the buttonhook. It seems he was going on a radio program."

"There's the bell again. Please answer. It might be somebody WITH NO QUESTIONS TO ASK."

"WANNA BET?"

VOICE IN THE DARKNESS

I am a lost cause . . .
I am a forgotten virtue . . .
I am an abandoned tradition
And a forsaken leader.

I once ruled all civilized nations . . .
I held the respect of savages
And was not completely ignored
By the lowest of the barbarians.
Men held to me in moments of Mad impulses.

I ruled warfare . . .
Even on the battlefield
Among friend and foe; and in
The fearful heat of carnage
I was not forgotten.

Sorely pressed soldiers,
Grim and bleeding fighters,
Swayed by their patriotisms
And prejudices, paid me tribute . . .
Generals planning campaigns
Admitted me to their council tables . . .

"This far we shall go," they said,
"And no farther!"
At their side when swords were drawn
I took their word . . .
I knew it would never be broken.

Rulers respected me . . .
War lords took my hand and Gave me their firm pledges
Before the first cry of "Forward!"
Before the first killing,
And until the last black death.

I saved the innocent millions . . .
I spared the toiling womenfolks . . .
I protected the little children . . .
I saved the unoffending home
From the raider and the torch . . .
From the unspeakable horror of High explosive bomb.

I saved the infant from poison gas . . .
I kept the family from
The pitiful refugee camps . . .
I made the bombing of orphan asylum,
Hospital, kindergarten and cottage
Impossible and unthinkable
In the heart and mind of Man.

Now I am betrayed and forsaken . . .
I am excluded from the councils,
The battle plans and
The fields of warfare.
At the side of the warriors
Stand Barbarism, Paganism, Bestiality, Hatred.

I am in the outer darkness . . .
But I shall one day rule, emerge . . .
I shall one day rule again . . .
For it is not in the heart of
The world to exclude me forever . . .

I am Chivalry.

Spring Menus.

Menus, in spring, can be something very special—if you'll take advantage of the grand variety of foods available! In this column next week, Eleanor Howe will give you some of her own favorite suggestions for dressing up spring menus.

Prepare cherry-flavored gelatin and fill empty grapefruit sections with gelatin. When gelatin has stiffened, arrange each grapefruit half on bed of lettuce. Place mayonnaise in center of grapefruit and top with chopped green maraschino cherries.

'Salad Bowl' Fruit Salad

Toss lightly together in salad bowl, one cup watermelon balls, one cup muskmelon balls, one cup honey dew melon balls, one cup seeded red cherries, and one cup diced celery.

Add french dressing in sufficient quantity to thoroughly coat all fruits.

Have ready a supply of chilled, crisp french endive. Place two or three stalks on side of each individual salad plate and serve with salad bowl fruit salad.

May Basket Salad.

Take the desired number of firm uniform tomatoes, cut out stems and hollow out the center slightly. Slice rings of green pepper about ¼ inch thick, cut in half and fasten on tomato with toothpicks to form handle of basket. Place hearts of lettuce and radish roses (using toothpicks for stems) in the basket. Place basket on lettuce leaves. Garnish with mayonnaise.

Spicy Summer Salad.

1 cup vinegar
½ teaspoon whole cloves
1 teaspoon stick cinnamon
1 teaspoon salt
2 cups fresh spinach leaves
1 large carrot
1 stalk celery

Boil vinegar, spices and salt together for 10 minutes. Strain vinegar and chill. Scrape carrot. Chop all of the fresh vegetables together until they are fairly fine. Dress with the vinegar mixture and serve at once.

Gardener's Salad.
(Serves 8-10)

1 sliver of peeled garlic
1 head crisp lettuce (shredded)
4 tomatoes (peeled and cut in wedges)
1 cucumber (peeled and sliced)
3 young onions (sliced thin)
4 radishes (sliced thin)
1 green pepper (cut in rings)
2 carrots (slivered)
6 slices bacon (fried crisp, and crumpled)
1 cup french dressing

Be sure the vegetables are washed, wiped dry, and very cold and crisp before starting to mix the salad. Sprinkle the inside of a large salad bowl with salt. With a fork, rub the garlic well in the salt. Remove garlic. Put in the shredded lettuce, the vegetables and bacon, then the french dressing. Mix well, so that all the ingredients are completely coated with dressing. Serve immediately.

STAGE SCREEN RADIO

(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

"REBECCA" was released at last, a few weeks ago, and people are still arguing about it; the chances are that the arguments will continue for a long, long time. For it's one of those cases of "If you liked the book you probably won't like the picture."

That's unfortunate, because the picture is superb. Hitchcock, the top-notch English director, handled it unusually well. Technically, it could hardly be bettered. The eerie, supernatural feeling that pervaded the book has been admirably brought to the screen.

Joan Fontaine, under Hitchcock's direction, gave such a performance that she has proved her right to being known as an excellent actress in her own right; the time may come when Olivia de Havilland will be known as "Joan Fontaine's sister," instead of its being the other way round. The entire cast is exceptionally good; it's one of the best pictures that have come out of Hollywood in a long, long time. So, even though you were quite mad about the book, don't miss seeing it.

For the first time in recent years the Legion of Decency cracked down on a picture made by a major studio when it stepped on "Strange Cargo," the Joan Crawford - Clark Gable film. One of the objections was that there were "lustful implications in dialogue and situation." This picture, incidentally, had already been passed by the Production Code administration.

Before any of the grown-ups could reach them, Johnny swung Ann onto his back and marched her to safety.

Few people knew how much the Hollywood preview of "Primrose Path" meant to Joan Carroll. In it she plays Ginger Rogers' brat sister, and the option on her services was written to run not longer than three days after the picture's official preview. The contract provided that she would be signed to a five-year studio contract if the audience reaction was favorable for her.

Probably no showing of a picture ever meant more to a girl. She's done her best, and all she could do was sit and wait—to see if a lot of strangers liked her. When you see it—and it's swell, don't miss it—you can imagine how she felt. When the showing was over, and she learned that she'd won that coveted contract, she wanted to embrace everybody in that audience.

Ken Murray, master of ceremonies of CBS's "Star Theater," says he turned comedian when he was fired from his first stage job, which was not so very long ago. He tried to crash vaudeville, and a comedian who felt sorry for him told him that his jokes were terrible, and offered to take him along as a "straight" man. On his first two appearances in that capacity Ken got practically all the laughs—and lost his job. Whereupon he became a successful comedian in his own right

Cue Shovers Still Bow to 'Mr. Billiards'

By ROBERT McSHANE

IN 1906 Willie Hoppe defeated Maurice Vignaux in Paris, France, for the world's 18.1 balk line billiards championship.

That was long before Heavyweight Champion Joe Louis was born. It was the year that Chicago won both the National and American league pennants. James J. Jeffries had just relinquished his world's heavyweight title, Joe Gans was lightweight champ, and Philadelphia Jack O'Brien was king of the light heavies.

It was the year that 500 lives were lost in the San Francisco fire and earthquake. Teddy Roosevelt was President of the United States, and Admiral Robert E. Peary was exploring the Arctic. It was the natal year of stage and screen stars Madeleine Carroll and Francis Lederer.

And now—34 years later—Willie Hoppe—otherwise known as Mr. Billiards—has annexed the world's three cushion billiards championship This isn't the first time that Willie has topped the angle players. After Welker Cochran won the three cushion championship in Chicago in 1936 he met Hoppe's challenge and was relieved of his crown. In 1937 Cochran again ascended the throne.

Long-Time Champion

Hoppe won his latest tournament in Chicago. He displayed all his old cue wizardry to win 16 consecutive games and cinch the championship—an unheard of feat in tournament games. Ten consecutive victories by Johnny Layton was the previous high in tournament play.

Hoppe admitted that he played the best billiards of his life in the national meet. He was "on" from the first—and continued to outclass his competitors.

Measured by sport's stop-watch, it's almost impossible to realize how long Hoppe has been master of the cue pushers. Fifty-two years old now, Willie was only 18 when he conquered the great Vignaux. He was the Boy Wonder—the marvel of the mahogany tables. Ty Cobb then was a rookie in Detroit and DeWolf Hopper was setting the Broadway stage afire.

But Hoppe goes back further than that. Playing with Jake Schaefer Sr., Willie toured the country in 1904, consistently outclassing "The Wizard." He played his first exhibition with his father, who taught him the game, when he was eight.

The experts have laid Hoppe away with the old masters many a time—claiming that he was all through. As far back as 1922 a newspaper piece said: "At 36, Hoppe is the patriarch of the billiard world, the survivor of the old school."

Temporary Retirement

That piece appeared after he was successful in the first of his misnamed comebacks. He had lost the 18.2 balk line title in 1921, a title he had held since 1912. Young Jake Schaefer beat him. Then, because of an irritation in his shooting arm, he retired for six months. He came back in 1922 to recapture the title.

Willie had things his own way from the time he first came back from France and beat the 18.1 claimant on this side of the ocean. He licked George Slosson, The Student, for a $5,000 purse and a $500 side bet. Two years later, in 1908, he beat George B. Sutton for the 18 2 title. Then he gave up both titles because he didn't like conditions governing play. When the rules were changed he won back both championships in 1910. From there on the story of Hoppe is the story of billiards until 1921, when Young Jake caught up with his ailing arm. Then, in 1923, Willie won again, and has continued to reign as the Old Master of Billiards.

'All Through' Again

In the winter of 1925 he was "all through" again. His shooting arm was badly lacerated in a fall. Young Jake made it "certain" once more when he took the 18.1 title from Willie—the title he had won from Ora Morningstar in 1912.

Ten years later, in 1936, Willie had the 18.1 title again, plus the cushion carom and three cushion titles. Both Schaefer and Cochran were in the tournament, and they also occupied the mourner's bench in the recent Chicago tourney

ISAIAH COMFORTS AN AFFLICTED PEOPLE

LESSON TEXT—Isaiah 40:1-11.
GOLDEN TEXT—God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble.—Psalm 46:1.

"Comfort ye, comfort ye my people, saith the Lord," knowing as He alone can the great heart sob of sorrow, pain, and disappointment which arises to Him from His people everywhere. No study of God's Word which omits His tender word of comfort is in any sense complete. No teacher or preacher who fails to bring that message to his people is declaring the full counsel of God. No more appropriate passage could be chosen for presenting that truth than Isaiah 40.

The prophet spoke to a people who were experiencing the bitter treatment of their enemies. They were facing the devastation of their country and the deportation of its people into captivity. In such a desperate day one might say that there could be no true word of comfort, but there was, and that word may well encourage us to look up in this our confusing day. The Comforter of Israel is ready to be our comforter.

I. The Source of Comfort (vv. 1-5).

"God is our refuge and strength" (Ps. 46:1). "Behold your God" (Isa. 40:9). "Comfort ye, saith your God" (v. 1). He is "the God of all comfort" (II Cor. 1:3). The astonishing thing is that mankind is so prone to seek comfort elsewhere, turning to God only when everything else fails rather than going to Him first of all.

His comfort is abiding, for it rests on a removal of the source of all pain and sorrow, namely sin. The day of Judah's comfort is to come when her "iniquity is pardoned" (v. 2). That is also the first step for us to take in seeking comfort, to repent and forsake our sin, seeking pardon in Christ.

The one who brings us God's comfort is Jesus Christ. Verses 3 to 5 speak of His coming. John the Baptist was the voice and it was Jesus for whom the way was to be prepared (see Luke 3:4-6). Jesus is the Lord Jehovah, God Himself, the Son of God, and the bringer of God's comfort to men's troubled hearts. It is He who is revealed in this passage in all of His glory and grace.

II. The Need of Comfort (vv. 6-8).

Man thinks he is great, wise, powerful and able to take care of himself. William Henley expressed it in his "Invictus,"

"I am the master of my fate,
I am the captain of my soul."

But God says, "Man is as grass," and declares that when "the spirit of the Lord bloweth" on him he fades and withers. We know that God's witness is true. Boast as he will in the hour of prosperity and strength, man knows in his heart that when he faces the real issues of life he is utterly impotent, needy and undone. Gerald Massey spoke more truly than William Henley when he said,

"Surrounded by unnumbered foes Against my soul the battle goes!"

The man who has come to the end of himself and who realizes that there is neither in him nor in his fellow mortals the strength to meet life's struggles is ready for the ministry of God in Christ, forgiving, cleansing, strengthening and comforting. He has come to realize that "the grass withereth, the flower fadeth, but the word of our God shall stand forever" (v. 8).

III. The Way of Comfort (vv. 9-11).

Good tidings were proclaimed even in that dark hour of Judah's history. We have good tidings for our day as well. Let us declare them from the mountaintops. Lift up your voice with strength and do not be afraid! Here is something to shout about, "Behold your God!"

The prophet's holy enthusiasm had two excellent grounds First, he tells us that God is strong. He "will come with strong hand, and his arm shall rule for him." Here is comfort with assurance because God is strong. He is also loving and tender. His strong arm is used to gather the lambs to His bosom and to tenderly lead His sheep. Gentleness is the attribute not of weakness but of strength. God's strong men and women are His gentlemen and gentlewomen. They, like their Lord, are loving and kind, using their strength not to destroy or to impress others, but to help the weak, to bring comfort in the name of Christ.

Faith of the Future

The faith of the future, like the faith of the present and the faith of the past, will in its essence be simple. It will be faith in the goodness of things—faith that the world is governed for good.—Sir Francis Younghusband.

Decision Was Quite Just, Considering the Evidence

The magistrate was deaf, but certainly not deafer than the two men before him. The first man leaned forward earnestly.

"Sir," he exclaimed, "this man owes me a grocery bill amounting to no less than $20, and refuses to pay it!"

The second man sprang up.

"That's a lie!" he cried, indignantly. "My dog didn't bite him."

There was a pause while the magistrate reviewed the situation, then he announced his decision.

"Gentlemen," he said, "I fully appreciate your feelings, but I can see no reason why you should not combine to support your mother."

Correct Constipation Before—Not After!

An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of emergency relief. Why let yourself suffer those dull lifeless days because of constipation, why bring on the need for emergency medicines, when there may be a far better way? That way is to KEEP regular by getting at the cause of the trouble.

If it's common constipation, due to lack of "bulk" in the diet, a pleasant, nutritious, ready-to-eat cereal—Kellogg's All-Bran—goes straight to the cause by supplying the "bulk" you need.

Eat this crunchy toasted cereal regularly, drink plenty of water, and see if you don't forget all about constipation. All-Bran is made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek. If your condition is chronic, it is wise to consult a physician.

Around Iowa

Fatally Hurt.

When a gravel truck ran over his legs, Alfred Nordaker, of Soldier, Iowa, received injuries that resulted in his death a few days later.

-oOo-

Pelicans Arrive.

At Spirit Lake, every one is sure that "spring is here." Flocks of pelicans have arrived for their usual spring visit before migrating further north.

-oOo-

Nobody Hurt.

When a Studebaker automobile collided head-on with a Milwaukee freight locomotive at Anamosa last week, nobody was hurt. Both the train and the auto were going slowly.

oOo

Collison.

An automobile driven by Irv Kramer of Dyersville struck and knocked down Anthony Pine, grocery clerk, on the streets there last week. Chief casualty was a case of eggs which Pine was carrying across the street.

-oOo-

Stole From Cemetery.

Richard Korth, of Sioux City, has been arrested for stealing lead from various tombstones in the cemetery at LeMars.

-oOo-

Substitute.

Where there's a will, there's a way. When a fire destroyed the heating plant of the Clearfield school, an old threshing engine was driven up beside the school house nad its boiler pressed into service to heat the building.

oOo

Double Killing.

Bert Clayton, of Hamburg, set a spring rat trap one night last week caught two rats simultaneously

Almost Right.

Many years ago, the family physician of Mrs. Caroline Tupper of Nashua told her that she had such a strong heart she would probably "live to be a hundred" She died at 95 last week, a little over four years short of the mark.

-oOo-

Pony Passes.

Death came last week to leave heart aches in the homes of the Ronald and Stanley Sears families at Leon. "Bobby", a 35-year old pony which had been in the family since his colthood days, carried his last earthly burden, went silently on to take up his chores in an equine heaven.

oOo

Couldn't See.

Bayard Shadley of Montezuma woke up one morning last week, found himself in compelte darkness. His sight returned slowly and within an hour he could see as well a ever.

-oOo-

"Unsung" Hero.

Telegraph offices in metropolitan centers usually have a competent singer readily available to deliver the "singing messages" which are received occasionally. At Oskaloosa, telegraph employee Harry Young found himself suddenly called upon to deliver a singing message. After taking a few "trial runs" on his vocal chords in his back office, he called up Mrs. Max Shrago, bravely sang the message sent by her daughter in Chicago.

"Forum".

Every beginning Latin student struggles with the five declensions and different endings. Pupils at Plainfield high school, are learning their Latin by an easier method now that their Latin teacher Elmer Kretzchmar has invented a card game, known as "Forum", in which various cards bear the various Latin endings. The game is played somewhat similar to the old pastime of "Authors", with each pupil trading off crads in order to get a full hand with similar endings. Since knowledge of the various Latin terms is essential to playing the game well, Mr. Kretzchmar hopes it will help his pupils to conquer a troublesome assignment.

-oOo-

To Brazil.

Wayne Hendrick, former Allamkee young man, is now enroute to Brazil by Pan-American airways to take charge of an oil survey. The company which employs him is one organized by another Iowan, Herbert Hoover.

-oOo-

Stopped Train.

Little "Jackie" Schoenenberger, of Peru, wanted to see her granddaddy, who hapens to be a locomotive engineer. Last week she bravely flagged down one of the crack limiteds of the Great Western railroad, apologized to the outraged train officials when she found that her grandfather was not a member of the crew.

-oOo-

Saved Girl.

William Fffle, former Perry boy who is now in the navy, has been cited for bravery for his act in diving into the water to rescue a girl who had jumped from the pier Fortunately for Effle, he does not live in China, where rescuers are held personally and financially responsible for the persons whose lives they save.

THE BIG RUSH OF HOGS TO THE MARKET IS ON

The bulk of the pig crop farrowed in the last half of 1939 is now moving to market at prices well below those of last year.

While a few fall pigs moved to market in March, mid-April saw the big movement started, agricultural economists at Iowa State College point out.

The unfavorable hog-corn ratio is causing home farmers to sell their fall pigs earlier than usual. Other farmers will carry their pigs through the spring on pasture, using very little grain, fattening them up in the summer.

Seasonal Rise

Hog marketings will continue larger than a year earlier through the remainder of the current marketing year Prices, according to the economists, will continue well below those of 1939. A marked change for the better in either domestic or foreign demand probably would have an immediate boosting effect on hog prices. Some seasonal rise in prices is likely this summer, even if demand conditions remain as they are.

Because of the unfavorable hog-corn ratio during the winter months, many farmers probably have not kept as many sows for spring farrow as they indicated they would in last December's pig survey The number and proportion of sows marketed since the first of the year have been above a year ago. As a result the spring pig crop may be smaller than that of last year.

Hog prices are expected to continue well below those of 1938 during the remainder of the current marketing year, because marketings will be larger.

Spare those dry bread crusts! Broken up in the meat grinder and wrapped in wax paper they'll be ready for instant use in dressing, croquettes, meat patties and meat loaf.

were introduced but failed to pass.

For the next 30 years the third-term issue was dormant, mainly because there was a succession of one-term Presidents. But during the administration of Andrew Johnson there were 12 joint resolutions recommending single presidential terms without any action being taken upon them. But in 1875, when it seemed likely that Grant would be a candidate for a third term, William M. Springer of Illinois introduced a resolution in the house.

That in the opinion of this House, the precedent established by Washington and other Presidents of the United States, in retiring from the presidential office after their second term has become, by universal concurrence, a part of our republican system of government, and that any departure from this time-honored custom would be unwise, unpatriotic and fraught with peril to our free institutions.

This resolution was adopted by a vote of 234 to 18, with 38 not voting.

Two years later, after President Hayes in his inaugural address had recommended a constitutional amendment limiting the President to a single term of six years, Springer offered another resolution embodying Hayes' recommendation and other reforms. But no action was taken on the resolution.

The third-term issue remained in the background until 1892, when Grover Cleveland, who had been first elected in 1884 and defeated in 1888, was again elected. Then no less than 13 amendments were introduced in congress to limit the presidential term in various ways.

Again there was a lull of 20 years until 1912 when the house committee on the judiciary submitted a favorable report on a resolution proposing a constitutional amendment limiting the President to a single six-year term but no further action was taken. During this year some 21 such amendments were introduced in the house and in 1913 the senate passed a joint resolution, by a vote of 47 to 23, proposing a similar amendment but the house refused to act upon it.

In 1927 when talk was started about the possibility of Calvin Coolidge seeking re-election, the anti-third term resolutions began to come thick and fast. The first one, offered by Rep. Beck of Wisconsin, a Republican, was practically the same as the Springer resolution of 1875, suggesting a constitutional amendment against a third term. Then Senator LaFollette introduced a similar resolution in the senate.

Resolutions Not Acted Upon.

In the meantime, Representative Fairchild of New York, a Republican, had offered a constitutional amendment that "No person shall be eligible to the office of President who has previously served two terms, whether by election or by succession due to the removal, death, resignation or inability of the President where the term by succession shall have continued for a period of two years or more."

No action was taken on any of these proposals by the Sixty-ninth congress but they came up again in the Seventieth culminating in LaFollette's resolution being reintroduced on January 27, 1928, amended and passed by the senate on February 10 by a vote of 56 to 26. It said:

"Resolved, That it is the sense of the Senate that the precedent established by Washington and other Presidents of the United States in retiring from the presidential office after their second term has become by universal concurrence, a part of our republican system of government, and that any departure from this time-honored custom would be unwise, unpatriotic and fraught with peril to our free institutions."

Tanks Replace Horse Troops On Battlefield

PARIS.—The strange and "impractical" weapon of war invented by British and French officers in 1915-16 has grown into one of the most effective offensive weapons in World War II.

First used in the battle of the Somme almost a quarter century ago, the armored tank is now considered a monster of Mars, capable of spitting death into enemy positions where troops cannot go.

This weapon had its first real test in Germany's "blitzkrieg" against Poland, where massed tanks were sent against enemy emplacements with excellent results.

Modern tanks, looking like armored bugs scuttling across hills, fields and trenches, may vary in size from one to one hundred tons. For heavy offensive work they are protected by armor plate two inches or more in thickness. Other tanks may have only quarter-inch plate.

Some Carry 30 Men.

Their armament runs from machine guns to 105 mm. cannon and they can speed along up to 60 miles an hour on their endless-chain tracks. Crews of the earliest tanks numbered not more than two; today, France's giant tanks sometimes carry 30 men. Each has a specific duty as gunner, mechanic, navigator, control operator or radio man. Such monsters are practically a battleship on land.

Tanks may be used either as mechanized cavalry for "opportunity" offensives or as sheer force weapons for frontal attacks. Some models can swim rivers; others lay their own bridges. Still others carry trailers and lay down smoke screens to shield advancing troops. One of their most effective weapons is a tongue of searing flame which can be thrown up to 50 feet and penetrates inside the gun slits and portholes of pillboxes.

Flank Movements Used.

When used as cavalry the tanks employ wide, swinging movements around the enemy's flanks. These take the form of excursions into his rear areas, attacks and ripostes. For this work light or medium light tanks are needed, organized in small and compact "armored" divisions. Each has its own supporting mechanized artillery and motorized infantry.

Heavy tanks are used for the frontal attack where troops are attempting to break through the enemy's lines. It is in this type of warfare that most furious fighting develops. Large numbers of tanks are needed for such attacks; German experts believe they need 50 to 100 tanks per kilometer of front. Light tanks follow up.

Artillery barrages lay the groundwork for such advances, striving to silence enemy batteries, smashing pillboxes and—most important—putting anti-tank guns out of commission.

Another defensive weapon is the tank barrier, which consists of spiked obstacles penetrating from the ground. These may be concrete blocks, heavy logs or steel rails. In Switzerland, where protective measures are being taken, steel anti-tank barriers are arranged to jump out of emplacements in the highway at the touch of an electric button concealed off the road.

The tankman's job is one of war's toughest and most dangerous. Protected only by steel helmets and earmuffs against the battering, topsy-turvy trip through shell craters and barbed wire barriers, soldiers inside the tank live in an inferno of noise, bruised and battered while the engines roar and enemy bullets spang against the steel sides. Behind them come the soldiers to mop up.

When a tank gets stuck atop a barrier it's time to move on, for soon an anti-tank gun will come along. While bullets whine all around, the crew must scramble out and retreat as best it can; a few seconds later an anti-tank bullet will find the fuel tanks and man's metal monster will explode. Thus each tank ends its career; though lives have been lost and a costly armored weapon has been blown to smithereens, armies at war consider both tank and crew have served their purpose if enough pillboxes were blown out.

HOUSEHOLD QUESTIONS

Sprinkle chopped, candied ginger over thin biscuit dough. Then spread the combination with soft butter. Cut into strips a fourth of an inch wide and two inches long. Bake quickly. Serve hot.

It is better to steam vegetables. Vegetables in boiling lose 30 to 50 per cent of their mineral salts. If steamed only 10 per cent is lost.

Tack several thicknesses of heavy cloth or paper over the corners of the table before covering it with new oilcloth. The recovering job will then be easier and will look much neater.

Try tinting your ice cubes with vegetable dyes. A spring salad, for instance, is delightful to look at and unusually crisp if it is set in a bowl of green ice cubes. Desserts may be worked out in the same way.

Garden makers too often try to sow seeds in the ground just before a rain. This is a mistake for the rain will pack the earth and the moisture will escape. It is far better to plant after a rain and as soon as the ground is dried out sufficiently. Firm the soil over the plants so that the seed will come into close contact with it.

All plants should be sprayed over at least once a week, using clear tepid water. In the ordinary living room there is certain to be considerable dust, no matter how careful the housewife is.

Be careful not to fill baking dishes too full. Escalloped foods, rice puddings and fondues need about two inches of rising space. Foods made with baking powder, soda, cream of tartar or egg whites require at least three inches.

FINDS ROCK OF SOLID MICA WHEN BLASTING LAST THURSDAY

Fred Pannhoff found something quite unusual for this section of the country Thursday afternoon while blasting rock for his brother on the farm northeast of Klemme

After Fred had dynamited a large rock, which he estimated would weigh over a half ton, he looked at a few pieces of the rock and found it was of mica. Examing more of the blasted rock Fred found that the entire rock he had blasted into small pieces was solid mica.

Had Fred made the discovery before blasting the rock, it might have had some commercial value, as mica is quite expensive. A few samples were brought to the Times Office.

Mica is used a great deal in heating stoves, kerosene stoves, etc. as windows for the doors, as mica is not affected by the heat. The rock is also used in manufacturing insulating material.

OLD MOTHER GOOSE AND HER FAMILY TO BE AT SCHOOL HOUSE, MAY 3.

Operetta To Be Presented By Grade Students

Old Mother Goose lost three of her geese just before the annual convention held by her big family of story-book children. As a result, she was late to the meetnig and almost lost her job. In fact, she did lose her job for a while, for her children elected the Old Woman Who Lived in the Shoe to be their mother in her place. They latter see their folly, however, and changed their minds, and for that reason the Klemme Grade School operetta has a happy ending.

Every child in the kindergarten and first four grades has a part in this clever program, and everyone has a special costume. The operetta is under the direction of Miss Potter and Miss Michalek. It will be given Friday evening, May 3, at 8:00 o'clock in the school gymnasium. Admission will be ten cents and twenty-five cents.

ABOUT ONE HUNDRED FARMERS FROM HANCOCK COUNTY ATTEND MEETING

Farmers Meeting At St. Paul Drew Crowd of Over 20,000

An estimated group of over one hundred farmers from Hancock county journeyed to St. Paul Saturday to hear Secretary Wallace speak to a gathering of over twenty thousand in the St. Paul Auditorium.

Secretary Wallace spoke on the proposals for interest rates of 3½ per cent on land bank loans, government guarantees for land bank bonds, and a policy of scaling down of the loans, where necessary, to avoid foreclosure losses

The vast throng of farmers from Iowa, Minnesota, the Dakotas, Illinois, Wisconsin, Nebraska, Kansas, Missouri and other near-by states were enthusiastic and showed approval to Mr. Wallace's agricultural program.

The meeting was sponsored by the National Farmers Union of which M. W. Thatcher is the legislative chairman, was also one of the principal speakers.

Farmers attending the meeting were urged to write to their Congressmen to support the bills outlined by the speakers, and in this way the meeting would have fruitful effect in Washington.

THE BLOW-OUT DANGER

High speeds may be fun but they are dangerous. Many motorists do not realize that high speed coupled with a blow-out, even on a clear road, can cause a fatal accident. The blow-out danger is ever present — even with good tires. So keep possible blow-outs in mind when you are tempted to speed up.

Spring Menus

Planning meals can be fun, if you'll let your imagination and your conscience be your guides! Meal planning does require imagination and a bit of originality, too, if you don't want the responsibility of three meals a day to be a bore, and three meals a day without that touch of "something" different can be boring—to you as well as to your family! A meal may be properly and carefully "balanced" from the standpoint of proteins and carbohydrates and vitamins and minerals—and still be a drab and uninteresting affair.

That seems to be particularly true in spring, when appetites are likely to be jaded, and you seem to be running out of menu ideas. And that's exactly the time to try something different, a little trick to add newness and interest to soups; a tasty and unusual meat dish; and a salad or dessert that makes use of some of the refreshing spring vegetables and fruits.

Just for variety, for instance, when I want to serve hot soup as the first course of a meal, I combine equal parts of canned consomme and tomato juice, simmer the resulting mixture for about 5 minutes with a bay leaf for flavor, and serve it very hot with a spoonful of salted whipped cream sprinkled with chopped chives or green onion tops. And I serve green onions and crisp, succulent radishes in place of the relishes I've used all winter. I use rhubarb for sauce or for dessert, just as soon as the price comes down within reach of my budget; I shred young carrots, or cut them in thin slivers, and cook them with an equal amount of onion, sliced fine; drain them and season with salt, pepper and butter. Or I cook carrots and potatoes together and mash them just as I would for mashed potatoes, to serve with the rich brown gravy of a pot roast.

Here are three spring menus that I like.

Menu No. 1.
Corned Beef Hash Patties
Spring Vegetable Salad
Hot Corn Bread
Rhubarb Dessert

Menu No. 2.
Steak Roll

Cabbage and Green Pepper Salad

Mixed Green Salad
Rhubarb Tarts

Corned Beef Hash Patties.

1 16-ounce can corned beef hash
½ cup chili sauce
8 slices bacon (cut in halves)

Place can of corned beef hash in refrigerator and chill thoroughly. Open can at both ends. Push corned beef hash out of can, slicing it in ½-inch slices. Place slices in buttered baking pan. Place 2 teaspoons chili sauce on top of each slice and top with two half slices of bacon. Bake in a moderately hot oven (400 degrees) for 10 minutes or until corned beef hash slices are thoroughly heated and bacon is crisp.

Johnny Cake or Corn Bread.
(Makes 1 Johnny Cake) or (12 Corn Meal Muffins)

1½ cups yellow (or white) corn meal (uncooked)
½ cup general purpose flour
¼ cup sugar
1 teaspoon salt
¾ teaspoon soda
1½ teaspoons baking
1 egg
1¼ cups sour milk
3 tablespoons butter (melted)

Mix and sift dry ingredients into mixing bowl. Combine beaten egg, sour milk and melted butter and add to dry mixture. Stir lightly and pour into greased shallow pan, muffin tins or corn stick pans. Bake in a hot oven (425 degrees) for 25 minutes.

Steak Roll.
(Serves 6)

1 slice round steak (½ inch thick)
2 tablespoons butter
½ lb. ham (ground)
¼ cup thin cream
1 tablespoon prepared mustard
Salt and pepper
¼ cup bread flour
1 cup canned tomatoes

Wipe steak with damp cloth. Melt butter in frying pan and brush over one side of steak. Mix together the ground ham, cream, and mustard, and spread over buttered side of steak. Roll like a jelly roll and secure with skewers or string. Sprinkle roll with salt and dredge with flour. Saute in remaining butter until golden brown. Remove roll to baking dish. Add tomatoes to fat in skillet and heat to boiling. Pour this tomato mixture over the roll; cover with a lid and bake in a moderately hot oven (350 degrees) for 1½ to 1¾ hours, or until tender.

Chilled Rhubarb Dessert.

For an extra-special fruit dessert try the following: To one pound of rhubarb (cut in ½-inch pieces) add 1 cup sugar, ¼ cup orange juice and 1 tablespoon grated orange rind and cook in a double boiler 30 minutes or until tender. Serve cold.

Rhubarb Cream Tarts.

1 tablespoon butter
2 cups rhubarb (diced)
1¼ cups sugar
2 tablespoons cornstarch
2 eggs (separated)
¼ cup thick sweet cream
⅛ teaspoon salt

Melt butter, add rhubarb, and 1 cup of the sugar. Cook slowly for about 10 minutes or until the rhubarb is soft. Combine remaining fourth-cup of sugar with the cornstarch, the well beaten egg yolks, cream and salt. Add to fruit mixture and cook until thick (about 3 minutes). Pour into bake tart shells. Top with meringue made from the 2 egg whites, beaten stiff, with 4 tablespoons sugar beaten in. Bake in a slow oven (300 degrees) until brown (about 18 minutes).

Chocolate Upside-Down Cake.

1½ cups cake flour
¾ cup granulated sugar
2 teaspoons baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt
1 sq. bitter chocolate (1 oz.)
2 tablespoons butter
½ cup milk
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
½ cup broken nut meats

Topping.

2 tablespoons cocoa
½ cup brown sugar
½ cup granulated sugar
⅛ teaspoon salt
1 cup boiling water

Sift and measure the flour. Then sift flour, ¾ cup granulated sugar, baking powder and salt together into a mixing bowl. Melt together the chocolate and butter; mix with the milk and vanilla. Stir into the dry ingredients. Add nuts and blend thoroughly. Pour into a well-greased deep layer-cake pan.

Topping.—Now mix together the cocoa, brown sugar and the ½ cup granulated sugar and salt. Spread this over the top of the cake batter. Over all pour the cup of boiling water and place in a moderate oven, (350 degrees) to bake 1 hour.

This is a rich chocolate cake with a chocolate sauce underneath. Turn it out for serving. It is best served slightly warm with whipped cream.

Porcupine Meat Balls.
(Serves 6)

1 pound beef (ground)
1½ cups rice (uncooked)
½ cup bacon (diced)
1 tablespoon onion (minced)
1 tablespoon green pepper (chopped)
½ teaspoon salt
1 No 2 can tomatoes

Mix all ingredients thoroughly in order given. Form into small meat balls. Place in greased baking dish and cover with tomatoes. Cover baking dish. Bake approximately 1½ hours in a moderate oven (350 degrees).

CATTLE GRADED ON TWO TESTS

Beef Type Is Rated by Body Measurements.

Two simple body measurements of beef cattle—plus a record of feed consumed by the animal in reaching a certain weight—give the stockman a good picture of the qualities transmitted by the most important member of the herd—the sire. The two measurements are height at withers, and weight or heart girth.

The measurements give the index to carcass quality and the feed record tells how efficiently the animal puts on weight. Together they make a record-of-performance test by which beef herd sires may be "proved." The herd owner knows whether or not the offspring of a "proved" sire are likely to make efficient gains and yield carcasses of good quality.

The greatest drawback for such tests has been the lack of a simple method for determining carcass grades of test animals before slaughter. Only trained cattle graders could do the job.

The two-measurements method, which makes it possible for the farmer to do his own grading on the farm, was devised by Bradford Knapp Jr., animal husbandman of the United States department of agriculture, after studying weights, measurements, and grades of 167 slaughter steers, including Herefords, Shorthorns, Aberdeen-Angus, and steers of dairy breeding. The grade or score as determined by the two measurements for the most part tallied with the grade given the same animals by two competent graders.

New Poultry-Keeper Needs Proper Start

There are three economically sound ways to get started in modern poultry keeping.

The first and probably the most efficient method of getting started is to buy day-old chicks from a recommended source during the early spring months. This involves the least capital expenditure for stock, permits the beginner to obtain valuable experience while raising the chicks, and gives him time to acquire the information that will be needed to handle layers in the fall. The disadvantage of this method is that, aside from sale of surplus cockerels as broilers, there will be little income until the pullets mature to the egg laying stage, which they will reach at about 24 weeks of age.

The second method is to purchase ready-to-lay pullets during the later summer or early fall months. This usually means an increased capital investment, but does provide for almost immediate income.

The third method is to purchase adult breeding stock in limited numbers at any desired time, and then from this stock produce chicks in season. The advantage of this method is that one may buy few but very high quality breeders and from a relatively small investment soon build up required numbers, gaining much in experience during the process.

Bang's Disease Cure Is Still to Be Found

Recently a national farmer's magazine contained an article quoting a chemist who had just returned from Switzerland, and who told about a powder used in that country to "cure" cattle infected with Bang's disease.

Dr. C. P. Fitch, of the University of Minnesota, says that "miraculous new medicines to cure and prevent Bang's disease" have been bobbing up frequently for many years. But it is very unfortunate, Fitch said, that so much attention should be paid to a remedy that is not known and has not been proved effective by reliable experiments.

"I am not familiar with the particular compound referred to in that article. I am, however, familiar with the veterinary literature from Switzerland. I know that there has been no mention made of any discovery of a cure for Bang's disease. To the best of our knowledge at the present time there isn't any cure for this disease.

"The nature of Bang's disease is such that it is quite easy to be mistaken in regard to so-called cures. In my judgment it is a mistake to encourage people to believe that there are cures for this disease until they have been definitely proved by competent investigators."

Blister Ailing Horses

Blisters are the best remedies for curbs, wingdalls, spavins, and similar disorders of horses A common blistering ointment for horses may be made of half an ounce of Spanish flies, an ounce of oil of turpentine, and four ounces of hog lard. Another good one may be made by thoroughly mixing two ounces of Spanish flies, with half an ounce of oil of origanum, one ounce of oil of turpentine, two ounces of hog lard, and four ounces of common tar.

That Third Term

Washington Wouldn't Take It, But He Didn't Oppose the Idea

Tom Jefferson on the Other Hand Was Dead Set Against It; 'Old Hickory' Jackson a Single Six-Year Term; Hayes Indorsed It.

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the second in a series of three articles tracing the development in American history of the third term issue. What did Washington think about it? Jefferson? Andrew Jackson and others? The following article, especially pertinent during the present election year, is presented as a strictly impartial review of the third term subject, taking no stand for or against it.

II. PRECEDENTS AND VIEWS OF THE PRESIDENTS

IF YOU are opposed to the idea of any President seeking to have more than eight years in the White House, the chances are that you will cite the case of George Washington as your strongest argument.

"The father of our country declined to run for a third term. So why depart from the precedent which he established?" you will ask.

If, however, you believe that there is no real objection to having a Chief Executive serve more than two terms, you will also turn to the first President. You will point out that Washington retired after two terms not because he was opposed to a President serving more than eight years but because he was worn out with the labors in the service of the nation and looked forward to a peaceful old age at Mount Vernon.

Differed With Jefferson.

More than that you will quote this letter which Washington wrote to Lafayette on April 28, 1788:

"Though I cannot have time or room to sum up the arguments in this letter, there cannot, in my judgment, be the least danger that the President will by any practicable intrigue ever be able to continue himself one moment in office, much less perpetuate himself in it, but in the last stage of corrupt morals and practical depravity, and even then there is as much danger that any species of domination would prevail. Though when a people have become incapable of governing themselves and fit for a master, it is of little consequence from what quarter he comes. Under any extended view of this part of the subject I can see no propriety in precluding ourselves from the services of any man who in some great emergency shall be deemed universally most capable of serving the public."

The President who, even more than Washington, established the "no third term" tradition was Thomas Jefferson. Writing to Washington on May 2, 1788, in regard to the new Constitution, the "Sage of Monticello" expressed his dissatisfaction with "the perpetual re-eligibility of the President," because he feared that it would "make an office for life." So he said he hoped that "before there is danger of this change taking place in the office of President the good sense and free spirit of our countrymen will make the change necessary to prevent it."

Thomas Jefferson

Toward the close of his second term in office, when the legislatures of Vermont, New Jersey and Pennsylvania sent him resolutions asking him to be a candidate again, Jefferson replied to all of them with a letter which contained this paragraph:

"That I should lay down my charge at a proper period is as much a duty as to have borne it faithfully. If some termination to the services of the Chief Magistrate be not fixed by the Constitution, or supplied by practice, his office, nominally, four years, will in fact become for life, and history shows how easily that degenerates into an inheritance. Believing that a representative government responsible at short periods of election is that which produces the greatest sum of happiness to mankind, I feel it a duty to do no act which shall essentially impair that principle, and I should unwillingly be the person who, disregarding the sound precedent set by an illustrious predecessor (Washington) should furnish the first example of prolongation beyond the second term of office."

During "Old Hickory" Jackson's first administration, he sent a message to congress in 1829 recommending that the electoral college be abolished, that the President be elected by direct vote and that he be limited to a single term of either four or six years. Five years later he sent another message to congress which contained this paragraph:

"All the reflection I have made upon the subject increases my conviction that the best interests of the country will be promoted by the adoption of some plan which will secure in all contingencies that important right of sovereignty to the direct control of the people. Could this be attained, and the terms of those officers be limited to a single period of either four or six years, I think our liberties would possess an additional safeguard."

Jackson's recommendation of a single six-year term for Presidents was echoed 40 years later when Rutherford B. Hayes in his inaugural address said, "In furtherance of the reform we seek, and in other important respects a change of great importance, I recommend an amendment to the Constitution prescribing a term of six years for the presidential office and forbidding a re-election."

In 1901 indiscreet friends of President McKinley began talking about his becoming a candidate again. Thereupon the President promptly scotched that talk by issuing a public statement in which he said:

"I regret that the suggestion of a third term has been made. I doubt whether I am called upon to give it notice, but there are now questions of the gravest importance before the administration and the country, and their just consideration should not be prejudiced in the public mind by even the suspicion of the thought of a third term. In view . . . of a long-settled conviction . . . I will not be a candidate for a third term . . .

The candidacy of Theodore Roosevelt on the Bull Moose ticket in 1912 revived agitation over a third term. One of the planks in the platform, adopted by the Democrats at Baltimore, favored a single presidential term and urged the adoption of an amendment to the Constitution, making the President ineligible for re-election and pledging their candidate to this principle. A short time before the inauguration of Woodrow Wilson, the senate passed a joint resolution proposing a constitutional amendment limiting the President to a single six-year term. While this resolution was pending in the house, Mr. Wilson wrote a letter to A. Mitchell Palmer, a representative from Pennsylvania, as follows:

"The question is simply this: Shall our Presidents be free, so far as the law is concerned, to seek a second term of four years, or shall they be limited by constitutional amendment to a single term of four years or to a single term extended to six years?

Admitted His Quandary.

"Four years is too long a term for a President who is not the true spokesman of the people, who is imposed upon and does not lead. It is too short for a President who is doing, or attempting a great work of reform, and who has not had time to finish it. To change the term to six years would be to increase the likelihood of its being too long without any assurance that it would, in happy cases, be long enough. A fixed constitutional limitation to a single term of office is highly arbitrary and unsatisfactory from every point of view.

Woodrow Wilson

Favored Two Terms.

"Put the present customary limitation of two terms into the Constitution, if you do not trust the people to take care of themselves, but make it two terms (not one, because four years is often too long), and give the President a chance to win the full service by proving himself fit for it. . . . .

"As things stand now the people might more likely be cheated than served by further limitations of the President's eligibility. His fighting power in their behalf would be immensely weakened. No one will fear a President except those whom he can make fear the elections.

"We singularly belie our own principles by seeking to determine by fixed constitutional provision what the people shall determine for themselves and are perfectly competent to determine for themselves. We cast a doubt upon the whole theory of popular government."

Walled Kremlin Holds Secrets Of Red Regime

MOSCOW.—Soviet Russia is ruled from within the mysterious city in the heart of Moscow, the vast Kremlin where inscrutable goings-on are hidden behind a 60-foot wall, armed guards and drawn curtains.

All the secrecy of the ancient ished Russian Orthodox church—and more—is protected inside this palace which was once the heart of the Czar's religion as well as her government.

Where Russia's monks and Czars once walked there is now the measured tread of Soviet commissars. Moscow today, as before Communism, is the "sacred city of the Kremlin" and the focal point of all Russia.

They used to say "Above Moscow is only the Kremlin and above the Kremlin is only Heaven." But in atheistic Russia ignores the latter part.

Stalin Lives There.

No outsider knows within the Kremlin's innumerable walls lives Josef Stalin, for rarely is the visitor who finds himself inside this city's gates. Once there he will find the church of Constantine, Nicholas palace, the monastery (now a military museum and barracks), a convent and a court of justice. Surmounting the walls are no less than 19 towers.

PRETTY, PLEASE!—Joseph Stalin, Soviet dictator, emerges from the mysterious Kremlin to face the Communist camera from the tribune of Lenin's mausoleum in Red Square, Moscow.

which Soviet guards keep the crowds peeled for marauders lurking in the Red square below.

Just as the Kremlin was a stronghold for Czarists, so has it become the sacred city of Communism, the place where men of that creed from all parts of the world niches along its outer walls the ashes of "revolutionary heroes" including John Reed, the American journalist who turned Red Russia, there is the "brotherhood grave" of 500 workers killed trying to storm the Kremlin during the revolution.

Lenin Buried in Red Square.

And out in Red square, directly within the shadow of the Kremlin, stands the gaudy tomb of Lenin from which Stalin and other Soviets customarily watch the parades and demonstrations and parades.

Night brings an added air of mystery to the Kremlin. At nine o'clock its chimes peal forth the "Internationale," Communism's song, and the notes come haltingly because the chimes were originally designed to play "God Save the Czar." They have never been rebuilt. When the chimes were still in pretty good shape they made a phonograph recording which is now broadcast nightly from Moscow.

In winter the blood-red walls are floodlighted atop the Kremlin, presenting a sharp and startling contrast with the snow-covered ground. It was this symbol of Communism that the diplomats of Germany saw when they entered the Kremlin in autumn to sign that epochal pact which sent Hitler to war against Poland and the allies.

Finland's diplomats saw the hammer and sickle emblem last December and again in March, when the Soviet Bear's juggernaut closed its conquest of the smaller but braver neighbor.

Known to be located inside the Kremlin, therefore, is the nerve center, integral part of Viacheslav Molotov's foreign affairs commissariat, although the foreign office is actually opposite the Lubyanka prison, is the politbureau of nine members who rule in the Kremlin as does the council of people's commissars, or cabinet, of Russian cabinet.

Stalin has always been accessible when noted foreign diplomats have called at the Kremlin, but he does not stay there all the time. He maintains several country homes, though nobody knows which one he is visiting at any given time.

Perhaps it is the Kremlin's sinister ening atmosphere that makes visiting envoys capitulate to Russian demands, yet Stalin himself is said to be affable. It is known that after the Soviet-German pact was signed last autumn he remarked to Joachim von Ribbentrop, "Now let's drink a glass of our bad Soviet champagne."

other attraction to visitors be the little cottage on the er of Charles and Lewis streets. For this was the home of Mary Ball Washington from March, 1775, until August, 1789.

The property once occupied the whole square with orchard and garden, kitchen and servants' quarters. It was bought by Washington in September, 1772, from Michael and Esther Robinson and was a part of the original Kenmore estate. The garden was separated from the Kenmore garden by a fence and gate and there was a box walk, a part of which is still standing.

At the outbreak of the Revolution Washington tried to induce his mother to move in town from her home on the Rappahannock, opposite Fredericksburg. But it was not until March, 1775, that she was persuaded.

It was here that she received the courier sent by General

MARY BALL WASHINGTON
(From the disputed painting by Middleton)

Washington to tell her of the victory at Trenton. It was here Washington came after the Battle of Yorktown with the French and American officers, and she received him with thanksgiving after his absence of nearly seven years. It was here he came in December 1783. Fredericksburg gave the Peace ball in his honor, and it was at that time that he made his memorable reply to Mayor McWilliams in which he spoke of Fredericksburg as "the place of my growing infancy."

LaFayette's Tribute.

It was here that Marquis de LaFayette came to pay his respects to her who was the mother of the greatest American. She received him in her garden, met all his fine phrases with dignity and gave him her blessing when he bade her good-by. He said, "I have seen the only Roman matron of my day."

It was here March 12, 1789, that Washington came to bid a sad farewell after he had received the notice that he had been elected President of the new nation. With prayers and tears Mary Washington and her son parted, knowing they would never meet again.

She died August 25, 1789. Town and country assembled to do honor at her burial. Her remains lie in a spot she herself selected on the Kenmore estate and a stately monument "erected by her countrywomen" marks her last resting place.

But for all such historic sites which Fredericksburg has, it will not be the only city in the Old Dominion to attract those who enjoy seeing places "where the past still lives." More than 80 historic homes and gardens throughout the state will be thrown open to visitors this year. Among them are eight homes in which once lived Virginians who became Presidents of the United States.

Home of the Lees.

Featured in the Garden week pilgrimage this year will be nine estates and shrines under foundation or other public ownership, where gardens or grounds have been restored by and at the expense of the Garden Club of Virginia. The principal one of these properties is Stratford, in Westmoreland county, where two signers of the Declaration of Independence and Gen. Robert Edward Lee were born.

Here the Garden Club of Virginia has completed the restoration of the Lee gardens at a cost of $50,000.

Another as important, but whose gardens are not as yet completely restored, although well under way, is the Thomas Jefferson garden at Monticello, near Charlottesville. The Thomas Jefferson Memorial foundation has restored the house and many outbuildings and refurnished with original Jefferson pieces this magnificent and distinctive mansion.

Last year the Garden Club of Virginia began the job of restoring the Jefferson gardens, from plans discovered only recently. The outlines of the garden were discovered by archeological investigations and will occupy the exact location that they did originally. Jefferson's gardens were distinctive, for only native trees, shrubs and plants were used.

Other properties for which the Garden Club of Virginia has done restoration include: the Victorian garden of the Manse, at Staunton, birthplace of T. Woodrow Wilson; the Mary Washington monument at Fredericksburg, over her grave; the Bruton church at Williamsburg, which will be the center of a celebration this year in honor of its complete restoration; the memorial garden at Lee chapel in Lexington; the groups of Wilton, famous Colonial restoration of historical organizations at Richmond; and the Rolfe property, in Surry county, the grounds of which were given by the Indian chief, Powhatan, to the son of his daughter, Pocahontas and Sir John Rolfe, in Colonial times.

Plantation Homes.

Other estates to be shown will include the famous James River plantation belt homes, extending for more than a hundred miles along the James. Most recent of these restorations is Berkeley, birthplace of President William Henry Harrison. Seven estates in various sections of Virginia, never before opened, are to be shown this year, including ancient Elsing Green on the Pamunkey, one of the most important of the Colonial Virginia manor houses, and owned by a signer of the Declaration of Independence.

Twenty-one places in restored Williamsburg will be opened to the public. The great tobacco plantations of Southside Virginia form another group.

Piedmont Virginia is offering a group of boxwood gardens and famous old homes of unusual distinction, including the places of President James Madison, two James Monroe homes and two estates in which Thomas Jefferson spent his life. Two score other places of great interest, several of them nationally famous, are to be opened.

JUDGE DUDLEY S. VALENTINE of the Los Angeles Superior court conducted an important trial recently—not in court, however, and the judge wore overalls instead of his judicial robes.

The issue at stake was whether or not he still retained his skill as a locomotive engineer. The scene was a movie location set, and the stars of "Torrid Zone" comprised the jury. It seems that years ago the judge was a railway engineer, and when he learned that an old-time locomotive would be run over its own private track on the movie location, the jurist accepted the invitation of the location manager—also a former engineer—to put the train through its paces.

With Pat O'Brien and Andy Devine in the cab, His Honor took the driver's seat, tugged the whistle cord and opened the throttle. He made the two-mile run in six minutes flat, cheered on by his two passengers.

Los Angeles is noted as being one of the athletic centers of the country, but when Ona Munson (the "Belle Watling" of "Gone With the Wind," and the "Lorelei" of radio's "Big Town,") landed out there she couldn't find any women to play squash with her. She is an avid squash fan, so she advertised in a newspaper for feminine partners, and received no replies. But Ona didn't let that stop her. She was determined to play squash—and play squash she does, with men. The Men's University Club in Hollywood has an ironclad rule—"No Women Allowed." She's an exception. She's admitted, to play squash—but on Sundays only.

ISAIAH GIVES GOD'S INVITATION

LESSON TEXT—Isaiah 55:1-11.
GOLDEN TEXT—Seek ye the Lord while he may be found, call ye upon him while he is near.—Isaiah 55:6.

Thirsty? A thousand signboards will tell you what to drink to refresh yourself. Most of the suggestions are there only to get your money, and often their proffered lift is a push downward and their refreshment is only a prelude to destruction. But they do declare that thirst is universally present. Throughout the Bible thirst is used to express man's need of and longing for God. He is a spiritual being made in the likeness and image of God and intended for fellowship with Him. Never will he be fully satisfied until he comes to God and meets his hunger and thirst with that "which is good."

The invitation of Isaiah is presented under the figure of a purchase, "Come ye, buy." In carrying out that thought we suggest that there are four steps in buying and using anything.

I. Listen (v. 1).

"Ho, everyone that thirsteth." This is as Spurgeon says "the cry of a salesman at a fair." Amid the confusing sounds and disturbing sights surrounding his customer the salesman must make himself known and catch the interest of his customer. The latter must listen to the offer and the recommendation of the things for sale.

This is an unusual offer. Isaiah invites the buyer to make his purchase "without money and without price." Does that mean that the thing for sale is cheap or worthless? Far from it, for it is priceless. Salvation is free for the sinner, but it cost God the price of His only begotten Son. It is because Jesus paid the price of redemption that we may have it freely without cost.

II. Compare (vv. 2-5).

A good shopper compares values lest he make a bad bargain or buy that for which he has no real need. What is the situation of the one who is invited to buy what God offers? He is a sinner who has been foolishly seeking to satisfy himself with what the world has to offer. With money he has tried to buy happiness, contentment, recognition. The bread of this world will never satisfy and the water of this world only increases one's thirst. (See John 4: 13, 14.)

Compare what God has to offer, "that which is good," that which delights the soul (v. 2). Here is life (v. 3) assured by the promise of One who made an "everlasting covenant" with David, assuring him of His "sure mercies." It results in ultimate glory (v. 5).

The one who honestly makes such a comparison is quickly satisfied that the time has come to

III. Buy (vv. 6-9).

Penniless, the sinner may "buy" without money. He may call upon God, for God has already called him. He may seek God, because He like the good shepherd has been out seeking the lost sheep (Matt. 18:12).

While man can certainly not save himself, there are things which God expects the sinner to do. First, he is to "seek the Lord." Where? Right at your side, sinner, for "he is near" (v. 6). Then when the sinner meets the Lord he is at once conscious of his sin. What shall he do with it? Forsake it in both thought and deed (v. 7) and God will "abundantly pardon." Observe that men may by their sinful rejection of Him bring themselves to the place where they not only do not listen to God's call, but actually do not want to hear it. "Seek ye the Lord while he may be found" (v. 6).

IV. Enjoy (vv. 10, 11).

Some foolish folk buy things and put them away where neither they nor anyone else can enjoy them. Some worry so much about the price they paid or are so concerned about the preciousness of the thing purchased that they find no pleasure in using it.

Salvation is not a thing to be hidden or put on a shelf. In fact, it is not a thing at all, but a life. It is to grow, to bud, to blossom and to bear fruit. How? By being ready to receive God's Word which comes down like the rain from the heavens, refreshing, encouraging, and fructifying the life of the believer.

God's Word never returns to Him void. He prospers it to accomplish His own purpose. But pray tell me, if we never study it or even read it, how can it help our lives? We "grow in grace" only as we grow "in the knowledge of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ" (II Pet. 3:18) We grow in knowledge as we study God's Word. Thus we come to enjoy our Christian life.

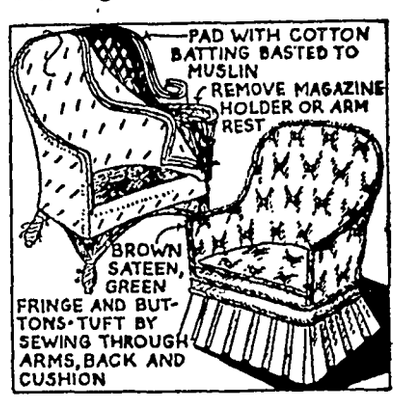
There came also a multitude out of the cities round about unto Jerusalem, bringing sick folks, and them which were vexed with unclean spirits and they were healed every one —Acts 5:16

The Rescue of an Old Wicker Chair

By RUTH WYETH SPEARS

THIS chair, now so smart in its sateen cover, button tufting and moss fringe trimming, barely escaped the trash burner. It had been such a comfortable chair that everyone hated to see it go. Sis said it was out-of-date and positively untidy. Someone suggested it might be covered. Mother



PAD WITH COTTON BATTING BASTED TO MUSLIN
REMOVE MAGAZINE HOLDER OR ARM REST
BROWN SATEEN, GREEN FRINGE AND BUTTONS TUFT BY SEWING THROUGH ARMS, BACK AND CUSHION

said that wouldn't be a bad idea if it could be padded first! That gave Sis a brain wave. Why not tuft it? By pushing a long darning needle back and forth through the cover, padding and openings in the wicker? She had been wanting a tufted chair, so work began at once.

The sagging arm rest, magazine holder and frayed-out wicker around the legs were removed. The chair was padded and covered, as shown, and a new seat cushion was added. The tufting was done by sewing through tightly with heavy carpet thread; adding a button on each side of the stitch.

Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as Nature intended—fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery.

KLEMME—"LITTLE BUT BEAUTIFUL" . . . .

The lighted highway sign west of Klemme reads: "Klemme—Little But Lively." That is a good slogan and quite true in every way, but right now the sign should be changed to read "Klemme, Little But Beautiful."

The past week or two, Klemme residents have been more than busy cleaning up their yards and getting everything looking shipshape. Everyone here seems to strive to do his or her part in making Klemme beautiful.

Klemme has long been noted for its well-kept yards and gardens, and well planted and maintained property. A little paint every year, and a bit of extra effort in the yards all help to keep the town looking clean and tidy.

DAY LIGHT SAVING TIME FOR THE EAST . . . .

Day Light Saving Time went into effect Sunday at 2 00 o'clock a. m. for many of the eastern cities as well as states. Clocks were turned back one hour to remain that way until Sept. 29 when Standard Time will again go into effect.

The idea is that workers will go on the job one hour earlier and thus have one hour more of daylight in the afternoon.

As far as we Iowans are concerned to heck with saving daylight . . we have plenty of it out here and if we run short we just use some of the darkness to finish our tasks. We can't be bothered with saving daylight!

But it sure does mess up radio programs that originate in the East . . . they are all one hour earlier according to our time.

Seems like the young people out here in Iowa could use more night-time, instead of saving daytime! They would favor a scheme to get more night and longer hours in the morning to catch up on sleep.

AN IDEA!

Bill Hillman, European manager for Collier's, says that the removal of 12 statesmen and leaders would bring peace to Europe. In other words he sees the wrong people in the wrong spots. And this column is with him. Assuming it to be impossible to give the hook to Hitler, Stalin and Chamberlain just now, this department nominates for the other nine places of power the following men: George S. Kauffman, Al Smith, Mahatma Gandhi, Olsen and Johnson, Anthony Eden, Bugs Baer, and Walt Disney. Imagine such a group in complete charge of Europe for a week . . . everything would be settled peacefully, and with even Adolf, Joe and Neville joining in the laughter.

Neville Chamberlain says Hitler "missed the bus." It wasn't so much a miss. What he did was to take the Chinatown bus instead of the one that would carry him straight to work.

PATTERN DEPARTMENT
SEWING CIRCLE

THE shirtwaister is always an excellent choice for those of you who want to look slimmer than the scales imply, and this one (1905-B) is designed to look especially slenderizing. The paneled skirt is slim-hipped and almost straight. The plain front of the bodice continues the line of the skirt panel, to give a lengthening effect. The shoulders are squared out, but not gathered, and the fullness under the shoulder yoke takes care of correct fit over the bust.

A smart double-collar effect finishes the deep v of the neckline —and you can wear the dress merely with its self collar, if you like. A classic style like this makes up nicely in such street materials as spun rayon or flat crepe, and in linen or chambray to wear around the house. It's one of those comfortable patterns that you'll repeat many times.

Barbara Bell Pattern No. 1905-B is designed for sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48, 50 and 52. Size 38 requires 4⅞ yards of 39-inch material; ⅔ yard contrasting. Send order to:

Stranger Was Quick to Acknowledge Introduction

The clergyman in a wayside church out of London was about to start his sermon when three strangers entered.

They were late and very conscious of it. One of them found a seat near the door, but the other two had to walk further up.

At that moment the preacher was finishing the announcement of his text "—and Paul I know, but who are ye?"

The young men paused for a moment, looked bewildered, then one of them spoke up. "Glad to have the pleasure, Reverence," he said. "This is Harry MacTavish from Edinburgh, and I'm James MacPherson, from Edinburgh, too.

SAYS HOG PRODUCERS ARE EXPERIENCING HEAVY SPRING PIG LOSSES

DES MOINES—R. L. Pemberton, Iowa Swine Producers' Association field secretary, said Wednesday that hog producers depending on February and March pigs for their 1940 spring crop "are experiencing heavy spring pig losses."

Pemberton said hog flu, coughs and other disorders have caused the excessive losses of pigs this spring.

He attributed much of the loss to the cool, damp, cloudy weather of the last few months. Pigs have been kept in close quarters where it was impossible for them to obtain the proper amount of exercise, he explained.

A little lemon juice sprinkled on greens will add to their taste appeal.

DON'T PASS ON HILLS

Some of the worst accidents involving two, three, and even four cars at high speeds, have been caused by drivers trying to pass on a hill or curve. The best drivers are helpless in such a situation. Iowa's traffic laws are strict on this point. Play safe. Don't try to pass unless you can see all of the roadway ahead.

DRIVE AGAINST UNLICENSED MOTORISTS IS INTENSIFIED

DES MOINES—Iowa highway patrolmen last week were commanded to intensify the drive against unlicensed drivers, because of the number of those without driver's licenses who figured in fatal accidents.

"In 1939," Chief C. A. Knee said, "there were 500 residents of Iowa driving motor vehicles that were involved in fatal accidents, and of this number 58 did not have Iowa operator's or chauffeur's licenses."

"In other words, 11.6 per cent of the Iowa residents involved in fatal accidents did not have Iowa operator's or chauffeur's licenses."

In the first three months of 1940 130 Iowa residents were involved in fatal accidents, and of this number 16 did not have a driver's license.

"This means that 12.3 per cent of the Iowa drivers involved in fatal accidents in this period were operating in violation of the motor vehicle laws," Chief Knee continued.

"Undoubtedly, many of these unlicensed drivers were incompetent drivers. We need a more strict enforcement relative to this point."

The Baccalaureate Service this year will be held in the Klemme Reformed Church, with Rev. Calvin Grosshuesch delivering the sermon. It is at this service that the Seniors make their first appearance in caps and gowns.

Class Day exercises this year will be combined with the annual school exhibit and home economics style show. The date of this double event is Tuesday evening, May 14. Making this combination cuts down the number of events at the end of the school year and provides a full evening's entertainment instead of the usual short prgoram put on by the Seniors alone.

Commencement Night is Thursday, May 16. The speaker this year is James W. Fay, Emmetsburg attorney, who is rated as one of the best speakers in North Iowa. Mr. Fay's hobby is helping young people through college, and the proceeds of his addresses are put into a fund for that purpose. He is greatly interested in amateur athletics and is vice-president of the Iowa Association of the Amateur Athletic Union. He recently presided as toastmaster at a father-and-son banquet in Charles City at which Nile Kinnirk was the guest of honor.

Friday, May 17, is picnic day. Members of the Senior class will canvass the town during the coming week for the needed food donations. Country students will volunteer similar contributions from their families. In spite of both of these methods, many will be missed, but no one should stay at home. It is a community affair and everyone is welcome. People who are missed in the solicitation should come and bring a covered dish or call at the school to see what is still needed.

Following are members of this year's Senior class: Margie Blumer, Wayne Buseman, Winton Etchen, Dorance Grange, Hazel Harson, Dwaine Johnson, Marvin Lemke, Marie Schmidt, Howard Schoenwetter, Raymond Swalve, Elsie Thiemann, Elsie Ward and Marian Waterman.

Dorance Grange is president of the class; Marie Schmdit is vice-president; and Marian Waterman is secreary-treasurer.

Elsie Ward, the valedictorian, and Howard Schoenwetter, the salutatorian, will give their adresses commencement night.

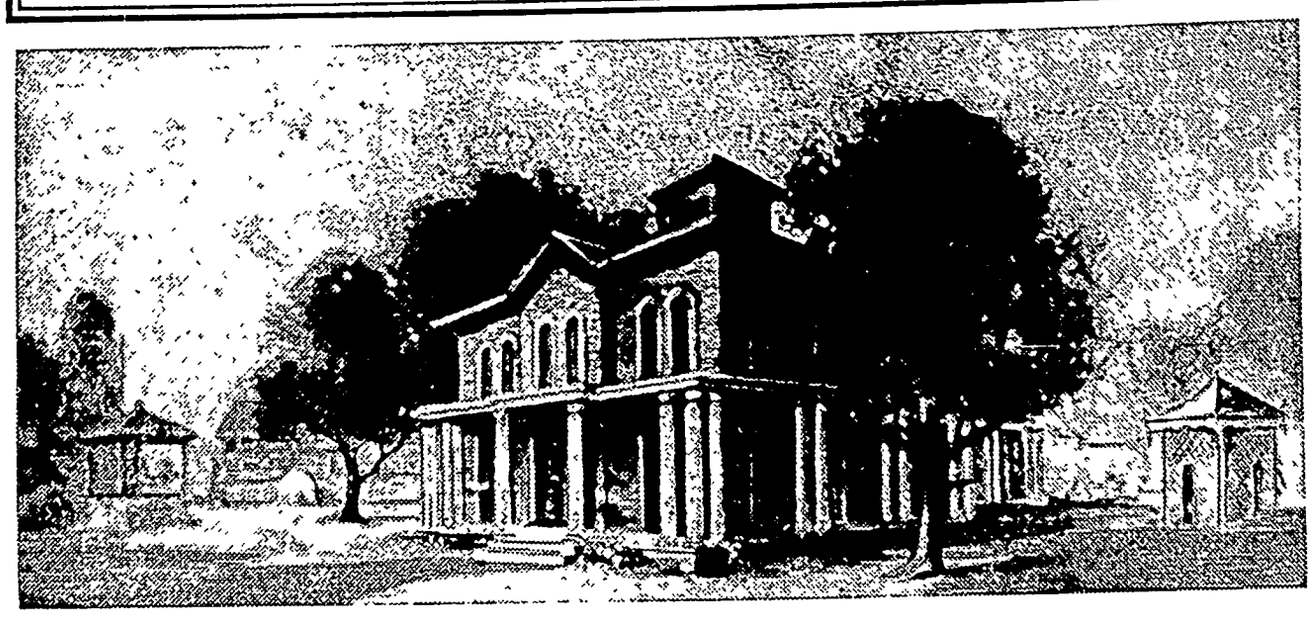
Honor Memory of a Country Girl Who Founded America's First Settlement House in the Slums of a Great City



Hull-House as it looked in the year of its founding, 1889.

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

ONCE upon a time a little girl from the country watched some children playing in the dirty, narrow streets that criss-crossed the "shanty town" of one of Illinois' thriving industrial centers, whereupon she said to her father beside her in the carriage, "When I grow up I'm going to have a big house with a big yard and I'm going to ask all those children to come over and play."

"That's a fine plan, Jenny," her father agreed. "I hope you will carry it out some day." And she did, for that little girl was six-year-old Jane Addams who, 23 years later, founded Chicago's Hull-House, America's first and for 50 years world-famous settlement.

Although Hull-House is, after the stockyards, a Chicago visitor's first stopping place, Jane Addams is remembered for more than Hull-House. Her efforts in behalf of laboring men and women throughout the state and the nation, and for world peace combine with her Hull-House work to earn her top ranking in the field of social science and, as a scientist, she is to be honored with a commemorative postage stamp.

The Jane Addams stamp, one of the "Famous Americans" series, is having its first day of sale on April 26 at the Hull-House post office, Chicago's first subpostal station and where Miss Addams served as postmistress for 38 years.

Golden Jubilee Celebration.

This first day sale of the Jane Addams stamp opens a month-long celebration of the settlement's golden jubilee. In that celebration, Hull-House neighbors from along Chicago's crowded Halsted street will join with the city's civic leaders and with many of the nation's best-known men and women. At its climax, on May 23, members of the 18 nationality groups the settlement now serves will hold a neighborhood fiesta, to be followed by a national broadcast, with Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia of New York city, Gerard Swope, former president of the General Electric company and new chairman of the New York Housing authority, and President Robert Maynard Hutchins of the University of Chicago, as speakers.

Thus, America will pay tribute to the country-bred girl who devoted her life and the small fortune left her by her prosperous miller-father to the alleviation of hardship and suffering and to teaching the principles of democracy among the immigrant poor of the nation's second largest city.

Jane Addams was born on September 6, 1860, in the little village of Cedarville, six miles northwest of Freeport, Ill. In September, 1877, just after her seventeenth birthday she entered Rockford seminary.

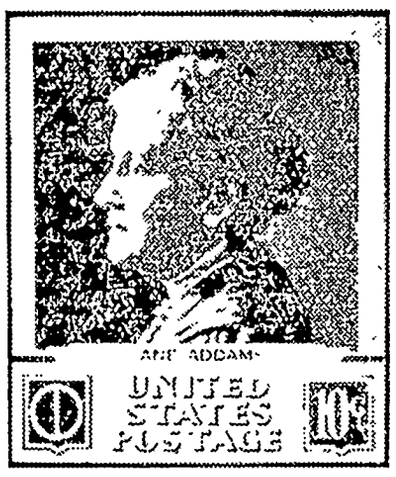
In her freshman Latin class, Jane Addams met Ellen Gates Starr. Emotional Ellen, always close to laughter or to tears, and calm Jane were to be life-long friends. It was to Ellen that Jane first told her plans to find a house among Chicago's poor and settle down to be a good neighbor there, and it was Ellen who cried, "Why, Jeannie, how splendid! I'll live with you. We'll do it together."

But that was many years later. During her college days, Jane, a brilliant and popular student, was planning to study medicine and to become a doctor and work among the poor. After her graduation she enrolled at the Woman's Medical college in Philadelphia. Just as she was finishing her summer vacation and planning her trip East, her father died. It was a cruel blow to Jane, but she determined to carry out her plan, so the family moved to Philadelphia. The nervous shock of her father's death brought on an old illness and she spent the spring in a hospital. Doctors recommended an ocean voyage, so Jane and Mrs. Addams sailed for Europe, where they stayed for two years.

But Jane did not visit only art galleries and ruins on her tour of Europe. In London, she went into the East End slums and watched the hungry and homeless battle for rotting vegetables and fish in the Saturday night auction which disposed of food too spoiled to be saved for the Monday market.

Growing deep within her was a burning desire to be of service to humanity, although she knew by now that she could not endure the rigors of a medical course. Having returned to the United States, Jane set out again two years later for another visit to Europe. This time, she met her friend Ellen Gates Starr and they toured together.

On her way home, Jane Addams visited Toynbee Hall, established in London as a memorial to Arnold Toynbee, the Oxford tutor who had died at 31, worn out by his work for social reforms. Here came the little milliners, the furniture polishers and clerks, and the silk weavers of East London. Young university men lived at the hall and taught them French or carpentry, music or shorthand, boxing or literature. There were a library, an athletic field and a hall for parties.



The Old Hull Mansion.

Jane Addams wanted the same thing for herself in the midst of the poor in an American city, and, in the spring of 1889, she went to Chicago to look for a place for her "house." On Chicago's West Side, in a colorful patchwork of races — Italians, Russian and Polish Jews, Bohemians and Irish, Scandinavians and Rumanians, Germans, Swiss, French and French Canadians—she found the old Hull mansion, at Polk and Halsted streets.

A furniture factory was using the first floor for storage and the second floor was let to lodgers who thought the attic was haunted. Jane and Ellen rented the whole second floor and a part of the first, and set a corps of carpenters, plasterers and paperhangers to work to make it livable. Jane spent all the savings from her income of the legacy left her by her father and Ellen donated the remains of her teacher's salary.

The night of September 14, 1889, was the first they spent in the house. There were three of them, Jane and Ellen and motherly Mary Keyser, who came to do the housekeeping and ended by caring for half the neighbor children. Going to market, Miss Keyser invited the wives of the butcher, the baker and the saloonkeeper to tea, and they came, first out of curiosity and again out of liking.

Then the girls from the furniture factory were supper guests and decided they would like to have a class in literature. So people began to trickle in and tell around that the young ladies treated them well. They didn't seem to want anything out of you but just to be sociable and to give you a good time, and perhaps to teach you something.

Tired mothers heard about the house and left their babies when they went to work, black-eyed girls with gold hoops in their ears shyly asked to play the piano for dancing. Soon Jane Addams and Ellen Starr were deep in the stream of neighborhood life, dressing new babies and closing the eyes of the dead.

Higher Civic and Social Life.

When this neighborhood venture was incorporated, some time later, the charter gave the objects of incorporation as follows: "To provide a center for a higher civic and social life; to institute and maintain educational and philanthropic enterprises and to investigate and improve the conditions of the industrial districts of Chicago."

Those "objects" are put, whether by accident or design, in the chronological order in which they had appeared. It was to provide a center for social life that the young women rented the old mansion. When within two weeks a dozen young women of the neighborhood were invited to a "reading party" in the evening and when soon afterward a kindergarten was started in the drawing room, the first "educational and philanthropic enterprises" were instituted. And before the end of the year, the residents had begun to "investigate and improve the conditions" in their own neighborhood.

So, Hull-House grew and Jane Addams' interest and influence grew with it in ever-widening circles. As she sought to help the neighbors with their problems, she campaigned for improved and more sanitary living conditions for the community, and became involved in labor legislation and organization. Long before the World war, Jane Addams firmly believed in arbitration as the settlement of difficulties between nations and organized the women of the world in an effort to accomplish it.

For her efforts for world peace, she shared the Nobel peace prize of 1931 with Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler. She was the first woman to be awarded an honorary degree by many universities, among them the conservative Yale. In numerous polls, she was named America's leading woman citizen, the nation's "uncrowned queen" and other complimentary titles.

In Europe, Jane Addams was even more famous than in her home country, and, in 1935, the year of her death, the Turkish government honored her with a special postage stamp.

Jane Addams died on May 21, 1935. Plans for the anniversary celebration are directed by Miss Charlotte Carr, now the settlement's resident director, who points out "It behooves us, in planning for Hull-House's second half-century, to live up to Miss Addams' reputation, not on it."

Physically, the Hull-House of today is a far cry from what it was that autumn day in 1889 when Jane Addams, Ellen Gates Starr and Mary Keyser took up their residence. Before the end of that first year, other like-minded women had joined them there. From all over the city, and soon from all over the world, men and women interested in social service came to offer their help to Jane Addams. As in Toynbee Hall, these people opened classes to teach the lesser privileged.

Hull-House now occupies two full city blocks, has 13 buildings and, in addition, maintains a 72-acre summer camp, out in the country north of Chicago. During last year, more than 350,000 persons attended Hull-House classes and participated in Hull-House activities. In 1939, more than 30,000 visitors came to Hull-House from all parts of the world.

Indeed, in the past 50 years, almost 2,000,000 boys and girls and their fathers and mothers have accepted Miss Addams' invitation to "come over and play."

VITAL SCANDINAVIA

WASHINGTON.—Boiled down to the most brutal fundamentals, the Norwegian war amounts to this: If the British lose it, they also lose the World war.

This may seem like harsh and hasty deduction, but it is based upon the fact that all the other nations of Europe, particularly Italy, are watching the outcome of this battle to see on which side they will jump.

If the Germans succeed in holding Norway, every small nation in southeast Europe will figure that the might of the British empire is broken, that the time has come to cuddle up to its successor.

But more important, you can write it down as certain that unless Britain wins in Norway, Italy will come into this war within approximately one month.

Almost every dispatch which the state department lays upon the White House desk indicates that Mussolini is getting ready for this plunge.

Real fact is that the Italian people are by no means in love with Hitler. Nor are they in love with the allies—though they probably like Hitler less. However, Mussolini never was a man to worry about the Italian people, and regardless of popular sentiment, he can take Italy into the war any time he wants to.

U. S. observers are confident that he will do so, probably jumping first into North Africa the minute he sees that Hitler is victorious in Scandinavia.

Note—What many people do not realize in gauging this war is that Italy and Russia were on the side of the allies in the last war, but even so it took four years plus the very powerful help of the United States before Germany surrendered—with her troops still on French soil. In this war, the alignment is far different, which is why Italy can tip the balance.

Senate School Teacher.

High school students who are flocking into senate galleries these days wish that teacher might be as lenient with them as Senate Chief Clerk John Crockett is with his school-room of 96 members.

At high noon, the gavel falls in the presence of less than a dozen members. The bells ring, and Crockett begins his chore of rounding up enough senators to do business.

"Mr. Adams . . . Mr. Andrews . . . Mr. Ashurst . . ." calls out the veteran clerk in a booming voice. For every six names he calls, only one "Here" is heard. He gets through the Bs, the Cs, and the Ds. Then he slows up.

"Mr. Gerry . . . (long pause) . . . Mr. Gibson . . . (longer pause) . . . Mr. Gillette."

Clerk Crockett, who lacks the schoolmaster's power to punish the tardy, looks hopefully at the swinging doors to the senate cloakroom. But still he has only a score of scholars, and he needs 49 before the session can begin. If he gets through Wheeler, White, and Wiley before that number is reached, he must find the absence of a quorum, and start to call the entire list again.

It takes only seven minutes to run the roll call at fast pace, but Clerk Crockett consumes 15 minutes this time, just to give the boys a break. He pauses as long as 10 seconds between names.

At the end of the list he makes a hurried count, and whips the tally back to the vice president, declaring that 49 members have answered to their names. Actually, there are only 30 members on the floor, but Crockett knows another 20 will pop in soon, and he gives them a liberal leeway that they never got in school.

ELMER AND THE 1940 CIRCUS

THE circus is on the way again, and this department is afraid. It is filled with grave misgivings. It is apprehensive. It fears the modernistic trend will be continued and that there will be further attempts to make an elephant glamorous, give "oomph" to a camel and envelope the big tent as a whole in an atmosphere of silks, satins and "it."

For the last three or four years this influence has spread to a point where the customers have been coming home a little confused and declaring that they have just been to the "Barnum and Billy Rose Circus" or "The Forepaugh and Shubert Combined Shows."

"Old P. T. Barnum had the right idea about a circus," declared Elmer Twitchell, chairman of the National League to Preserve the Flavor of the Big Tent. "It should look like a circus, act like a circus and smell like a circus. Last year they even advertised that it would be air-conditioned and perfumed. I thought the elephants and camels acted very depressed about it all summer."

"The circus was really a circus when you could smell it a mile away. The smells made it. Air-conditioning is all right in its place, but the circus should be left untouched by it," continued Elmer. "However, that's all done and over; what I'm afraid of is that the Follies decorative influence will spread, especially in the opening pageant.

"The opening pageant has always made a hit with me, but especially so before George White, the late Flo Ziegfeld, Earl Carroll or any of those boys could touch it. I warmed up to the pageant when you could tell that Sir Galahad was just a bum, that Ben Hur was a hustler who needed a shave and that Cleopatra and her ladies were just a lot of faded women.

"For the last few years the idea has been to put an Errol Flynn on every horse and a Hedy Lamarr on every elephant. It softened up the whole show. I can stand for one of those Winter Garden ensembles and for those Hollywood super spectacles from the Arabian Nights, but I like my circus parades straight."

"I'm just hoping for the best," concluded Elmer, "but I fear the worst. One more yard of lace in that opening pageant, however, and I'm through!"

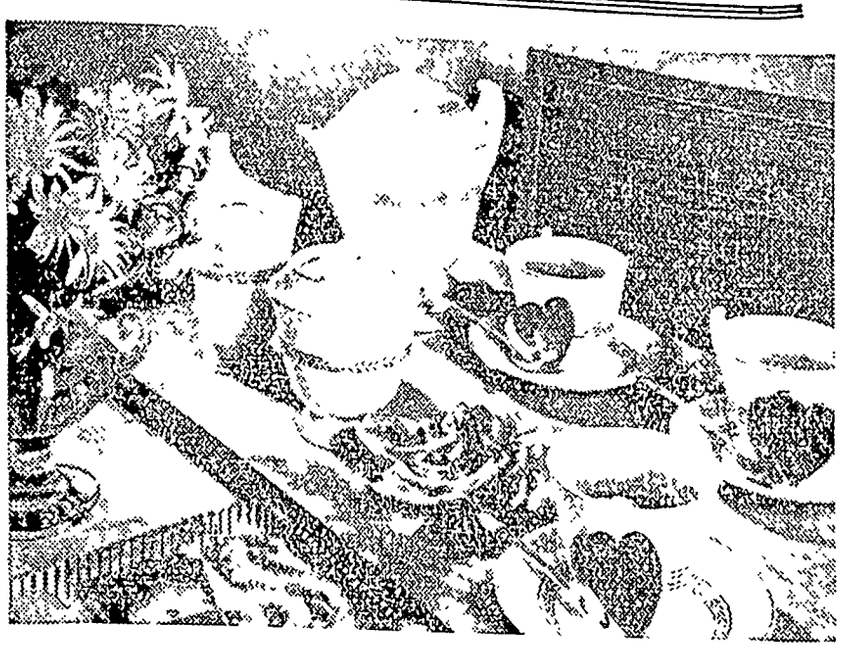
Household News By Eleanor Howe



THE TRUTH COMES OUT AT TEA FOR THE CROWD
(See Recipes Below)

At the Tea Table

This is the one year in four when the bachelor had better put on his running boots or else risk getting caught and deprived of the freedom he prizes so dearly. For it's Leap year . . . girl proposes and man can't very well dispose . . . at least that's how the legend runs.

There's nothing quite so modern as an old-fashioned engagement tea with which to make the announcement that Judy loves John and John doesn't mind at all.

There's nothing so modern, either, as inviting the young man in the case and his bachelor friends to the party. Now, in 1940, afternoon tea is not the "strictly feminine" affair it has been unjustly accused of being. On the contrary, Mr. America prefers the invigorating pick-up, just as long as he can take his tea exactly as he likes! This may mean with clove-spiked lemon, or a touch of candied ginger, perhaps.

Since the boys hate fuss and frills, and like a girl to come straight to the point without keeping them guessing, they would think it pretty clever to "say it" with hearts bearing the initial of the happy pair attached to the strings of the tea-balls.

Cookies are to the male what candy is to the baby . . . the most desirable bon-bon in the world of sweetmeats. So . . . if you know any girl who has gotten herself engaged and is about to tell the world so . . . suggest that she invite the boys along with the girls to hear the glad news and tell her to be generous with the cookies!

GROWING CHICKS NEED GOOD FEED

Economy Measures Are Dangerous to Health.

By C. M. FERGUSON

Unfavorable feed prices start poultrymen figuring economy measures, but the calculations should not be carried to the point where economies in the feed bill jeopardize the health of chicks.

Milk is essential in the starting and growing rations for chicks and that its reduction below recommended amounts is almost certain to result in trouble unless some adequate substitute is provided. Milk is one of the best sources of vitamin G, which promotes growth, and it is doubtful if the reduction of milk below 5 per cent of the starting ration ever is advisable.

Even with 5 per cent of milk in the ration, some source of vitamin G must be provided as a substitute for the portion of milk omitted. High grade dehydrated alfalfa meal which has a rich green color and contains at least 19 per cent protein is the first substitute. Low grade alfalfa meal will not furnish much vitamin G.

The protein lost from the ration by the reduction of its milk content should be provided by a protein carrier which is low in minerals. Soybean meal with 41 per cent protein can be used. Mineralized soybean meal or meat scrap are not satisfactory substitutes for milk in the starting ration.

Dried whey can be substituted for dried milk at the rate of two pounds of whey for each three pounds of milk removed. A gallon of skim milk can replace nine-tenths of a pound of dried milk, and skim milk furnished as a drink for the chicks can replace all the dried milk in the starting ration.

Poultrymen who are mixing their own feeds should get prices from feed dealers on 10 or more of the ordinary ingredients and then calculate which combinations are the most economical at prevailing prices.

Green, succulent pastures and sunshine are without equals as growth and health promoters and as money savers. The chick range should provide green feed from spring until fall. Dried grasses do not provide vitamins needed by growing chicks.

Food Grown on Farms Has High Nutritive Value

Whether food production on the farm for use on the farm is worth while from the money angle has been debated widely. Soil, climate, and type of farming make real differences as between farm regions.

Looked at from the health and nutrition angle, as discussed in the new Yearbook of the department of agriculture, the case for gardening, orcharding and dairying for home consumption is clearer.

"Few appreciate fully," say the food economists of the bureau of home economics, "the nutritive contributions of farm-furnished food to the family diet—nutritive values worth more than the amount of money involved and not ordinarily purchased even when there is plenty of money. If, as studies indicate, relatively more farm families than city and village families have diets that can be rated as good, this must be attributed to the use of home-produced food."

In a typical year, the bureau of agricultural economics estimates, farm families produced approximately $1,250,000,000 worth of food and fuel for home consumption by the farmers themselves.

STAGE SCREEN RADIO

By VIRGINIA VALE
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

WHEN Columbia decided to film "The Tree of Liberty" they decided to give the public more than good value. Many of the scenes of the book are laid in Williamsburg, Va., at the time of the Revolution and just afterward. And since the Rockefellers have obligingly restored most of the buildings of the town so that they look as they did then, Columbia sent the company to Williamsburg.

They also invited newspaper writers down to see Cary Grant, Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Richard Carle and others working, under the very able direction of Frank Lloyd.

Students from William and Mary college acted as extras; in a scene made in wind and rain in front of Raleigh tavern you'll see them, dressed as students of the college were in the seventeen hundreds. The wind and rain were artificially produced on a beautiful spring evening.

The next afternoon Grant was to be photographed riding up to the door of a famous old plantation. The governor of Virginia and crowds of enthusiastic fans assembled to watch. When you see that scene, imagine the governor and the rest of us shivering in a chilly wind from the James river, waiting for the sun to come out, while Grant patiently rode his horse up and down until somebody pointed a candid camera at it at close range, making it so nervous that it ran away. Grant lost his hat and got his wig rumpled, and by the time order was restored the sky was too cloudy for any pictures to be made.

The following day a mob was to storm something or other, and a torchlight parade was to be held. So it rained. The picture people were patient; they're accustomed to that sort of thing. The newspaper people were not, so they went home. The only news was that the title had to be changed to "The Howards of Virginia," because the other one sounded too much like a Warner Brothers patriotic short, and that Martha Scott, instead of Joan Fontaine, would play the lead.

It's going to be a swell picture, one of Frank Lloyd's best—that's recommendation enough for any movie.

Director John Stahl, who has been connected with only two studios—Metro and Universal—during the past 25 years, has broken away, along with such producers as Walter Wanger and Frank Capra, to enjoy the freedom of making his own picture selections. You must remember his "Back Street," with Irene Dunne, and "Only Yesterday," with Margaret Sullavan, to mention just a few of his successes.

He's chosen "The Life of Daniel Webster" for his first free picture, and has signed with James Roosevelt to direct "The Boy Grew Older" for him.

Spike Jones, drummer in Oscar Bradley's orchestra on the CBS "Screen Guild Theater," refused an offer of $200 for a drum head recently. The original cost of the drum head was only $10—but it's covered with signatures of famous Hollywood stars who have appeared on the program, from Shirley Temple to Bette Davis.

Lany Ross was recently nominated as the perfect date by a group of pretty girls who act as professional fashion models. To show his appreciation, he invited four of them to be his guests at a very smart—and very expensive—night club. When the night was over, Lanny, who was selected as the perfect date because he knows just what to do when escorting a woman, found that he couldn't pay the check—because he'd left his wallet at home.

This summer Hill will again cover a Roosevelt convention providing Franklin Delano Roosevelt runs for a third term

Airline Pilot Learns About His Country From the Air

Ex-Air Corps Flyer Studied Geography by Flying 48 States

By O. L. PARKS,
Pres. Parks Air College

When H J Reid was a little shaver out on the wide and slightly rolling plains of Eastern Nebraska, his home town of Pilger was the whole world. From his big geography book he knew that the capital of Nebraska was Lincoln and that the capital of the United States was Washington, D. C.

Washington was more than 1,000 miles away It might as well have been a million because young Reid thought he would never travel that far from home. But few of us can predict our fate that far in advance.

Because now Reid, grown to manhood, flies into and out of Washington regularly, as pilot for Pennsylvania Central Airlines.

When he was still toiling with geography in a book, young Reid found the United States only mildly interesting. But now he is fully in accord with the slogan "See America First."

Until he made a six months tour of every one of the 48 states he wasn't quite sure about all the songs and speeches about America the Beautiful But the air tour, made for the General Tire & Rubber Company, convinced him of the beauty of the Grand Canyon, Yellowstone National Park, sunny California, New England, the easy-going South and the progressive Southwest

Young Reid quickly obtained an important position in aviation after leaving the Army Air Corps on July 1, 1932.

He entered the Army Air Corps Training Center March 1, 1928 and had been graduated on February 28, 1929. He served three years of active duty with the Air Corps, accumulating the hours in the air that entitled him to a license as transport pilot.

After the tour with the rubber company's airplane, he joined Pennsylvania Central on July 15, 1933 as co-pilot and less than a year later was promoted to captain. Because of this rapid rise in the expanding and vital field of aviation he has the greatest appreciation for the Army Air Corps. "There's no better training available anywhere than the kind the Army provides," Captain Reid declared. "And the best of its program is that it pays you while you learn."

Details of how and why the United States Government pays for the training of Army pilots may be obtained from the secretary of the Air Corps Training Center, from which Captain Reid and thousands of other commercial pilots are graduates, at Randolph Field, Texas.

Flying not only has taught Reid more geography than a book ever did but it also has interested him in the United States as a democracy He reads the national and international news with increasing interest because among the 1,700,000 passengers that he and other pilots carried safely in 1939 are the men who keep America the free land that it is.

Congressmen, Senators and cabinet heads, flying to and from Washington, greet him as they board Reid's plane. He's proud of his passengers and proud of the country they represent because he knows every state in the Union, thanks to his Army training in aviation.

Wool lined leather suits for wintet flying are furnished by the Air Corps. They are worth $100 00 each. The course of training the Flying Cadet receives costs the government $20,000.00 or more.

Army Air Corps Pilot Becomes Captain on "Great Silver Fleet"

Attributes His Success to Former Training in Army Air Corps

By O. L. PARKS,
Pres. Parks Air College

If you saw George C. Diggs strolling down the main street of your town you might guess he was a banker, insurance executive or sales manager. But airplane pilot would be far down on your list.

George is not quite in keeping with the movie version of a pilot. He's handsome enough to be starred with Carole Lombard but he's big and easy-going in his ways Despite the fact that he may not look the part, George has shown in his promotions that for all his mild manners he is swift and sure in aviation

It's been less than five years since George left the Army Air Corps to enter commercial aviation. On September 10, 1935, he joined Eastern Airlines as co-pilot. Less than four years later he was promoted to captain of "The Great Silver Fleet," flying up and down the Atlantic Coast line on the New York-Miami run.

This "big man from the South," who was born in Virginia, the cradle of presidents, also went to high school and college in his native state. He attended William and Mary College at historic Williamsburg for 3½ years.

Through a flight and ground school operated under the supervision of his college, Diggs became interested in aviation as a profession and career. The urge was so strong he quit college to enter the Army training center at San Antonio, Texas, from which he was graduated only seven years ago.

A speedy Army pursuit ship carried George "back to ole Virginny" for duty at Langley Field, Va. He came home still bursting with pride for his coveted "wings" and his commission as second lieutenant.

In summing up his gratitude and appreciation to the Army for giving him an opportunity to enter commercial aviation, which he did after completing his three-year period in the Air Corps, George used a variation of the Biblical phrase. In the Bible there is a piece about "Faith, hope and charity and the greatest of these is charity."

In George's version, it's "Resourcefulness, Technical Ability and Discipline, and the greatest of these is Discipline," as requisites for success as a transport pilot. And to the Army he gives full credit for teaching him discipline, a factor that he considers largely responsible for his promotions.

"If a pilot does not learn to practice self-discipline and abide by orders he does not belong in the airline profession," Capt. Diggs declared. "Here again we profit by an Army background for no student is permitted to complete his Army training unless he learns to take orders and follow, without questioning, his instructions."

Young men 20 to 26 years of age, who want to learn more about the Army way of air instruction, can obtain further information from the Secretary of the Army Air Corps Training Center at Randolph Field, Texas.

The "Flying Rodiecks" Are Birds of a Feather

By O. L. PARKS,
Pres. Parks Air College

The "Flying Rodiecks" sound very much like a circus act. But, as a matter of fact, the three Rodieck brothers fly much higher and faster than any daring young man on a circus trapeze

There is Capt. Leonard H. Rodieck, midwest commander of preparatory aviation schools of the United States Army Air Corps; Capt. George E Rodieck of Mid-Continent Airlines and the "kid brother," Lieut Ralph W Rodieck who pilots a "flying fortress" out of March Field for the Army Air Corps.

Before George left to join Mid-Continent the Rodiecks were the only trio of brothers in all of the far flung Army Air Corps. Leonard was the first to sprout wings. He began dreaming about airplanes when he was still in short pants. George and Ralph followed Leonard's example.

Although never stationed at the same airport the brothers easily kept up contacts with each other. When Leonard hopped over to Kelly Field from Shreveport, La., George quickly would arrange a cross-country flight from March Field. Once with a brisk tail wind George really poured on the coal and made the Los Angeles-San Antonio flight in 4½ hours flat.

Aviation everywhere is the shortest distance between two points but in Texas it is an especially vital form of transportation because the "two points" may be 1,000 miles apart and still in the same huge Lone Star state Leonard, George and Ralph were born in Palestine, Texas, and stretched their necks looking at every plane that flew overhead.

Of the trio George perhaps has had more varied adventures. He entered the Army Air Corps training center at San Antonio, Texas, in June, 1929 and was graduated in June, 1930.

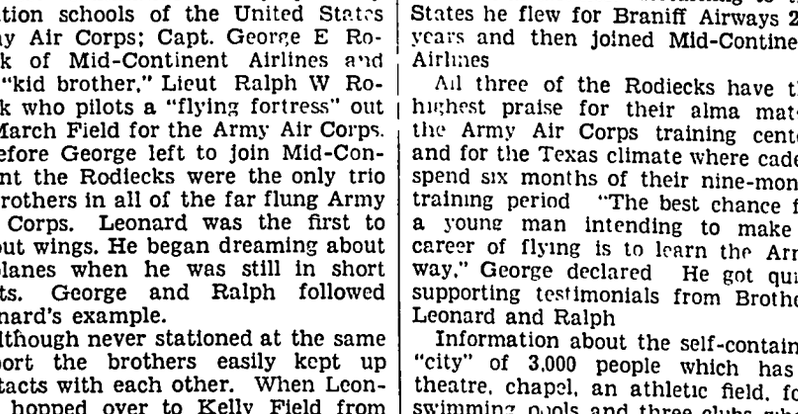
After 16 months of active duty with the Air Corps he left for Central America and two years as a transport pilot flying millions of pounds of freight on some of the world's most important commercial airlines. Returning to the States he flew for Braniff Airways 2½ years and then joined Mid-Continent Airlines

All three of the Rodiecks have the highest praise for their alma mater, the Army Air Corps training center, and for the Texas climate where cadets spend six months of their nine-month training period "The best chance for a young man intending to make a career of flying is to learn the Army way," George declared He got quick supporting testimonials from Brothers Leonard and Ralph

Information about the self-contained "city" of 3,000 people which has a theatre, chapel, an athletic field, four swimming pools and three clubs where cadets spend six months of their Army training period may be obtained from the Commander of the Army Air Corps Training Center at Randolph Field, Texas.

"The only really difficult part of the training period will be in leaving Texas after a cadet gets his 'wings'" George commented "It's the best state of all."

"That's right," said the loyal brothers.



Douglas B-18 Bombers are a familiar sight on all airports used by the United States Army Air Corps.

A PARENT'S WISH

I wish the public school to build these things in my son and daughter:

First Straight thinking They must face facts as they are, must contort them to their own advantage.

Second Open their eyes to beauty Lead them to see a well-turned thought, a beautiful painting; to feel exquisite harmonies--encourage them to prize spiritual values.

Third They must respect the abilities--consider the rights of others Teach them that there are no superiorities save of merit, service, achievement.

Fourth I want my son and my daughter informed Teach them to find out things for themselves, and show them where information may be found.

Fifth Guide but do not coerce them in their search to discover that task which will make them happiest in the executing When they have found this thing which they like best to do, set them in the way of learning to do it well.

To the public school I send my son and daughter of mine while they are young, fresh, plastic Let it start them on the ways of thinking, feeling, learning, gloriously its mission of helping them live to their fullest the life which nature through me has given them.

The bookkeeping class has finished their second set. Some of them were pretty much on the wrong side of the whole thing

The band is still practicing marching They should have the streets pretty well smoothed down by now.

The operetta was a success and the children should be given a compliment for their fine performance

Several new improvements have been made around the school house building. The shrubbery has been planted and a new bicycle rack has been placed out in front. With the grass coming up, it makes the school house look very nice.

Love at First Flight, Reveals Capt. Swain

Airline Pilot Made First Trip in Air Day Lindbergh Crossed Atlantic

By O. L. PARKS,
Pres. Parks Air College

Ask the average man in the street what was the biggest news story of this century. Ten to one he would think a moment and say: "The Armistice the end of the World War"

That was a big and gloriously happy story for America and the Allies to read. It meant the end of four ravaging years of war But it wasn't the biggest story of the century, measured by the standards of newspapers.

W R Swain

The century's biggest story so far was the transatlantic flight of Col Charles Augustus Lindbergh in the "Spirit of St. Louis By actual measurment Colonel Lindbergh's flight received more columns of space in New York newspapers than did the signing of the Armistice. Even Peace had to take second place to this extraordinary feat of aviation

All America remembers the flight that made world history by bridging two continents But a former Georgia Tech student remembers Lindbergh's trip because it was on the same date that he made personal history with his first flight aloft. William R. Swain, now Captain Swain of American Airlines, was the student, and Columbus, Ga., was the start of the brief air trip

Swain, whose interest in aviation had developed during service with the Georgia Tech Air Unit of the R. O T C, became acquainted with Capt. E. R Brown of Eastern Airlines, a graduate of the Army training program Capt Brown took Bill up for a trip over Columbus. For the young student and aviation it was "Love at First Flight."

After four years at the school of technology Bill entered the United States Army Air Corps Training Center in February 1930, and was graduated as a pilot in February, 1931 Sixteen months of active duty at Selfridge Field with the 27th Pursuit Squadron followed.

In October, 1932, he joined American Airlines, and less than four years later was promoted to captain He has spent more than 5,000 hours in the air, flying hundreds of thousands of miles

In speaking of the Army training that made possible his enviable position as captain with America's largest airline, Bill is quick with his gratitude and appreciation. "The discipline and Army traditions are excellent training for any aeronautical position," he declared. "The Army way of flight training is unequalled"

Young men who want to know more about the Army program that is open to youths with two or more years of college education may obtain further information from the Secretary of the Army Air Corps Training Center Randolph Field, Texas.

Whether he is at home in Fort Worth Texas, or making a flight for American Airlines, Bill takes time out for momentary reflection every May 10 That's the date Colonel Lindbergh made the biggest news of the century and Bill made the most important news in his personal diary

The coincidence of the dates and the fact they both concern aviation gives Bill a very personal feeling of friendship for the "Flying Colonel."

NEW STRAWBERRIES REPLACING DUNLAPS

Dunlap is still to be considered as one of the satisfactory strawberry varieties, but newer and better varieties are replacing it, report horticulturists at Iowa State College.

Under the direction of the Iowa Agricultural Experiment Station, work in strawberry improvement has been in progress for the past 5 years. Four crops were harvested under conditions which represented normal to extreme drouth Forty varieties were tested, and the data gathered gave quite reliable information on the behavior of the various kinds as grown in southeastern Iowa on a Buckner silt loam.

Outstanding Variety

Blakemore was the most outstanding commercial variety.

"It is a firm berry that holds its color and attractiveness over long shipment, and it possess many desirable plant characteristics," says T T. Maney, Iowa State horticulurist

This variety is also excellent for preserving and freezing. It's chief defects are in its size and quality of fruit and in its susceptibility to "yellows" in the plant. The latter weakness may be overcome to a large extent by careful roguing and selection of "yellow-free" plants.

Outyielded

Premier and Beaver are the only varieties which outyielded Blakemore. Premier is not as good a shipper as Blakemore, but it has the advantage of being very hardy yielding well throughout the four seasons and of being fairly resistant to leaf spot.

"It is a berry of good quality and must be recognized next to Blakemore as a good commercial sort," Maney says.

Beaver is a large-sized, medium-firm, well flavored berry, possessing a glossy finish which makes it very attractive when placed on the market as soon as it is picked. The variety is a good plant maker, is productive and has a long picking season. However, it will not stand up well in long shipment and must be classed as a variety for home and local use.

Late Maturing Varieties

In the class of late maturing varieties, Big Late and Aroma were outstanding. New varieties like Narcissa, Dorsett and Fairflax are berries of excellent size and quality but under conditions of the experiment were low in production.

An increase of nearly 2 per cent in the number of milk cows on farms is forecast for this year, since the number of heifers to be added to milking herds is larger than in 1939, and marketings of cows recently have been low.

Record.

The children of Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Baker at Pierson have set some kind of a record. All four of them have had appendicitis operations. A fifth, William, died following a similiar operation.

THAT THIRD TERM

President Grant Almost Made It, He Led for 36 Ballots in 1880

Teddy Roosevelt, Who Had Served Seven Years, Made Only Other 'Serious' Try in 1912 As 'Bullmooser.'

A contemporary cartoon by Keppler, depicting Grant as a "presidential automatom" (operated by Fish, Morton, Conkling and others, hidden behind the platform) who silently smoked his cigar while the people anxiously awaited a statement from him about his third term intentions.

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following article, last in a series of three impartial reviews of the third term issue, tells how a "dark horse" named James A. Garfield prevented Ulysses Grant from being elected a third time.

III. THE TWO BIG PRESIDENTIAL TRIES

ONLY twice in history has a President been receptive to a "third term." Ulysses S. Grant was the first and Theodore Roosevelt was the second. In Roosevelt's case, it wasn't exactly a "third term," for he had not previously had two complete terms as President.

About the middle of Grant's second term some of his supporters started a movement to renominate him. Immediately there was an uproar.

"Caesarism!" shrieked the New York Herald, the leading anti-administration newspaper, and that cry was echoed by Horace Greeley's powerful New York Tribune. Then other papers joined in the campaign to awaken the public to the dangers of the political machine that had been built up in Grant's administration.

As a result of this uproar, the Republican state convention in Pennsylvania on May 26, 1875, resolved:

That we declare a firm, unqualified adherence to the unwritten law of the Republic which wisely, and under the sanction of the most venerable examples, limits the presidential service of any citizen to two terms and we the Republicans of Pennsylvania, in recognition of this law, are unalterably opposed to the election to the presidency of any for a third term.

Grant had felt that it was undignified for the President to reply to the accusations of the newspapers. But when members of his own party went on record so strongly he felt that he couldn't ignore the issue.

He issued a statement informing the convention that he had sought neither his first term nor his second. "I am not, nor have I ever been, a candidate for renomination," he wrote. "I would not accept a renomination if tendered, unless it should come under such circumstances as to make it an imperative duty—circumstances not likely to occur."

Feared He'd be 'Drafted.'

But this didn't allay the suspicion that he might permit himself to be "drafted." So state conventions continued to adopt anti-third term resolutions and on December 15 Rep. William M. Springer of Illinois offered in congress a resolution

That in the opinion of this house the precedent established by Washington and other Presidents of the United States in retiring from the presidential office after their second term has become by universal concurrence a part of our republican system of government, and that any departure from this time-honored custom would be unwise, unpatriotic, and fraught with peril to our free institutions.

The resolution was adopted by a vote of 234 to 18—80 Republicans joining with 146 Democrats to pass it over the opposition of 18 Republicans That stopped the third term talk and Grant supporters made no effort to oppose the Republican nomination of Rutherford B. Hayes, who won in the election.

After leaving the White House Grant started his tour of the world which became a triumphal procession in every country he visited. When he returned his friends began talking third term again. Although he told them privately "I am not a candidate for any office, nor would I hold one that required any maneuvering or sacrifice to obtain," they weren't convinced that he wouldn't accept it if offered him.

Even if he was sincere in disclaiming any desire to return to the White House, that wasn't the case with his wife. Julia Dent Grant wanted to be queen of Washington society again. How much she had to do with convincing Grant that he might win a third time is unknown. But it was probably considerable.

At any rate, he allowed Roscoe Conkling to proceed with the build-up for his nomination by the Republicans. Sentiment in Grant's favor grew rapidly, partly because of his popularity with the people and partly because of their dissatisfaction with Hayes' administration.

As the movement to renominate him gained momentum, the old cry of "Caesarism!" was raised again and early in 1880 a number of Republicans held an anti-third term convention in St. Louis. They adopted resolutions denouncing the third term idea, the corruption of the Grant regime and Conkling's "bossism."

When the Republican national convention was held, this element joined forces with the Hayes wing of the party and the supporters of James G. Blaine to prevent Grant's nomination. But despite their efforts, he led the balloting for 36 votes, only to lose out when they sprang a "dark horse" in the person of James A. Garfield.

Bitter in Defeat.

When Grant received the news of his defeat, he spoke bitterly of his managers. "They never should have permitted my name to come before the convention unless they were sure of victory," he declared, which was pretty sure proof of his desire for a third term and his willingness to accept it if offered him.

The case of Theodore Roosevelt was somewhat different from that of Grant. He became President on the assassination of President McKinley. After he finished McKinley's unexpired term, he was elected on his own right in 1904 — and this was his only election as President. He had, however, served seven years, almost two terms

Theodore Roosevelt

On November 4, 1904, after his victory over Alton B. Parker, the Democratic candidate, Roosevelt issued this statement:

On the fourth of March next I shall have served 3½ years and these 3½ years constitute my first term. The wise custom which limits the President to two terms regards the substance, and not the form, and under no circumstances will I be a candidate for nor accept another nomination.

A "third term" boom was started for him in 1907 and he was obliged to repeat his refusal. Both these refusals rose up to plague him in February, 1912, when a letter signed by the Republican governors of seven states asked him to be a candidate again.

"I will accept the nomination for President if it is tendered to me, and I will adhere to this decision until the convention has expressed its preference," he replied.

Despite the cries of "Steamroller!" and "Fraud!" by Roosevelt adherents, the convention expressed its preference for Taft. So T. R. bolted the convention, formed the Bull Moose party and campaigned as its candidate. Although he carried six states with 88 electoral votes, as against Taft's two states and eight electoral votes, Woodrow Wilson, the Democratic candidate, carried 40 states, got 435 votes in the electoral college and won an easy victory.

Science Seeks New Ways to Fight Old Age

NEW YORK.—Science hasn't yet found a way of beating the Grim Reaper, but modern research is making great strides in uncovering causes and preventatives of physical and mental old age.

While admitting that people who live much beyond 100 years are rare exceptions, medical men have decided that proper care during youth and proper diet the rest of our lives can do much to keep men and women living to a ripe old age.

Seeking causes for the death phenomenon, they believe that old age is simply a series of changes in the human body, but no single place has yet been discovered where its effects are first felt. Glandular deficiencies are popularly thought to be largely responsible, and this in turn may often be traced to dietary deficiencies. When skin becomes drier, wounds take longer to heal, and bones get brittle it is generally conceded that the trouble can be traced to the glands.

Finds 'Filtrate Factor.'

Though medical men frown on straight vitamin dosages, Dr. Agnes Fay Morgan of the University of California has tried to isolate a new vitamin whose absence from the body is at least known to bring on many symptoms of premature age.

In working with rats Dr. Morgan has concentrated on diet, perfecting a "filtrate factor" whose absence results in rapid aging. Among ordinary foods, the constituents of this filtrate factor are believed to be contained in yeast, whole rice and rice hulls, eggs, milk and many vegetables.

Science has certainly determined that overeating is not conducive to longevity. It has long been a proverb that gluttons "dig their graves with their teeth," and laboratory rats allowed to eat all they wanted actually did experience shorter lives than those whose diets were controlled.

Hope to Boost Life Span.

Although it is recognized that a long life is often inherited from ancestors who possessed the same traits, some scientists actually hope the average life span can be increased to 100 years. Nor is this all they promise, for a long old age of feebleness is not conducive to happiness. Science believes, rather, that if mankind will co-operate it can avoid death by disease or other accidents until the time comes for a quick old age and sudden end.

Sociologists are heartened by a modern reversal of the recent trend toward 'junking" old people as unfit for profitable employment. It is now conceded that both youth and age are needed for a proper balance of the community, and old people themselves are realizing that their mental outlook on the world and life is as much a part of staying young as anything else.

Cite Franklin's Work.

Historians point to innumerable cases where people have done their most notable work at an advanced age. Benjamin Franklin was serving the United States as ambassador to France when he was 79, and several years later was making some of his most important scientific discoveries.

Moses, vigorous Israelite leader, was past 90 when he led his people to the promised land.

Frenchmen still talk about Ninon de Lencios, a lady who lived in the days of Louis IV. Although never beautiful, she was so witty and had such a lively mind that men were in love with her when she was past 80.

An Englishwoman, Jane Lewson, attained the age of 116 before she died in 1816.

It is because science believes premature death is caused so largely by accidents of youth that medical men lay great stress on protecting children from diseases that affect the heart and other vital organs. No offer of help is held out to those who seek repair of such bodily damages, yet Dr. Morgan found that rats which had gray hair and other signs of premature old age showed improvement when the "filtrate factor" was introduced in their diet.

HABAKKUK FIGHTS THROUGH DOUBT TO FAITH

LESSON TEXT—Habakkuk 1.12—2:4.
GOLDEN TEXT—The just shall live by his faith.—Habakkuk 2 4

"The just shall live by his faith"—the great rallying cry of the Reformation; in fact, the very essence of Christianity, is found in the glorious conclusion which the prophet Habakkuk reaches in his triumphant confidence in God. Trying circumstance, doubt and fear must all yield to faith in God.

The lesson for today is peculiarly appropriate to the situation in which the world finds itself just now. Men's hearts are failing them for fear. It seems to them that all is chaotic disorder, they wonder whether God has any plan for the world and its people, and whether He really cares. "Why doesn't God do something?" is the question on many lips. The answer is in our lesson.

I. Believe, Though Surrounded by Questions (1:12-17).

Habakkuk does not question that his people had sinned and were worthy of God's disciplinary chastening, but he is astonished to learn that God plans to use the wicked Chaldeans to bring it about Questions pour in upon him as he describes their iniquity (v. 13), and speaks of them as catching Judah in their net (vv. 14, 15) and gloating over their victims (vv. 16, 17)

He does not yet know the answer to his questions, but he has already stated the foundation of his faith in verse 12. Whatever happens, no matter how sore the trial and non-understandable the outworking of God's plan, the prophet is sure of his God as the eternal and holy One The point to be borne in mind in such a time is that God is not making plans for the moment or because of some unexpected change in circumstances. He is "from everlasting" (v. 12) His plans are eternal. But He is also the "Holy One" (v. 12) It may seem for the present that sin and wickedness have triumphed, but let us remember that the eternal plans of God are conceived and executed in holiness and power

II. Be Alert in the Midst of Uncertainty (2:1).

One who does not have faith in God is prone to say in such times that all hope is lost, and give up in despair. Not so Habakkuk. He knew that there is nothing harder than to wait patiently for God. He determines to be neither discouraged nor impatient, but to stand watch in the tower (v. 1). "His words bespeak a very right and proper condition of soul. Perplexed and confused by the seeming enigma of God's ways, he owns he may require reproof, and takes his stand upon the watch tower, above the mists of the earth and beyond the thoughts and doings of men, where he can quietly wait on God and look out to see what He will say to him" (Ironside).

How desperately we need such alert and earnest watchers in our day. Christians, arise! Do not permit yourself to be either lulled into a false security or into deadening discouragement.

III. Receive the Answer of Triumphant Faith (2:2-4).

"The Lord answered me." He always does, if we are ready to listen and to abide His time. Habakkuk received a vision of God's truth in which he was to write so plainly that everyone who read it would understand it and, in turn, run to others with the message. Those of us who teach and preach would do well to follow that admonition. All too often our message is not understood or fails to stir those who hear it to go quickly and tell others.

Looking forward to Christ, the just man of Habakkuk's day was to live by faith; even as we of this day, looking back to the cross of Christ, are justified by faith and then are to go on to live by faith. This is the word which, as we have already suggested, stirred Luther and his fellows to bring about the Reformation. Long before Luther's day, however, the same words had come by the Holy Spirit's inspiration to be the heart of the great messages of Paul the apostle as he taught justification (Rom. 1:16, 17), as he defended grace against legalism (Gal. 3:11), and as he portrayed "the pilgrim's path through this world from the cross to the glory" (Heb. 10:38)

Some egg! Of course, all of the eggs are not that big and if they were, Wallace would probably be hot-footing it here right pronto to have the production cut down! And incidently, it took the Editor, his wife, his son and Coach "Bodge" Bowles, the better half of Sunday morning to consume four of those big eggs that looked like white-washed footballs

DON'T "RUSH" CLOVER IN PERMANENT PASTURE

A grazing system where "everything is under control" is essential with the successful establishment of clovers in a permanent pasture, report agronomists at Iowa State College.

Recommending "controlled grazing," the agronomists suggest that when no small grain is seeded, livestock be kept from grazing the area until the clovers have a good start. This is usually sometime in June. After this headstart, some grazing may be expected, but at no time should the clovers get a "close shave."

Discontinuing grazing in September enables the clovers to build up reserves to carry them through the winter and gives them a vigorous send-off the following spring.

Clover that has small gram seeded with it needs pasturing when it reaches a height of 8 or 10 inches. The stock should not pasture the new seedings too closely, but the nurse crop must be kept grazed or clipped to prevent it from smothering the seeding.

An unfenced pasture improvement area in a large pasture has little chance for success unless top-dressed with manure, the agronomists report. Top-dressing liberally with manure discourages close grazing as well as adding fertility and helping to insure a good clover stand.

FACTS ABOUT SUDAN GRASS

Few authenic cases of poisoning on sudan pasture are on record in normal seasons. Any possible danger is usually avoided by delaying grazing until the grass reaches a height of 18 inches. It is the short. dark green grass which is most dangerous. New shoots starting after the main stem have been killed by frost may be dangerous. When the second growth starts later in the season, care should be used in pasturing.

Chinch bugs eat sudan readily and it should not be seeded adjacent to small grain fields where there is a heavy infestation of chinch bugs.

Sudan grass will probably carry more stock than any other emergency pasture crop in the summer when bluegrass is dormant.

Increase in Acreage of Hybrid Corn Is Proving Profitable to U. S. Farmer

By JEROME MARKHAM
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

CHICAGO. — Hybrid corn, which produces bigger crops on a smaller acreage, has brought to agriculture, for the first time, the industrial technique of standardized parts and mass production.

Hybrid is a tough, pugilistic sort of corn. It battles storms and other vicissitudes of the weather successfully. It beats off the attacks of bugs and disease. But most important, it yields from 10 to 25 per cent more per acre than the old types of open-pollinated corn. Moreover, it is of superior quality.

Practically unknown to the average farmer five years ago, hybrid corn, it is estimated, will be planted on nearly 20,000,000 acres this spring. Most farmers who have grown hybrid are delighted with the results they have obtained. Few, however, know how or why it came about.

It all goes back nearly a century to an old monastery garden in Austria. There Gregor Johann Mendel, peasant by birth, monk and abbot of Brunn, devoted hours of patient research to plant breeding. In time he discovered the rules which govern the inheritance of characters and the way those characters can be separated by inbreeding. In 1865 he published a monograph entitled "Research on Hybridization." The paper attracted little attention. It was not until 1900, or 16 years after Mendel's death, that interest was kindled in his startling discovery.

Testing Mendel's Theory.

Then scientists in this country began to use corn to test out Mendel's theories. G. H. Shull, at the Carnegie experiment station, E. M. East at the University of Illinois, and Donald F. Jones at the University of Connecticut, did the pioneer work. They found that by breeding a corn plant to itself ("selfing" by fertilizing the silks of a plant with pollen from the same plant) strains were developed that looked poor but did amazing things when crossed with another inbred strain.

Doctor Jones paved the way for the modern hybrid industry by suggesting, in 1919, the method now generally used for combining inbred lines into hybrid combinations known as "double crosses."

HYBRID WINS CROWN—C. E. Troyer of LaFontaine, Ind., whose hybrid corn won him the "corn king" title at last year's international livestock exposition, is congratulated by his friends.

First step, as has been pointed out, is "selfing." The breeder starts with a good ear from some standard, productive variety. After planting, he covers the shoots with a paper bag before the silks are exposed. When the tassels start to shed their pollen, the silks are carefully fertilized and then kept covered so that no other pollen can reach them.

Result Is Amazing.

Next step is to cross these inbreds. The result of this "single cross" is startling. For some reason that science cannot yet explain, the offspring of these runty inbreds is an amazingly strong, vigorous and large plant.

Then the breeder takes two single crosses which tests have proved to be good and crosses them. This "double cross" is a combination of four inbred parents. Again the tedious process of trial and error is repeated until the breeder finally gets a combination that includes high yielding ability, strong roots, stiff stalks and a high quality ear with a mysterious vigor that results from hybridization.

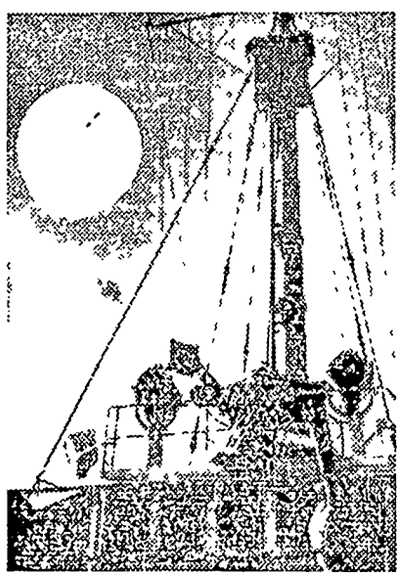
Now the standard parts are available for marketing to the farmer as commercial hybrid seed. Mass production is the next step.

Fertilization Important.

One of the important results of the switch to hybrid is the change it has wrought in the attitude of many farmers toward fertilization. Statisticians have figured out that 50 bushels of corn (not a remarkably high yield as hybrids go) removes about 75 pounds of nitrogen from the soil. It takes out about 21 pounds of phosphorus and about 41 pounds of potash. Bigger yields naturally make even greater demands on the soil's fertility.

Thus, remarkable as hybrid seed is, it has to be accompanied by a well-rounded program of soil management and the use of fertilizer if results, in the form of high production, are to be maintained. Only then is there a satisfactory replacement of the essential plant food elements which hybrid corn removes from the soil.

Robot Observer Aids U. S. Weather Forecasters



UP SHE GOES—The radiosonde, a miniature broadcasting station, being sent aloft from the bridge of a Coast Guard cutter.

HERE IT IS—Here signals from the radiosonde are being recorded with special equipment aboard the cutter.

THERE IT GOES—After weather observations are complete, they are immediately radioed to Washington.

By WILLIAM NUGENT

WASHINGTON.—The famous remark uttered by Mark Twain has through the years become so traditional and so often repeated that most of us are inclined to agree that the weather is something we can't do much about. However, in our deep appreciation of the sagacity of the immortal Mark Twain we lose sight of the fact that the weather forecaster is just about the bravest man in the world when he makes a forecast for tomorrow's weather.

Guess-Work Eliminated.

He has about as much information to go on as the doctor who receives a telephone call from a man who says he "has a temperature" and wants the good doctor to tell him whether he has measles or meningitis. The weather forecaster's diagnosis must be based to a large extent upon the surface weather map, and this map gives comparatively meager information of the atmospheric conditions at the higher altitudes where most of our weather is produced.

In recent years, however, much of the guess-work has been taken away. With the rise of aviation, the general interest in upper air conditions has increased and aircraft have made it possible to obtain upper air observations more frequently and in more localities than formerly with sounding balloons and kites. The radiosonde, a miniature broadcasting station with a parachute attachment which weighs less than two pounds, has come into quite general use for the recording of pressure, temperature and humidity in the upper atmosphere. This robot weather observer is sent aloft attached to a carrier balloon from the decks of floating weather bureau stations on two coast guard cutters in mid-Atlantic and from the grounds of six airports in the country. The radiosonde sends back signals which give the temperature, air pressure and humidity at all heights reached by the balloon.

Aids Weather Forecasts.

The ocean observations, which began only recently, are of great value to the weather bureau, especially along the Atlantic coast. Since last fall, when war broke out in Europe and ships of nearly every European nation ceased sending weather information, the bureau has been seriously handicapped in making forecasts of value to ocean commerce.

This observational work, which is gradually expanding into a network of observing stations, yields weather service for all types of uses. The basic observations are the same whether the specific forecast is for use of the aviator, the mariner, or the farmer.

Everett Mitchell, radio announcer on the National Farm and Home hour, has been telling the farmers of the nation that "It's a Beautiful Day in Chicago" every day for years and years, but they know his weather report is just a little white lie. The farmers, like the mariners and aviators, still look to the weather bureau for their authentic weather reports. Mark Twain, notwithstanding, there are few human activities which can boast complete indifference to weather, present or future.

Navy Man Piloted Plane In First U. S. Air Flight

NORFOLK, VA —Capt. Patrick N. L. Bellinger, commanding officer of the United States naval air station here, piloted the first airplane struck by bullets in combat.

While flying over Vera Cruz during the Mexican trouble in 1914, Bellinger's Curtiss seaplane was hit by bullets fired by ground troops.

Bellinger also is believed to be the first aviator to attack enemy soldiers from the air.

Disappearing Sales Tax Tokens Present Real Mystery

DENVER.—What happens to all of the sales tax tokens in America?

State Treasurer Charles Armstrong of Colorado has admitted that he couldn't solve the mystery in his own state, or in the nation.

In circulation—or elsewhere—in Colorado alone there are 36,691.500 of the little aluminum discs, the treasurer said in a report. He pointed out that was 33.5 tokens for every man, woman and child in the state. They cost the state $69,383 to manufacture and circulate.

"I know that every man and woman in the state isn't running around with 33½ tokens jingling in his or her pockets," Armstrong said. "So what happens to them?"

Some of the missing millions of tokens are in cash registers, Armstrong guessed, and quite a few have been taken into other states by tourists. He said he supposed a few thousand more were in the vest pockets of worn-out suits.

The Washington MERRY-GO-ROUND

By DREW PEARSON & ROBERT ALLEN

U. S. AND THE WAR

WASHINGTON.—A group of farm leaders went to the White House to urge Roosevelt to support the Jones bill, which would cut interest rates on government farm loans. And while they got the President's support, they also got an earful on another subject—why the U. S. will not get involved in the European war.

The discussion began when one of the farmers asked Roosevelt whether propaganda and the loss of foreign markets would affect U. S. neutrality. This brought an emphatic negative from the President.

"I don't think the American people will lose their heads to the extent of being drawn into the European conflict," he said in effect. "It is true that the emotions of people can be quickly aroused, but reason and logic always triumph in the end. That's why our democratic form of government has survived so long.

"Take, for example, the arms embargo fight. There was a lot of talk from certain elements during that controversy, that if we lifted the embargo it would drag us into the war. Well, all that talk has died down and you don't hear it any more. There was no truth in it and it evaporated.

"The same happened during the debate over extending the reciprocal trade treaties. There was a lot of unfounded talk then, but it has all blown over unless political opportunists inject the issue into this year's campaign."

"What about the Nazi invasion of Denmark and Norway?" asked another of the farm visitors. "Will that endanger our neutrality?"

Again Roosevelt shook his head. "As long," he replied, "as we keep a level head, our feet on the ground and maintain a liberal government, we have nothing to worry about."

Bombing Bill White.

President Roosevelt scored a neat one on his old friend William Allen White, the sage of Emporia, Kansas, during his off-the-record session with the newspaper editors recently at the White House

William Allen White

Incidentally, the remark was a clue to what Roosevelt thinks is the chief danger to the United States — Nazi forces in Latin America

The President was talking about the war and the question of national defense, especially as it applied to the Western hemisphere. To illustrate his point, he turned suddenly to Mr. White, who was sitting in the group before him.

"For instance, Bill White may think he's a lot safer in Kansas than I am up in Hyde Park, N. Y.," said the President, "but he isn't."

He went on to explain that if enemy bombers were to seek out Hyde Park they would have a long way to fly across the Atlantic. But if they wanted to bomb Bill White in Kansas, it was relatively easy for them to fly up from Mexico where enemy air bases could be established.

Under the Dome.

One of the most inspiring sights in our democratic government is to see the President of the United States address a joint session of congress. These gatherings include not only the President and members of the house and senate, but also cabinet members, Supreme court justices, foreign diplomats, members of the President's family, plus social and political leaders—all seated in the house of representatives.

But—some members of congress heave a sigh of relief when these sessions are adjourned. What they know, though others do not, is that the roof covering the house chamber is in danger of caving in some day and wiping out the nation's political leaders.

Furthermore, the roof of the senate chamber is supported by similar materials, and architects have recommended that it be replaced.

Serious-minded Horace D. Rouzer, assistant architect of the Capitol, solemnly warned members of the senate appropriations committee recently that "in some instances the pins should not be stressed over 12,000 pounds, but computations show stresses up to around 75,000 pounds per square inch." He was referring to the roof on the senate side of the Capitol.

MERRY-GO-ROUND

Members of the German embassy, apparently none too enthusiastic over Hitler's treatment of private property, are buying up quantities of silver plate at U. S. jewelry stores. This is one investment they can keep with less danger of Nazi confiscation . . . One member of the German embassy staff confided at dinner the other night that he was worried over Germany's loss of ships, because now perhaps Hitler wouldn't have enough ships to land troops in England.

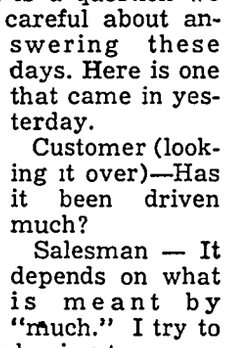
THE CAUTIOUS SALESMAN

("The automobile industry is asked by the Federal Trade commission to adopt a code. Under it there must be no exaggeration of gasoline mileage. And in selling a second hand car strict truth as to its history is demanded."—News Item.)

Customer (interested in a new car)—This looks like a wonderful car for the money?

Salesman—Well, I wouldn't want to go that far.

Customer—It's by far the best looking job on the market today.



Salesman (ever mindful of the code) — Suppose we just say one of the best, and avoid all chance of trouble.

Customer (still elated)—What is the horse power?

Salesman (hesitatingly) — I understand direct from headquarters that it is ninety horse, but I would rather not say so on my own responsibility.

Customer — Has it four-wheel brakes, shock absorbers and the new magnetic shift?

Salesman—The catalogue, which I have every reason to believe is correct, says so. It is my belief that it has. But if you decide to take this one I will crawl under and check up to make certain. In fact, I would feel it my duty to do so.

Customer—How many miles does it give to the gallon?

Salesman (who has been dreading this one)—I was afraid of that. And you will have to accept whatever I say as being my best opinion. The factory says it will do twenty to the gallon, our sales manager has been heard to claim twenty-four and we have customers who claim they only get eighteen. Washington thinks nineteen is a better estimate. I would be inclined to string along with the government and avoid criticism.

Customer (now a little less enthusiastic)—Have you any good used cars?

Salesman—That is a question we have to be very careful about answering these days. Here is one that came in yesterday.

Customer (looking it over)—Has it been driven much?

Salesman — It depends on what is meant by "much." I try to avoid the word as having too many shades of meaning.

Customer (pretty tired of it all by this time)—What I mean is how old is it?

Salesman—The serial number is 678456, and, according to the records, this makes it a car manufactured in 1938.

Customer—How many miles has it gone?

Salesman (wincing)—The speedometer says 11,000 miles. The owner has given an affidavit swearing that the speedometer has not been tampered with. Our office manager certifies that it has not been changed or fooled with here. I can say nothing more. Washington is very strict on this point.

Customer—Has it—

Salesman (with an air of finality) —Now, I'll tell you what to do. Take it out. Run it for a month or so. Make your own decision. Then make us an offer. THEN I'LL PUT THE WHOLE PROPOSITION BEFORE THE PROPER FEDERAL OFFICIALS AND WE'LL SEE if we can all conclude the deal with CLEAR CONSCIENCES!

Are Birds 'People'? All You Have to Do Is Watch Them at Work or at Play; Then You'll Be Convinced Some of Them Are!

By ATHELENE WATSON
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

ARE birds "people"? Why not? For they work like real people and they fill almost as many professions.

"The butcher, the baker, the candlestick-maker" of the world of men become "the butcher, the weaver, the busy street-cleaner" in the bird realm. Birdland is a veritable Greenwich Village, for butchers nest next to actors, carpenters, acrobats, divers and singers.

But who are these butchers and street cleaners? Do they exist? Yes, there really are birds which are aptly called by these names.

The northern shrike and the loggerhead shrike are called "butcher birds" because they impale their prey on thorns and barbed wire fences or hang them away in the cleft of a tree limb to be eaten later. The northern shrike looks like a masked bandit as it swoops down upon its victims, for it has a strip of black feathers extending from the eyes to the back of the head like a black mask. It flies low over the ground spotting its victims—grasshoppers, beetles, mice, snakes or even small birds. Then it turns, climbs upward before it hurtles down to the ground again in one last cruel pounce.

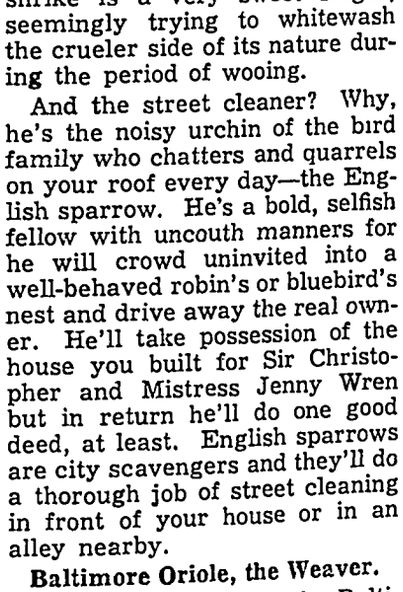
You may be sure that little Jenny Wren does NOT sing, "O, ma-ma, it's the butcher boy for me," for all of the small birds are filled with fear and run for cover when they hear the heavy rapid flapping of the shrike's wings. It is a curious fact that during the mating season the shrike is a very sweet singer, seemingly trying to whitewash the crueler side of its nature during the period of wooing.

And the street cleaner? Why, he's the noisy urchin of the bird family who chatters and quarrels on your roof every day—the English sparrow. He's a bold, selfish fellow with uncouth manners for he will crowd uninvited into a well-behaved robin's or bluebird's nest and drive away the real owner. He'll take possession of the house you built for Sir Christopher and Mistress Jenny Wren but in return he'll do one good deed, at least. English sparrows are city scavengers and they'll do a thorough job of street cleaning in front of your house or in an alley nearby.

Baltimore Oriole, the Weaver.

The weaver? That's the Baltimore oriole, a weaver by trade.

Madame Oriole is a skillful artisan. She fashions a warp of strings fastened firmly around the forked branches of a tree.



DOWNY WOODPECKER

Through this she weaves plant fibers, horsehair, string and strips of bark to make a nest shaped like a pocket-like bag. Baby orioles are lulled to sleep by each gentle breeze in their hammock in the tree-tops.

Orioles are very fond of bright colors and they are not always too scrupulous about property rights in their eagerness to gather material for a nest. A neighbor of mine was seated on the porch sorting scraps of yarn left over from a crocheted afghan. Noon came and she left the yarn in a box while she prepared lunch. When she returned the yarn had disappeared as if by magic. A month later her small son discovered the thief. High in the branches of an elm tree a mother oriole sat proudly on a colorful nest decorated with the stolen yarn!

The humming bird is an artist as well as a weaver for its nest is a thing of delicacy and beauty. The entire nest is about the size of a walnut. It is made of plant down and dried flower petals and held together by silvery spider's web covered with bits of moss. This dainty creation resembles a baby's silver-lined thimble.

There's an industrious fellow among birds who is an excellent carpenter. Nature has given the woodpecker family the tools of the carpenter's trade. Their strong beaks are shaped like chisels so they can easily bore into a tree trunk. Their long cylinder-shaped tongues end in a hard tip, barbed on both sides which can be pushed out underneath the bark of trees. Their legs are short and stout, their claws strong and sharp. Their stiff tail feathers end in sharp spines which can be pushed against the bark of trees to hold them upright as they hammer away at the trunk.

Equipped with these tools it is no trick at all to drill a neat, round hole in a tree and make a snug warm nest. In digging out these retreats, the woodpeckers go in horizontally to the center and then turn downward in an enlarged tunnel until the finished nest is the shape of a long, deep pear. The sawdust which falls while the drilling is going on makes a soft lining for the nest.

The Missus Dissents.

The woodpecker is a meticulous worker. It selects the site of its home with care. If the first attempt at excavation proves unsatisfactory, the bird abandons it and tries again. I watched a red-headed woodpecker hammering away one day at the dry limb of an apple tree. His mate, who was perched on a limb nearby, surveyed the work of her brilliant-headed spouse with a critical eye. Suddenly she darted near with a loud whining "char-r-r-" and for a few seconds the air was filled with their angry cries. He evidently had the better of the argument for she flicked away with her brown feathers ruffled indignantly.

I cannot vouch for the fact that she had pointed out a flaw in his work, but I do know that an hour later the red-head was chiseling away a few inches down the limb. After drilling in for two inches he seemed to change his mind and flew away in the same direction his mate had taken When I examined the holes, I discovered that the limb was too badly decayed and a chip had come out, making a hole in the outer wall. In the second cavity the workman had again come too near the surface and scarcely more than the bark remained as protection from the weather. No doubt, the woodpecker's flaming head drooped with shame when his triumphant wife had her chance to chirp "I told you so!"

He's a 'Swing' Addict.

Singing is, of course, the most popular profession among birds. The song sparrow is a "swing" addict. Their usual song opens with three high-pitched notes followed by complicated warbling trills but no two song sparrows sing exactly the same song.

AMERICAN CROW

The meadowlark thrills you with a clear, sweet "spring-o-the-year, spring-o-the-year" until he notices that he has a human listener. Then he will impolitely turn his back upon you to hide his conspicuous yellow breast from your prying eyes.

The rose-breasted grosbeak is the Beau Brummell of the songbirds but he is the soul of chivalry to his mate for he uses his rich whistling carol to entertain her during the nesting season. He is an example of what the well-dressed young bird is wearing for he has a handsome summer coat of black and rose. In winter he favors a duller suit of brown and rose.

Just as human singers specialize in certain fields of entertainment, such as radio, opera or vaudeville, so do the bird musicians develop their talents along one line. The mocking bird is the king of mimics. He not only imitates the voice of other songsters but improves upon the sound which he imitates.

Charlie McCarthy of Birdland.

The scarlet tanager and the wood thrush are both ventriloquists for they can "throw" their voices. I discovered this trick once when a sleepy-looking little owl in a mulberry tree apparently greeted me with a sharp "chip-churr, chip-churr." Then there was a flash of scarlet in a tree nearby and I found that a saucy tanager had used the owl as his Charlie McCarthy.

The blue jay has a cruder sense of humor and uses his power of mimicking to frighten small birds by imitating the scream of the red-shouldered hawk. This is in keeping with his role as the bad boy of birdland, a rogue and a bully who steals from other nests and "picks on" smaller birds.

Not all bird musicians choose a vocal career. The downy woodpecker prefers instrumental music. He's the drummer boy, the Gene Krupa of the bird world. For a drum he may use the stub of a dry limb about the size of one's wrist. The ideal "drum" has an outer shell that is hard and resonant with a heart decayed and gone.

The clumsy crow turns buffoon to entertain his fellow birds. He tumbles, hops, skips and turns somersaults as skillfully as any circus clown.

High-Diving Champion.

The belted kingfisher chooses water instead of land to exercise his athletic skill. He lives along ponds, lakes, rivers and small creeks for he depends entirely upon fish for food. He hovers over the water until he spies a flash of fins beneath the surface, then plunges after his prey with the accuracy of the butcher bird.

It is one of the fundamental instincts, mother love, which makes the bob white turn actress. If an intruder comes too close to her nest this clever bird pretends to be lame until she has lured her sympathetic follower far from her young.

Are birds people? I was never quite convinced until I found a catbird's nest in our orchard one spring. Held fast to the outside wall by interwoven twigs was a scrap of newspaper containing part of a poem. The title of the poem was a mute appeal "Don't Kill the Birds!"

DONOVAN'S SOLDIERS

Wild Bill Donovan, the able lawyer, who turned out to be a whiz-bang soldier, a fighting fool and a medal of honor man in the World war, is advocating something new in raising armies.

He wants us to stop sending our kids first to war. He says that the only excuse for it was that they have greater endurance in a sudden spurt of speed, though not in long, steady pulls. Since soldiers are, to a continuously greater extent, going to war on wheels and pulling mechanical levers instead of clubbing muskets, he thinks men up to 50—and even older—could do just as well.

I know what is eating Wild Bill. I have felt it gnawing me. He is reaching the age where, if we don't pass a law or something, he might have to stay out of any possible shindy himself.

Seriously, Bill's got something there. Boys scarcely more than children fight wars. There are more reasons for this than Colonel Donovan gives. One is that, where there is any element of volunteering, they are more impulsive and rush first to the recruiting sergeant. A youth has fewer responsibilities—to a family, a farm, a business, or a job.

Men in actual combat service are only a fraction of the troops used in war. Supply and other auxiliary services require more soldiers than does fighting. There is no sense in culling out a physically perfect kid and setting him to rolling pills in a medical supply department in Kalamazoo. If we relaxed physical requirements to run-of-mill standard and created classes for "special and limited military service" for the less than perfect, we would greatly reduce the drain on the best of our youth crop with no loss in military energy. We tried that toward the close of the World war and it worked.

Furthermore, if we impose no arbitrary age limits, but only limits of physical fitness, even for combat service, we shall be using greater common sense and be getting far greater economy in the use of our national manpower.

ALASKAN FRONT

A glance at the map of the North Pacific will show that we are closer to Russia than any other good neighbor except Canada and Mexico. At Bering straits, Siberia and Alaska almost touch. That is under the Arctic circle and is not a dangerous menace. But, far to the south of that, our Aleutian islands lie like stepping stones on the way to Kamchatka. The outlying Russian islands of Komandorski and Bering seem to be a mere extension of the Aleutian archipelago and are within a few miles of the American Near islands.

We have no fortification or air bases in the Aleutians, notwithstanding that they skirt the shortest of the Great Circle route between Seattle and either Japan or the Siberian coasts and that enemy air bases there could threaten the whole North Pacific and our main defensive line—Alaska, Hawaii and Panama.

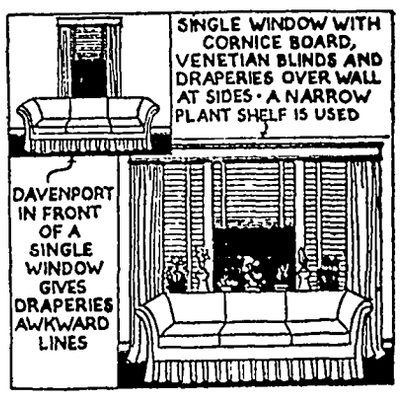
It is a threatening and dangerous situation. I know of no professional authority that does not agree that, purely for defensive purposes, we must guard this flank. The army has authority for an auxiliary air base at Fairbanks, Alaska, but the proposed main operating air base is at anchorage at the head of Cook inlet. This will require $14,000,000 to complete and urgently and immediately demands $4,000,000 to start.

The strategists of the house appropriations committee "economized" here, while refusing to do so to one billions of vote-getting handouts. They blacked-out the anchorage. They "economized" also on reserve airplanes for the army cutting the number asked from 476 to 57. Part of this cut the war department approved in view of the increased foreign purchases of military types, but it did not do so as to 166 planes of a type the need for which was not lessened by expanded airplane production capacity.

Venetian Blinds to Simulate Windows

By RUTH WYETH SPEARS

HAVE you ever tried placing your davenport on the side of the room where there was a single window? You probably found that it did not look well, because the back was just high enough to give the draperies an awkward cut-off appearance, as shown in the upper sketch. The lower sketch shows how a friend of mine solved this problem.



SINGLE WINDOW WITH CORNICE BOARD, VENETIAN BLINDS AND DRAPERIES OVER WALL AT SIDES · A NARROW PLANT SHELF IS USED
DAVENPORT IN FRONT OF A SINGLE WINDOW GIVES DRAPERIES AWKWARD LINES

There are no windows under those lowered blinds. A painted box-like cornice board was made about 2 feet longer than the davenport and was fastened to the top of the frame of the one window. The venetian blinds and the rods for the draperies were fastened inside this. A narrow shelf for plants just the length of the davenport back was fastened securely to the window sill. The flowers increase the illusion that there are three windows and add a cheerful note of color.

THE TRUTH SIMPLY TOLD

Today's popularity of Doan's Pills, after many years of world-wide use, surely must be accepted as evidence of satisfactory use. And favorable public opinion supports that of the able physicians who test the value of Doan's under exacting laboratory conditions. These physicians, too, approve every word of advertising you read, the objective of which is only to recommend Doan's Pills as a good diuretic treatment for disorder of the kidney function and for relief of the pain and worry it causes.

If more people were aware of how the kidneys must constantly remove waste that cannot stay in the blood without injury to health, there would be better understanding of why the whole body suffers when kidneys lag, and diuretic medication would be more often employed.

Burning, scanty or too frequent urination sometimes warn of disturbed kidney function. You may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feel weak, nervous, all played out.

Use Doan's Pills. It is better to rely on a medicine that has won world-wide acclaim than on something less favorably known. Ask your neighbor!

GONE WITH THE WIND . . . .

. . . and so did my buck and twelve cents! How did I like the picture? It would have made a good two-bit show if you want my honest opinion of it. The story was nothing to write home about, and I have seen many twenty-five cent shows that had a better story and nicer scenrey . . . for instance "Suwanee River," and "Old Kentucky."

"Gone With The Wind" would suit me better if it were cut down to a regular size feature picture. Hundreds of feet of film are run showing the same thing and it got tiresome. I think if most were really honest about giving their opinion of "Gone With The Wind" they would say they went just to keep up with the Joneses, and to see what a $1.12 picture show is really like! They hate to admit they got stung.

THE EARLY BIRD RUNS INTO A SNAG! . . . .

Woodpeckers. or Yellow Flickers have a bad habit of finding a place early in the morning to hammer out a snare drum solo with their cast-iron beaks that is very annoying to those who want to sleep. Such an incident took place at the Fred Ridder residence the past week. A Flicker got in the habit of drumming on the garage roof every morning promptly at 5:00 o'clock, with the result that the unwelcome noise disturbed the Ridder household, awakening them from peaceful slumber.

Mrs. Ridder told her brother Ben Lau, of the Flicker's early morning drumming and Ben set about to perfect a scheme that would discourage the Flicker's habit. Result Ben rigged up a car filled with pebbles, attacehd a long string over a pulley arrangement. ran the string through a window to Mrs Ridder's bedroom Next morning when the Flicker came for his five o'clock work-out and awakened Mrs. Ridder, she gave the string a few tugs scaring the Flicker out of a year's growth. He came back an hour later . . . string was pulled again, the car rattled and the Flicker took out in a hurry. Mrs, Ridder won the battle and the Ridder household again enjoys early morning slumber!

'AIN'T IT THE TRUTH!" . .

Here's one that Wellemeye handed me the other day and which he clipped from one of his trade journals. Here's the yarn, if you can stand it·

A Modern Son of Balaan Apostrophizes His Mule

"Over the South Carolina hill trailed a black man behind a mule drawing a plow. Said the man to the mule:

"Bill, you are a mule, the son of a jackass, and I am a man, made in the image of God. Yet here we work, hitched up together year in and year cut. I often wonder if you work for me or if I work for you. Verily, I think it a partnership between a mule and a fool For surely I work as hard as you if not harder. Plowing or cultivating, we cover the same distance but you do it on four legs and I on two I, therefore, do twice as much work per leg as you do.

"Soon we'll be preparing for a corn crop. When the corn is harvested I give one-third to the landlord for being so kind as to let us use this small speck of God's universe. One-third goes to you and the balance is mine You consume all your portion with the exception of the cobs, while I divide mine among seven children, six broke relatives, two ducks and a banker. If we both need shoes, you get 'em.

"Bill, you're getting the best of me and I ask, is it fair for a mule the son of a jackass, to swindle a man—lord of creation—out of his substance?

"You only help to plow and cultivate the ground, I alone must cut, shock and husk the corn while you look over the pasture fence and hee-haw at me.

"All Fall and most of the winter the whole family, from Granny to the baby, picks cotton to help raise money to pay taxes and buy a new harness and pay the interest on the mortgage and keep you. And what do you care about the mortgage. Not a damn, you onery cuss! I even have to do the worrying about the mortgage on your ungrateful hide.

"About the only time I am your better is on election day, for I can vote and you can't. And after election I realize I was fully as great a jackass as your papa. Verily, I am prone to wonder if politics were made for men or jackasses, or to make jackasses of men.

"And that ain't all, Bill. When you are dead, that's the end of you. But me? The parson tells me that when I die, I gotta go to hell forever. That is, Bill, if I don't do just as he says. And most of what he says keeps me from getting any kick outta life.

"Tell me, Willyum, considering these right, how can you keep a straight face and look so dumb and solemn?"

Teachers Entertained

Mrs. Lena Schroeder entertained all the lady teachers at a party at her home Tuesday evening. Games were played after which the hostess served a lunch.

PUT SUDAN PASTURE ON WELL PREPARED SEEDBED

Sudan grass should be seeded on a well-prepared seedbed about May 15 to June 15. A rate of 15 to 25 pounds per acre is recommended by Extension Service agronomists at Iowa State College.

When seeded following rye, the rye should be plowed about May 15 so that the moisture may accumulate for the sudan. Usually sudan will be ready to graze 6 weeks after seeding.

Census takers whose job is counting beaks and tails. 'NORTHWEST PASSAGE" COMES TO SCREEN WITH A GREAT STARRING CAST Bringing to the screen, Kenneth Roberts' adventure novel which was the largest selling book in the nation month after month, Northwest Passage" opens at the Avery Theatre next Sunday for a three day engagement with Spencer Tracy starred and Robert Young and Walter Brennan in leading feature roles Filmed entirely in Technicolor, and made after six weeks of work in the wilds of Idaho and several weeks of studio filming, "Northwest Passage" is reported to be the greatest story of physical fortitude ever attempted by the screen

Following the novel, which first ran in the Saturday Evening Post before becoming a best-seller, the picture tells the story of a courageous, hardy band of Rogers' Rangers who in 1756 set forth on a secret mission to wipe out a village of marauding Indians. Among the Rangers are Robert Young as Langdon Towne, young artist, and Walter Brennan as Hunk Marriner, a seasoned woodsman

The picture is believed to afford Tracy, Academy Award winner for the past two years, his greatest screen role It will skyrocket Young to stardom and gives Brennan a role comparable to those which have twice won him awards for best supporting roles of the year

Muskrat.

Charles Erickson, Corwith school janitor, found a muskrat in the school furnace room one evening. Unable to catch it, he closed the door on the animal for the night The next morning he found that the muskrat had gnawed a hole in the furnace room door and was firmly stuck, unable to move either way. School boys restored it to a swamp east of Corwith.

Dates Wrong.

An Avoca man took his wife and two neighbor ladies to Harlan to see "Gone With The Wind," let them out near the theatre and returned home to play pinochle. Unfortunately, the ladies had their dates wrong and had an unusually long evening of window-shopping, pop corn eating and soda drinking, killing the four hours required for the famous movie. "Gone With The Wind" was not what they talked about on the way home.

Killed Hens.

Inspecting her hen nests one day last week, Mrs. Russell Roberts found two dead hens in two of the nests, a live raccoon curled up in the third. The raccoon proved to be one which had been released by the game reserve board.

Receiving no answer to his hail, he started to kick in some of the jail windows and in less time than it takes to tell it, was picked up and readmitted to the institution, for a longer visit than he intended

AROUND K. H. S.

All the Senior books are again being put on the shelves till next year, when they will again be taken by some one else to gain a little more knowledge.

The semester tests were quite difficult in many ways. They made one use his mental ability

Mrs. Leppo Wessels and Mrs Wm Wenz gave a demonstration Thursday on how wool is spun into yarn. All the high school and some of the grades had the privilege of witnessing it Some of the teachers and students tried their luck in spinning, results were not issued, but we imagine they enjoyed their experience.

Marie Schmidt is alrealy to take a power dive, we mean in an airplane She was one of the class who went floating through the air on skip day.

GUESS WHAT! The Senior class went on a skip day. The sophisicated group took a tour of the Capitol City

We started at 6 30 Thursday morning, and our first stop was at Ames. Here we visited the beautiful Iowa State College Everyone was very much impressed with the beautiful campus.

Our first place of interest in Des Moines was, of course, the State Capitol After the long climb to the dome, there were a "few" complaints about the legs aching. Wonder why?

An interesting hour was spent at the Historical Building, and then we all had a fine dinner

In the afternoon, the airport drew quite a fascination, and four of our brave seniors even went so far as to go for a ride in an airplane.

Then we were off to the Army Post. This interested the "girls" very much. There was a basebal' game going on and we watched it for some time.

The rest of the afternoon was spent in shopping and whatever interested the class.

Both classes got a rating of nine in their arithmetic self-testing drill on Thursday.

Jeanne Trumbell's birthday is in August, but she passed a treat on Wednesday, her brother's birthday.

We tried to get perfect scores on our last weekly spelling test. Those who succeeded were Jimmie, Jeanne, Donald, Ronald, Mavis, Bobby, Robert, Harlan and Ruth Bell; all of the sixth graders. The following fifth graders had perfect scores: Roger R., Peggy, Roger B., Elizabeth, Arlene, Clarence, Carol, Mary Lou, Phyllis, Dean and Esther.

1 teaspoon cinnamon
½ teaspoon nutmeg
1 teaspoon allspice
¾ cup sour milk
½ cup citron, cut
1 cup raisins
1 cup nut meats, broken
1 teaspoon vanilla extract

Cream butter, add sugar, and beat thoroughly. Add eggs (well beaten). Mix and sift together all dry ingredients, reserving ¼ cup of flour. Add flour mixture and sour milk alternately —beginning with the flour mixture. Flour, citron, raisins, and nuts with the ¼ cup of flour which was reserved and add to the cake mixture. Add vanilla extract. Place in well-greased, small tube pan. Bake 40 to 50 minutes in a moderate oven (350 degrees).

Mix all ingredients together thoroughly. Pour mixture into freezing container of modern ice cream freezer. (To allow for expansion fill not more than ⅔ full.) Assemble and cover. Then pack mixture of cracked ice and rock salt (use 3 parts ice to 1 part of salt by volume) around the freezing container. Turn crank steadily about 5 minutes. When mixture becomes difficult to turn, remove cover carefully, take out dasher, and pack down evenly with a spoon. Cover ice cream with wax paper and replace cover. Draw off water and replenish ice and salt mixture. Cover and allow to harden at least one hour before serving.

Twenty-Four Hour Pike's Peak.
(Serves 6)

Filling.

4 egg yolks
½ cup sugar
3 tablespoons lemon juice
2 teaspoons lemon rind (grated)

Beat egg yolks until thick and lemon-colored. Add remaining ingredients and cook in double boiler until thick, stirring constantly. Cool. Whip 1 cup cream and spread half the cream on the cooled meringue. Cover with lemon filling and top with remaining cream. Chill.

Now is the time for each foresighted homemaker to add to her own collection of favorite recipes, some new and unusual ones which are sure to please her family. Star Dust STAGE SCREEN RADIO

By VIRGINIA VALE
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

THERE'S a superstition in Hollywood that an actor cast as a newspaper reporter goes right on into bigger and better roles. Robert Paige believes in it firmly, because it's worked for him.

He was brought into pictures from radio because of his ability as a singer—and then he was given one part after another in which he had no chance to sing. He seemed to be stuck in melodramatic roles. Then he was cast as a newspaper reporter in "Golden Gloves," and again played a reporter in "Opened by Mistake." And now he's booked for the leading male role in Paramount's "Dancing on a Dime," a musical comedy, in which he'll play opposite Grace MacDonald—and will sing and dance, at last!

At 75, May Robson has no idea how many roles she has played on stage and screen, but she's ready to tackle her newest one, that of Ellen Drew's grandmother, in "Texas Rangers Ride Again" It's one of the most strenuous parts of her long career, that of a salty old lady who looks upon modern Texas peace officers as poor successors to the ones she knew in her youth.

—*—

You'll be able to see Pat O'Malley, of radio's "Alec Templeton Time," on the screen before long. His first picture will be "Captain Caution," in which he will play a Cockney sailor who is captured during the War of 1812—and in which he'll sing the "Apple Song," which he has already performed on the Templeton program.

—*—

When you see "A Night at Earl Carroll's" you'll also see what was, two years ago, the community's most expensive night club. Remember when it opened, with a special section for movie stars? Nowadays it's a dime-and-dance emporium in the evenings, but during the days it's been returned to its former glory by Paramount. Ken Murray and Rose Hobart play the leads in the picture, Cobina and Brenda, radio's comedy team, and some of the much publicized Earl Carroll beauties will support them, and Earl Carroll, besides acting as producer, will play himself.

The Philadelphia-LaScala Opera company wants Deanna Durbin to make her operatic career under its auspices next season. James Melton's already signed with the company.

Ben Grauer has grabbed off the most coveted announcing assignment in radio. He's been selected to introduce Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt when she takes the air. Oddly enough, he and she will be in studios hundreds of miles apart, since she will be on the go most of the time; she'll broadcast from a city convenient to her schedule, and he'll chime in from a New York studio.

He is an energetic, jovial young man, who, since he joined NBC 10 years ago, has been working toward liberating the announcer from his stiff-necked, plush-voiced make-up. He's been trying to sound like a human being, and deserves a medal for the way that he has succeeded, and inspired other announcers to unbend.

Radio's "Uncle Ezra," (Pat Barrett) a confirmed bachelor in his National Barn Dance air show, found on his arrival in Hollywood recently that the screen expects him to have a wife. In the Bob Burns picture, "Comin' Round the Mountain," "Uncle Ezra" will find himself wedded to a movie actress, whether he likes it or not.

—*—

Nine years and 49 weeks ago Joan Blondell decided that she might as well leave Hollywood and go back to New York, because she'd never get anywhere in pictures. She was working in "Sinner's Holiday," with James Cagney, and she made up her mind that she'd stick it out till the picture was finished.

But she never got away. In fact, she's been so much in demand that she's had only a few trips to New York to do shopping, and the one she made with Dick Powell on their over-ballyhooed honeymoon.

JEREMIAH DENOUNCES FALSE PROPHETS

LESSON TEXT—Jeremiah 23 21-32.
GOLDEN TEXT—Prove all things; hold fast that which is good.—I Thessalonians 5 21

Tickling the vanity and pleasing the ears of ungodly people with words of flattery and false comfort, giving them the assurance of peace and prosperity in the very pursuit of their sin, did not begin with the false prophets of the twentieth century. Six hundred years before Christ, Jeremiah the prophet had to contend with such false teachers.

His manner of dealing with them is of great interest to us, for essentially the false prophets of that day used the same methods and had the same false message that characterize their descendants of today, the so-called modernistic religious liberals who are busy everywhere attempting to undermine the faith of God's children in His Word. They are revealed as being destitute of divine authority, without a real message, and under the disfavor and subject to the judgment of God. They are

I. Without Divine Commission (vv. 21-22).

"I have not sent these prophets"—that should have been sufficient for the people of Judah. A man who is not sent by God has no word from heaven, no help for needy humanity. He is worse than an admittedly secular teacher or philosopher, for he claims to speak with divine authority and yet has only the disappointing impotence of a liar and a fraud

The reason Judah listened to them was because they so eloquently hushed the condemning voice of their own consciences, assuring them that all was well, when, as a matter of fact, everything was wrong. Men listen to the same kind of teachmg today for the very same reason.

II. Without a Divine Message (vv. 23-29)

These false prophets may delude men, but they have not fooled God. He is not a finite being, limited to this earth (v. 23). He looks on men from the far off viewpoint of heaven and judges by His own high and holy standards.

Nor can they hide from Him (v. 24). God hears the word spoken in the academic shelter of a college classroom, secretly poisoning the young person's heart against the faith of his father and mother. A day of judgment also awaits those who in their public utterances use the phraseology of orthodoxy, while in private they undermine and destroy Christian faith.

If a man is foolish enough to suppose that the dreamings of his own mind and heart will help anyone, let him be honest enough to call them just that; namely, dreams (vv. 25-28). But God will assuredly not hold those men guiltless who try to pass off their own philosophies as bearing the approval of God; who would have people honor their assemblies as Christian churches, when they are at best only social or intellectual gatherings designed to magnify man rather than Christ.

Note in verse 29 that the Word of God is like the fire that consumes and purifies, and also like the hammer, that breaks up the rocky heart of man.

III. Without Divine Favor and Blessing (vv. 30-32).

God is against every false prophet. Small wonder that there is the savour of death in their speaking and their works. There is no divine power in their message and no holy dynamic to enable people to respond to their admonitions. Prominent modernists are decrying in our day the fact that their cultured essays and polished philosophies are not reaching the hearts of men and are failing to transform lives. At the same time, humble preachers and teachers of God's Word, sometimes in hidden and remote places, are rejoicing as they see the transforming grace of God come upon lives as a result of their simple proclamation of the gospel of grace. Keep on, brethren; God is with you.

Observe what God calls the false prophets—thieves (v. 30) and liars (v. 32). Hard words, but they come from One who is all-knowing, who judges rightly and in love.

Like the Shadow

I am gone like the shadow when it declineth; I am tossed up and down as the locust. My knees are weak through fasting; my flesh faileth of fatness; I became also a reproach unto them; when they looked upon me they shaked their heads.—Psalm 109:23-25.

It Doth Not Yet Appear

You are not what you ought to be, and you are not what you can be. You may rise yet, and fight a good fight yet, and be a good man once more, after the likeness of God who made you, and Christ who died for you!—Charles Kingsley.

Patterns SEWING CIRCLE

BUSY mothers with lively little girls in the 2-to-8 size range can solve several important problems with this one clever, very complete pattern (8674). It includes a puff-sleeved blouse with drawstrings, panties, and a pinafore frock that can be used, without the blouse, as a sunback outdoor fashion for summer play, too. The whole ensemble is adorable, with a touch of quaintness that adds much charm to its simplicity. You'll find it one of the best little-girl fashions you ever discovered, and the source of many different daytime outfits for your small daughter.

A linen or gingham pinafore, with mull or dimity blouse, will be pretty for general wear. Plaid or striped seersucker will be practical for the pinafore when she wears it as a sunback frock—can be tubbed so easily, and needn't be ironed. The step-by-step sew chart gives complete, detailed directions.

Pattern No. 8674 is designed for sizes 2, 4, 6 and 8 years. Size 4 requires 2⅛ yards of 35-inch material for pinafore and panties; ⅞ yard for blouse, 2⅝ yards ribbon. Send order to:

Red Cross Prisoners

An international treaty provides that members of a Red Cross unit captured by belligerents are not to be treated as prisoners of war but are to be returned to their own country as soon as military exigencies permit. While detained, they are to care for the sick and wounded behind the enemy's lines and, in compensation, be given the same treatment, pay and quarters that they receive at home.—Collier's.

AROUND THE HOUSE

A teaspoon of vinegar beaten into boiled frosting when flavoring is added will keep it from being brittle or breaking when cut.

Your stockings will not ladder if you add a few drops of vinegar to the water when you wash them for the first time. It strengthens the weave.

When you boil potatoes and want them to be floury, put a heaped teaspoonful of sugar in the boiling water. They will taste delicious.

To clean bed springs use a long-handled, moderate-sized bottle brush. Dip the brush in hot water quite often. Such a brush gets into corners much more easily than the dish mop which ordinarily is used for this purpose.

If you like scented linens and use scented soaps store the soap, unwrapped, in the linen drawers or closet. Sachets, too, lend pleasing odors.

Mildew can be avoided if damp articles are never placed in clothes hampers. Dry all clothing and household linen thoroughly. Don't let it collect in damp basements, dark closets or other spots that are likely to be damp.

TAKING CHANCES CAUSES WRECKS

No driver in the world could safely pass in a situation like this. A restless driver "taking a chance" probably would involve three cars in a serious accident. One must be 100% accurate in judging the speed of all three cars in a situation of this kind—and most people aren't that accurate. That's why it's always best to stay behind until the road ahead is clear enough for passing safely.

Auxiliary Ladies Again Sponsoring Poppy Sale Here Saturday

LARGE CROWD ATTENDED COMMENCEMENT EXERCISES THURSDAY EVE.

James W. Fay Gave The Address; Two Students Honored With Awards

Commencement exercises and the annual school and community picbrought to a close a successful year for the Klemme Public Schools last week. The only damper on the closing festivities was the one-sided baseball victory gained by Garner at the expense of the Shamrock nine on picnic day

James W Fay, Emmetsburg attorney gave a forceful and inspiring address to the graduating class at the commencement exercises Thursday evening. His address entitled "Destiny's Shadow," was directed principally to the graduates. He pointed out that each one was master of his own destiny and that the achieving of any goal in life was a matter of determination and hard work toward that goal. Mr. Fay's interest in athletics, esperially those of the University of Iowa, was much in evidence in his talk. He also referred frequently to the present war situation for which he urged preparation to the limit for a war of defense, but complete isolation from foreign entanglements.

Valedictorian and Salutorian

Elsie Ward and Howard Schoenwetter were valedictorian and salutatorian respectively in this year's class. They made the customary short addresses that accompany these honors and received many compliments for the composition and delivery of their talks These two people were also each presented with two scholarships and a medal in recognition of their outstanding work during their four years in high school.

Special mention was also made at the commencement exercises of those studnets who had been neither absent nor tardy during the school year. An outstanding record of eleven years of school attendance without an absence or tardiness had been achieved by Ruth Stille, and this fact was given special notice.

A surprise number on the program was the presentation of two gifts to Marvin C. Batchelder, Klemme band director for the past two years, who will teach at Audubon next year. Dorance Grange presented Mr. Batchelder with a coffee table, which was the gift of the school music students; and Billy Zabilka presented him with a watch chain and knife from the sophomore class of which he was sponsor. Billy explained that the chain was to keep him connected with the sophomore class and the knife was to help him cut down assignments for his class next year.

Klemme's Scholastic Standing

All in all, Klemme's first school year in her new building has been highly successful. Not only have outstanding success scored in the outside activities of athletics and music, but the scholastic standing has also been definitely inmproved. Reports just received from the state academic tests show that Klemme ranks in the upper one-fourth of all schools tested and approximately in the upper one-fifth among all schools in our enrollment class. This represents a thirty percentile improvement over last year. In other words, last year forty-five per cent of all schools taking the tests ranked lower than Klemme. This year seventy-five per cent ranked lower. This is a rather outstanding improvement.

FORMER RESIDENT DIES

ANNUAL POPPY DAY SALE WILL BE HELD IN KLEMME SATURDAY

The ladies of the Klemme Legion-Auxiliary Unit will hold their annual Poppy Sale on Saturday, May 25th. The ladies will sell Poppies on the street, places of business and resident section as in former years.

Buy a Poppy and wear it on Memorial Day.

History of The Poppy

The first instance of wearing poppies in honor of the war dead occurred in New York City, November 9, 1918, when Miss Moina Michael of Athens, Georgia, who was serving on the staff of the Y.M.C.A. Overseas Headquarters, distributed poppies to men attending the twenty-fifth conference of the Y.M.C.A.

The poppy was first sold publicly on the streets of Milwaukee in connection with the reception of the Thirty-second Division, in June of 1919, and was sold by American Legion Posts of Milwaukee just before Memorial Day, 1920, for the purpose of securing funds for disabled veterans.

At the inspiration of Miss Michael, the poppy was adopted as the official memorial flower by the Georgia department of the American Legion in August 1920. The Georgia delegates were instructed to present a resolution to the American Legion National Convention in Cleveland that fall of 1920 to make the flower the official memorial flower of that national organization.

The poppy was then made the memorial flower of The American Legion by a resolution adopted in the national convention on September 27 and 29, 1920, in Cleveland, Ohio.

At first, silk poppies, made in France by French widows and orphans were used. In 1922 the first American-made poppies were made in the hospitals of Minnesota.

Sunbonnet Sue No Longer Pencil-Shy; She Handles Farm Financial Problems

By
GRACE McILRATH ELLIS
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

United States census reports are expected to confirm agricultural authorities' statements that thousands of rural women have replaced their husbands as active farm business managers. In increasing numbers these women are handling economic and financial problems of the farm. The following article is illustrative of women's new place in the farm life of the nation.

Pride in their work is written on the faces of these Four-H club winners in a food preparation contest. In addition to teaching home economics, Four-H clubs are teaching girls like this how to keep books, study markets and assume financial management of the farm. The girls are, left to right, Maxine Koons, Fairmont, Minn.; Orr-Lyda J. Brown, Eugene, Ore.; Catherine Barnes, Moultrie, Fla., and Betty Freeman, Pikeville, Tenn.

WHEN I was growing up on the farm our most interesting neighbors were the Fosters. Pa Foster had six daughters, a fascinating black money pouch, which pulled up with thongs like a knitting bag, and the weight of the family financial enterprise on his own thin shoulders.

The Foster women picked peaches, made tubs of butter, even lent a hand on occasions with the field work. But when there was a decision to be made involving money, they ran to Pa. He either whipped out the old money pouch. Or didn't.

When Pa died, Mrs. Foster beat a dazed path from bank to courthouse to my father's door, completely enveloped in that fog of gloom properly associated with widows of her day. Until old friends sighed and courthouse clerks ducked behind bars at her coming.

Molly Has the Money Pouch.

Today a son, John, farms the old Foster place. If the money pouch still exists John has long since given it to his wife, Molly. Molly is the clerical half of the farming partnership. In a downstairs den she keeps books, checks bank statements—does secretarial work for the business.

Doris Montei, Michigan Four-H club girl, knows how to raise sheep—and she knows, too, how to market them. The study of markets and marketing conditions is one phase of new farm activities for rural women.

Who knows what the month's cream checks total and when the next Land Bank payment comes due?—Molly! Who dials in radio market reports and relays significant ups and downs out to the feed lots?—Molly! Who mails insurance payments, writes monthly rural electric co-operative checks—does for the family enterprise, in fact, what a paid secretary would do for the boss of a comparable urban business—plus shouldering partnership share in farm decisions?—Sun-bonnety, taffy-haired Molly.

Molly Part of Modern Movement.

And there's nothing startling, farm leaders say, about the Foster arrangement. It's duplicated in upwards of 100,000 homes the country over. Molly's no ambitious domestic with her eye on the family financial pants. She's part of a movement.

For a year now I have been delving into the movement's history, parrying questions with leaders and poking through piles of reports. And I'm amazed at the extent to which the country woman of today—particularly the young country wife—is up to her neck in business.

Neither genius nor wishful thinking catapulted her into the new position. She's been trained for it. The economic avalanche of '29 uncovered her responsibility. Numerous agencies have stepped in to help her meet it.

The most astonishing piece of work has been done by the Home Management divisions of the various state extension departments. Some 150,000 rural women have flocked to the courses in business and economic education offered during the last 10 years by three-fourths of the states to rural homemakers' study groups. (Michigan had 4,240 women enrolled last year; Iowa expects to reach 15,000 in '39.)

Business Legalities Draw Interest.

Exact procedures vary considerably, but practically all states cover three phases: "Making the Family Money Plan" (including practice in accounting), "Economic Facts Which Affect Farm Women" and "Business and Legal Procedures a Farm Woman Should Know." Some states offer study, too, in taxation and government.

Work in accounting is based on the need for correlating records and decisions of both farm and home. Effectiveness is indicated by the fact that in '38 and '39, 121 heretofore pencil-shy housewives rigged up business corners and started assuming some secretarial duties for the farm-home enterprise.

But it's the dive into business legalities which really brings sparkle to wifely eyes. Women love it! Women everywhere—in Georgia, in Maine, in Kansas, and Louisiana. They love knowing how a contract is made—a check—wills, deeds, mortgages, abstracts. They like the practice given in reading and signing legal papers.

Credit Works Two Ways.

Of the 200,000 4-H girls who were wrinkling foreheads over personal expense accounts back in '30 and '32 an amazing number are cropping up among today's outstanding keepers of husbands' farm records and books.

In 14 states an estimated 50,000 women have since '36 taken advantage of work in the legal phases of credit and loan supplied through the Family Credit division of the Farm Security administration. Sound credit, the women are taught, is credit that is "good" for both borrower and lender. A justifiable mortgage is one based on no less than 12 months of actual farm records. And "the farm woman, unlike the city woman, is so important a factor in her husband's business success that an appraiser's first rule is 'get acquainted with the wife.'"

Outstanding example of the let's-tackle-this-together spirit which ripens in such communities is the Benton county, Iowa, "Recent-Wed" group.

To Jimmy Green, agricultural agent, in one of the Cedar Valley counties, had come news of a young farm friend "cleaned out." Jimmy knew secretly because of solo responsibility—an inadequate wife. Problems of young farm operators are similar. Would the young couples in his district enjoy getting together now and then to pool problems, shoot questions at bankers, landlords, management experts. He planned such a meeting, invited in all couples in the county under 35, expected 50, got 400.

'Hopeful Sign of Age.'

Benton county "Recent-Wed" meetings are now the amazement of community elders, "the most exciting and hopeful gatherings I've ever attended," a visiting banker told me. It's not the subjects discussed—"What'll we spend our money for?", "How can we get adequate credit?", "How about landlord-tenant relationship?", nor the experts attracted, but the way the women take part in the thing, partnership style, without self-consciousness on either side—just as though their grandmothers had been doing it. It's a thrill—one of the hopeful signs of the age.

"I used to think family discussions about money were bad-stuff," John Foster told me recently (He and Molly are Benton county products, leaders in the "Recent-Wed" group.) "But when you do it co-operatively and base it on facts—they're interesting as the dickens. Farming looks to me like the biggest co-operative on earth—family co-operative. Soon as the children can hold pennies we're taking them into it. But it's the little woman," he grinned, "who has a natural born knack for handling the money end of it."

Independent Iceland Places Confidence in Premier's Rule

ICELAND'S recent decision to place complete governmental control in the hands of Premier Hermann Jonasson and his cabinet has served to focus world attention on that small nation which has had no foreign war in more than a thousand years.

The 120,000 people of Iceland have never wanted a monarchy, and were not satisfied with the dual role played by His Majesty Christian X, king of Denmark, who also served as king of Iceland. When Denmark was taken by Germany, Iceland's Althing (World's oldest parliament) voted not to depose their king, but that "having regard for the fact that the situation now created makes it impossible for His Majesty the King of Iceland to execute the royal power," it shall be vested "until further notice" in Icelandic Premier Hermann Jonasson and his cabinet.

Hermann Jonasson

Premier Jonasson is Iceland's strongest figure. In addition to being president of the council of Iceland, he is also minister of justice and of agriculture. In 1929 Jonasson was chief of police of Reykjavik, nation's capital, where more than a quarter of the total population is concentrated.

In 1934 he was elected to the Althing, and that same year became premier.

Jonasson has been termed "Iceland's muscleman." As strong physically as he is politically, for many years he kept winning the Icelandic wrestling championship in Norse games handed down through the centuries from the Vikings.

Icelanders are proud of their nation's history. Since its settlement in the Ninth century, Iceland, for the most part, has had a representative form of government. The Althing was established in 930, more than 800 years before the infant United States declared its independence. This assembly, comprised largely of fisherfolk and farmers, has been in continuous existence ever since, with the exception of a "blackout" between 1800 and 1843.

Though ties of blood, culture and economic life have been linked closely to Europe in the past, Iceland has turned more and more toward the West. Shortly before the German invasion of Denmark, the island obtained a $1,000,000 credit loan from the United States for the purchase of wheat, stock feed, rye and gasoline.

Trade figures of the past few years give Great Britain first place in Iceland's import-export books. Denmark ranked second as a source of supply, and German business, expanding rapidly, captured third place. Last year the United States ranked fourth as an Iceland customer. Purchases of cod liver oil boosted United States purchases.

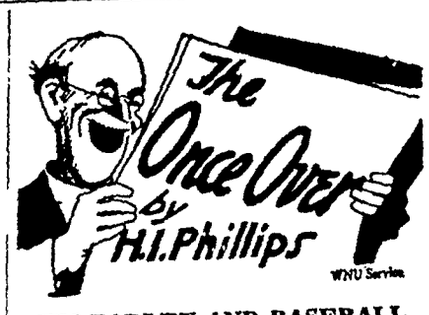
Iceland has no illiteracy, no jails, no army, no navy, no air force and no national debt. Iceland has a balanced budget, rich fishing and fish-production industry, and six sheep to every Icelander.

Table-Cloth Penmen Prove Business Is Picking Up

CHICAGO.—Take it from A. A. McVittie, National Restaurant association head, business is better.

McVittie doesn't prove it in this instance, although he says he could, by citing surveys of sales gains in his own industry.

The answer, he says, is the increasing trend among restaurant patrons of the male species to write on table cloths.



JIM FARLEY AND BASEBALL

JIM FARLEY, chairman of the Democratic national committee and postmaster general, is reported among others interested in an attempt to buy the New York Yanks. Jim is reported in some quarters as declining to comment and in others as denying the story, but we can all understand how, after the last seven years, it would seem to him to be out where it wasn't necessary to depend on rumor to find who was pitching.

Jim was a baseball player in his youth back in Haverstraw, N. Y., and all his experience since must have convinced him more than once that one inning in the diamond is more refreshing than decades in politics.

For one thing the rules remain the same. Nobody thinks it would be better if the player got four strikes instead of three, there are no suggestions that three balls should entitle a player to walk, and nowhere is it proposed that all unemployed shortstops be sent to a Federal Shortstop Camp.

Jim has announced that his name will positively go before the Democratic convention as a candidate for the presidency. He would have two strikes on all the other candidates if he could bring the Yanks into the convention hall.

What chance would a candidate depending wholly on a voice, a program and a record have against one who could face the convention with the Number One ball club, a host of loyal rooters and a new type of windup?

We can even see Jim in the White House, getting the people's minds back to baseball and away from slumps, economic experiments and programs to remodel society. We can see him with Bill Dickey replacing Secretary Ickes, Frank Crosetti on Harry Hopkins' job and Charlie Ruffing playing Madam Perkins' old position.

Jim, as a real baseball man, would have a deep regard for the Immortal Bambino, the former Yank star, and would perhaps get the Babe on the bench of the Supreme court. He would see that the NLRB got at least some pitchers with a change of pace. And he would stop anybody in the administration from using the "bean ball" deliberately.

He might retain the fireside chat idea, but if so he would include the baseball scores and a short talk on the league situation.

And—who can tell?—he might arrange to have Joe DiMaggio write "My Day."

There is a certain excitement in wondering how tough a cop will be. The day when a motorcycle cop says sweetly, "Pardon me, but would you mind pulling over to the curb? I have an idea you have broken the speed regulations, sir," we will get even. We will stop speeding. So there!

DOAN'S PILLS

Eighty Years Ago Chicago's Wigwam Was the Scene of an Historic Event: Lincoln's Nomination for Presidency

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

"MR. CHAIRMAN, I wish to announce that the Ohio delegation transfers four votes from Mr. Chase to Abraham Lincoln."

Eighty years ago these few words touched off a thunderous round of applause and sent word speeding across the nation that Abraham Lincoln was the Republican choice to run for President of the United States.

The scene was the Republican Wigwam in Chicago, where delegates had gathered from 24 states to choose their candidates for President and vice president. Now, 80 years later, on May 18, Republicans of Chicago are holding a commemorative ceremony in the building which stands on the site of the Wigwam, to mark this momentous occasion four decades ago.

The Chicago of 80 years ago was a metropolis of 109,260 persons, according to the census taken in June of 1860. The city was outranked by seven others in size—New York, Philadelphia, St. Louis, Baltimore, Boston, New Orleans and Cincinnati. It was very much of a frontier town and its reputation was such that one of the leading candidates for the Republican nomination, William Henry Seward of New York, came to the city with a "bodyguard of plug-uglies," to defend himself from the uncouth natives.

Seward and his delegation arrived with extreme confidence. They could hardly believe that a man from Illinois would stand much chance of being nominated for the presidency, despite the record of honesty, integrity and sincerity which Abraham Lincoln had built. But he was a "backwoodsman" and uncouth, so the Seward crowd was not much worried.

Following two days of convention routine, the delegates got down to the job of selecting candidates. The Seward men were out parading and whooping it up on the streets for their candidate. When they reached the Wigwam they found the place jammed with friends of Lincoln and barely managed to get in.

Seward's Men Confident.

There was little abatement of the Seward confidence when the roll was called for the first ballot. The vote showed that out of the 466 votes cast, Seward had 173½, Lincoln 102, and the rest were scattered among a dozen favorite sons. It took 234 votes to nominate, and the Seward supporters were confident that after the routine of voting for favorite sons was out of the way, the swing would be to their man.

The second ballot was taken and the count showed a shift to Lincoln rather than to the Easterner. Seward had 184½ and Lincoln 181. The Lincoln delegates worked strenuously before the third ballot, and the Chicago Press and Tribune of that date reports that intense excitement prevailed.

The tally started and when the twenty-fourth state had voted, the count showed Seward 180, Lincoln 231½. Ohio had been dividing its vote between Chase, McLean and Abraham Lincoln. A few minutes after the vote on the third ballot was announced, the leader of the Ohio delegation, a Mr. Carter, arose to announce the switch of four votes from Chase to Lincoln. Ohio had cast 29 votes for Lincoln, 15 for Chase and 2 for McLean on the third ballot.

This gave Lincoln the required majority and touched off a tremendous salvo of applause. State after state fell in line and finally the leader of the New York delegation, which had been solidly behind Seward, moved to make the vote unanimous.

Lincoln followers had placed a cannon on top of the Wigwam and let go a blast which shook the structure and notified all of Chicago that Illinois was furnishing the Republican nominee. The newspaper accounts of the day report a celebration running far into the night.

Hannibal Hamlin of Paris, Maine, was Lincoln's running mate, as the vice presidential candidate.

Lincoln had been building his national following for some time. The famous Lincoln-Douglas debates of 1859 had of course attracted widespread attention, and in early 1860 he had been speaking in many states on the question of slavery.

The Chicago Press and Tribune on February 16, 1860, declared that Abraham Lincoln was the peer of anyone named in connection with the nominations. A week later the paper suggested organization of Lincoln clubs to build his candidacy.

Editorially in the period from early February until April comment was made from time to time that Seward admittedly was the leading candidate, but the Press and Tribune urged that Lincoln was the better vote-getter.

When the Illinois Republican convention was held on May 9 in Decatur, Lincoln was chosen as this body's choice for President.

The Democrats Split.

Great attention centered on the Democratic convention, held in Charleston, S. C., beginning April 30. Douglas was the most prominently named candidate as the Democratic nominee, but bitter opposition to his selection was heard on all sides. The Democratic convention battled through three days and finally split into two sections. No candidate could be named. The rump section adjourned to meet in New York on June 18.

The Press and Tribune repeatedly cited election trends in many states and cities in the spring of 1860 as a trend toward Republicanism. In Chicago, the city elections had given the Republican candidate a clear victory over his Democratic opponent.

The meeting of 1860 was the first of 16 political conventions held in Chicago to date. The Republicans have come to Chicago 11 times and the Democrats five times, to select their candidates for President and vice president and to approve platforms.

The Democrats return again this year, meeting in July at the Chicago Stadium. Located 15 blocks west and 3 blocks south of the Wigwam site, the Stadium is a sharp contrast to the structure set up 80 years ago to hold the Republican meeting.

Largest Convention Hall.

In its day, however, the Wigwam was a cause for national comment. It was the largest convention hall in America at that time and was a testimony to Chicago's energy and ambition to show the nation that the city was something more than just another frontier town located out the other side of nowhere

When it was decided that the Republicans would come to Chicago to hold their convention, citizens immediately started work raising funds with which to build the convention hall. On March 13, during the fund-raising campaign, the Chicago Press and Tribune suggested that Republicans who won money in the recent city elections contribute their winnings to the building fund, "thus using pro-slave dollars for the purpose."

The site chosen already had a historic background. Located at the fork of the Chicago river, which in those days flowed into Lake Michigan instead of out of it, in earlier times the place was known as Wolf Point.

Here had stood the Sauganash inn, the first hotel in Chicago and one of the first two frame buildings ever erected in the city. There is a dispute in the records on this latter point. Some claim the Sauganash inn was the first frame building, but others insist it was the second.

In any event, the Sauganash inn was famous far and wide. It had been built by Mark Beaubien when he came from Detroit in 1826. Beaubien is a name which occurs repeatedly in early Chicago history and still is frequently seen in the news columns of Chicago papers.

Chicago's First Election.

Here on August 10, 1833, came the entire list of qualified voters (all 24 of them) to select the town trustees for the City of Chicago, the first election held in the city's history. Here likewise was the first drama in the West produced, in late October of 1837.

Beaubien sold the building in 1834. It burned to the ground on March 3, 1851. It had been abandoned as a hostelry in the late forties, apparently, and was occupied by only one man at the time of the fire. The property in 1851 was owned by the Garrett estate, which later founded the Garrett Bible institute and provided the foundation for establishment in later years of Northwestern university.

The townspeople who were working on the Republican convention obtained the site from the Garrett estate and started construction of the great Wigwam in April, 1860. The structure was 100 by 180 feet, with its main entrance on the street known now as Wacker drive.

A gallery was built on three sides, a stage constructed across one end. The stage would seat between 600 and 700 persons and the hall itself was constructed to seat between 10,000 and 11,000 persons.

The Wigwam was lighted by gas. Its interior was left in a rough, unfinished state, to be decorated "by the light, graceful and entirely successful handiwork of Republican ladies," to quote the Press-Tribune of the day. The ladies banked the walls with freshly cut evergreens. Seals of the states were hung around the walls, and busts of prominent men of early American history were placed on the supporting pillars. Over the stage was suspended a huge gilt eagle.

The structure cost between $6,000 and $7,000. There was a deficit to clear, so on the night of the dedication, Saturday, May 12, an admission charge of 25 cents was assessed. Between 7,000 and 8,000 persons came to the dedication, which seems to have taken care of the deficit since no further comment is found on the subject.

The Wigwam building was used for various meetings during the next few years, and was destroyed in the great fire of 1871.

Interesting Coincidence.

An interesting coincidence is noted in connection with the building now standing on the corner where the Wigwam was built. The building today is occupied by district headquarters of three divisions of the B. F Goodrich company, which this year is marking its seventieth anniversary. In the celebration on the Wigwam site, both the Republican and Goodrich representatives are re-enacting history-making events in which both played significant roles. Heading the delegation from Minnesota to the Republican convention of 1860 was Judge Aaron Goodrich, described as the first territorial officer ever to set foot on the soil of Minnesota.

The national committeeman from Massachusetts at the same convention was John Z. Goodrich. Aaron Goodrich, John Z. Goodrich and Dr. B. F. Goodrich were distant cousins, all descendants of William Goodrich who came to America about 1648. Another cousin, Grant Goodrich, an attorney, was prominent in Chicago early history, active in municipal affairs and it is said he at one time offered Abraham Lincoln a partnership in his Chicago law firm.

CECIL B. DE MILLE has a tip and a challenge—but not an invitation—for young men who can act. He urges them to come to Hollywood, though he's not promising them a thing.

"Hollywood today is suffering from a serious shortage of leading men," he declared recently. "Not just handsome 'glamour boys,' but good looking, fine-acting, upstanding he-men. There are only a few here—not one-quarter of the number we need—and those few are in such terrific demand that sometimes they're almost impossible to get."

You see, he'd had trouble in casting two of the three male leads in "North West Mounted Police," in which Madeleine Carroll and Paulette Goddard are the leading women. Difficulty in getting men to play opposite those two girls! He wanted Robert Preston, and that was simple enough; Preston is a De Mille discovery. But it took months to get Gary Cooper on a loan-out from Samuel Goldwyn, to whom he is under contract—exactly ten other producers were after the rangy Cooper at that time.

He needed another leading man, one convincing in strength and acting ability, to be Cooper's rival for Madeleine Carroll's hand. It took another three months before he could fill that part with Preston Foster. Whereupon he decided that there weren't nearly enough good looking young he-man actors in Hollywood.

(To any young man thinking of accepting Mr. De Mille's challenge we suggest that you first prove to yourself that you can act and also prove that you have money enough to support you for a long, long time. It took John Carradine three years, as Mr. De Mille pointed out, to get a hearing.)

We could make suggestions for the proper material in which to bind one or two of them, but she might not like them—and anyway, it's not an actor's fault if he finds himself working in a bad one.

It was Andre Kostelanetz, well-known orchestra conductor ("Tune Up Time" is his radio program) and husband of Lily Pons, who initiated the campaign for a United States stamp honoring Stephen Foster. It is the first stamp honoring an American composer, and as it is a one-cent stamp probably we'll all be using it. When the postmaster general notified him that it was to be issued, Kostelanetz promptly arranged a special Stephen Foster medley of six of the most beloved Foster songs, for "Tune Up Time," with Tony Martin singing them.

GRASS, LEGUME SILAGE ARE INCREASING IN IOWA

Use of grass, legume and sorghum silage has increased 75 per cent during the last 2 years among Iowa farmers belonging to dairy herd improvement associations, reports Floyd Johnston, Iowa State College extension dairyman.

This spring 276 association members have other crops than corn in their silos. Two years ago only 159 were feeding silage made from other crops than corn.

A survey of 1,251 association members who have silos showed that 104 had filled their silos with sorghums; 74 with non-legumes; 52 with legumes or legume mixture; 37 with legumes non-legume mixtures; and 9 with miscellaneous crops.

Ink Spots And Spatters

By Jergie

EXPLAINING THE MEANING OF "ISMS" . . . .

Here's a little yarn we caught on about the third or fourth bounce that really makes us glad we live in America. Here's the story as we saw it:

"Socialism: If you have two cows, you give one to your neighbor.

Communism: If you have two cows, you give them to the government, and the government then gives you some milk.

Fascism: If you have two cows, you keep the cows and give the milk to the government. The government then sells you some milk

New Dealism: If you have two cows, you shoot one and milk the other, then pour the milk down the drain.

Nazism If you have two cows, the government shoots you and keeps the cows.

Capitalism. If you have two cows, you sell one and buy a bull."

HAIL "TOO MANY HUSBANDS" AS YEARS GAYEST COMEDY

"Too Many Husbands" can prove somewhat troublesome, and Jean Arthur discovers that fact in the Avery Theatre's forthcominf Columbia comedy, which opens Sunday for three days, with Fred MacMurray and Melvin Douglas also starred. Based upon a W, Somerset Maugham stage success, the madcap new production has been hailed as an hilariously witty melee of men, marriage and morals Briefy, the story of "Too Many Husbands" is founded upon three logical items: Jean is married to reckless Fred, who is reported dead at sea. Jean marries the more stable Melvin, Fred's best friend. Fred returns home. And from those original propositions, producer-director Wesley Ruggles, is said to have developed one of the most original, one of the most uproarious screen comedies of this or any other season.

JEREMIAH ANNOUNCES THE NEW COVENANT

LESSON TEXT—Jeremiah 31:31-37.
GOLDEN TEXT—I will put my law in their inward parts, and write it in their hearts; and will be their God, and they shall be my people —Jeremiah 31:33.

God's law written in the hearts of all men—surely that is the ultimate goal of all of our efforts, and therein we will find the solution of all of our problems. Jeremiah the prophet, in the midst of a despairing people with only captivity and sorrow before them because of their sinful rebellion against God, gives a prophetic foregleam of the day when all Israel and Judah should know God. Sin was to be forgiven, fellowship restored, and men over all the earth were to know God. Obviously, that prophecy is still future for Israel, but in the meantime God has permitted us to enter into the enjoyment of our covenant of grace.

1. The Old Covenant (vv. 31, 32).

The promise of a new covenant at once raises the question, "What was the old covenant?" We do not have space to make any complete study of it, but we note that while God did make a great covenant with Abraham, founding the nation of Israel (Gen. 17:1-14), the reference by Jeremiah is evidently to the covenant with Moses (Exod. 20-23). We observe that it was

1. National (v. 32). The old covenant was made with Israel only, and could bring blessing to the other nations of the earth only indirectly, as they might share the peace and prosperity which would have come to Israel had they been obedient to God. God was here dealing with a chosen nation for whom He had a specific plan and purpose.

2. Limited (v. 32). The blessing of the old covenant was limited not only in the sense that it was national, but also in that it was conditional. God's promise hinged on His word in Exodus 19:5: "Now therefore, if ye will obey my voice indeed, and keep my covenant, then ye shall be a peculiar treasure unto me above all people." In other words, the fulfillment of this covenant was dependent on the faithfulness of the people. We know that they failed.

3. Broken by Israel (v. 32). God was like "an husband" (v. 32) unto Israel. He was patient, tender, forgiving, always trying to restore them to Himself. He used His great power on their behalf as He "took them by the hand," and yet we read "my covenant they brake" (v. 32). Human failure in spite of God's promise and goodness, that is the history of man under law. Now, however, we turn to the new covenant of grace.

II. The New Covenant (vv. 33-37).

Jeremiah looked forward to the day when there was to be a covenant that is

1. Personal (v. 33). The reference here is not to a law written in a book, which may be neglected or forgotten, or broken because there is no power in man to keep it. This new law is to be written in the hearts of men. It is personal—not something which he shares as a member of a great nation.

2. Universal (v. 34). From the least to the greatest, every man shall know God. That promise awaits its future complete fulfillment to Israel (and remember that God has not forgotten His people). Even now, however, we have the spiritual fulfillment of the promise in the Church. It is true now that, regardless of nationality, education, wealth, or position, the grace of God is made manifest in the hearts of men and women everywhere.

3. Assured by God (vv. 35-37). The old covenant of law failed, for it hinged upon the faithfulness of undependable man—"If ye will" (Exod. 19:5). But the new covenant of grace rests upon the "I will" of God (v. 34; see also Heb. 8:10-12). This is indeed "a better covenant, which was established upon better promises" (Heb. 8:6). It is an "everlasting covenant" (Heb. 13:20).

Be Satisfied

I say to thee, be thou satisfied. It is recorded of the hares that with a general consent they went to drown themselves, out of a feeling of their misery; but when they saw a company of frogs more fearful than they were, they began to take courage and comfort again. Compare thine estate with others.—Robert Burton.

Doing Good Secretly

When others do you a favor speak of it. When you do your neighbor, a kindness, let him find it out; then you will find a lot of satisfaction in the fact that you have been decent. —Van Amburgh.

Summing It Up

The man who has begun to live more seriously within, begins to live more simply without. — Phillips Brooke.

LINE CRATE WITH OIL CLOTH·TACK CHECKED SKIRT TO SIDES·WHITE FRILL EDGES COVER FOR TOP

IN THIS column we have shown how to make useful, attractive things out of everything most from spools to tin cans, but several readers have reminded me lately that I have neglected orange crates. Here is a pair of tables to match a smart new bedspread.

The spread is made of green and white checked gingham trimmed in bands, monogram and frills of white muslin. The bed is an old iron one that has been cut down and then padded and covered with the gingham (detailed directions are in Book 3). The orange crates for the tables are lined with green oil cloth and each wears a green and white checked skirt; and a top cover frilled in white. The lamps are white and the shades are old ones covered with a plain ruffle of white held in around the top with a band and a bow of green cut from the check material.

Early Acoustics Long on Pay Roll Much 'Flour' Gold

¶ An age-old, open-air Greek theater, still standing in Epidaurus, proves that the ancient Greeks possessed an unusual mastery of acoustics. A whisper spoken on its open and uncovered stage is easily heard in every one of its 12,000 seats.

¶ Since 1710, St. Anthony has been on the pay roll of the Brazilian army in recognition of his intercession in a successful battle with the French. First he was created a captain and, later, promoted to the rank of lieutenant colonel, his pay being given to the church monthly during these 230 years.

¶ Although the gravel in the Snake river in Idaho is estimated to contain about $2,000,000,000 worth of gold, much of the metal is in such minute particles, known as "flour," that few of the hundreds of machines made to recover it have been satisfactory. Some of these particles are so small that it would take millions of them to equal one cent in value. —Collier's.

Hawaiian Plebiscite to Focus Attention On Forty-Year Struggle for Statehood

By ROBERT McSHANE
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

THOUGH the 48-starred flag of the United States has remained unchanged since Arizona and New Mexico were admitted to the Union in 1912, a determined attempt is being made to add another star to its constellation. Hawaii — as at least part of its population claims—wants to become the forty-ninth state.

Culminating more than forty years of effort to secure full rights as an integral part of the nation, the Territory of Hawaii will hold a plebiscite next November to record by popular vote the aspiration of her people for statehood.

The plebiscite will be included in the general elections in the territory November 5. It will have no direct bearing on the granting of statehood, other than to focus national attention on the issue. Its sponsors hope to expedite action by congress on a bill providing for statehood now pending before the house committee on territories.

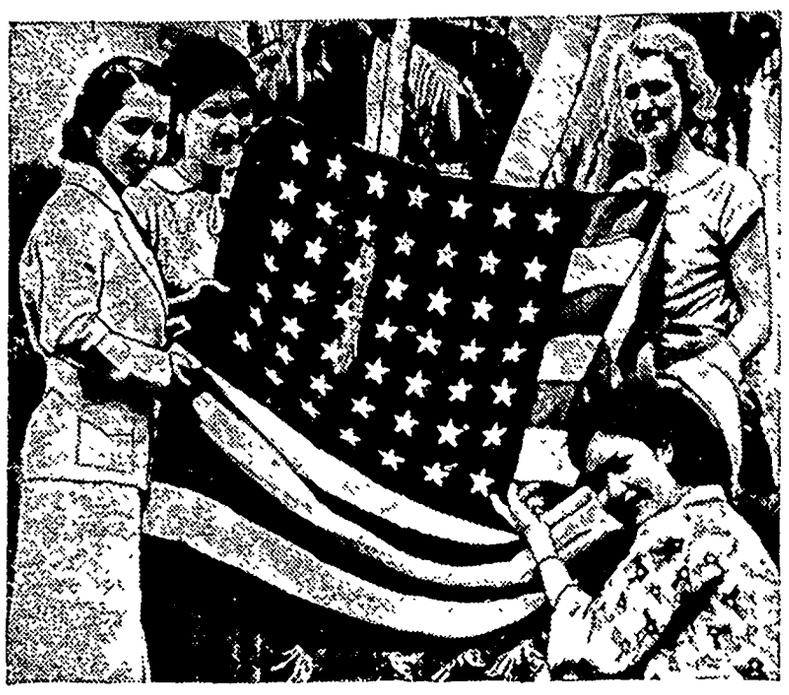
To many people of the islands, the issue is crucial. Statehood to them represents the fulfillment of a hope that was born nearly a hundred years ago and has been ardently cherished since Hawaii was annexed in 1898. Activated by a group of American colonists in the islands, a move for the annexation of the then Kingdom of Hawaii was almost consumated in 1854. The death of King Kamehameha III put an end to treaty negotiations that were almost completed.

Sentiment Kept Alive.

Nearly a half century passed before the matter again arose with sufficient decisiveness to bring it to an issue. But sentiment for annexation was kept alive by the growing number of Americans settling in the islands and by the constantly greater integration of American institutions into the body politic.

When annexation finally came, Hawaii would have much preferred that it be as a state. Those who worked for annexation, however, were of the opinion that the United States would follow its established policy and advance her to statehood when she had demonstrated her fitness. Present day advocates of Hawaiian statehood insist that it was upon this understanding that she surrendered her sovereignty and became a United States territory.

Now, Hawaii feels, she has been kept waiting overlong; it is just 40 years this year that formalities were completed which established her as a territory.



Hopeful citizens of Hawaii have added a forty-ninth star to the United States flag in anticipation of the day when that country will be admitted to statehood. However, the extra star is just an experiment, and the flag won't be used until the issue has been decided.

Racial Problem Overdrawn.

Hawaii claims that the one frequent argument used against statehood—her racial problem—is one that has been greatly misunderstood. According to census figures she has a lower percentage of alien population than the city of New York, and it is declining yearly. Many who have visited the islands declare that nowhere have citizens two or three generations removed from immigrant ancestry developed a more united loyalty or a stronger feeling of Americanism.

Based upon 1935 calculations (and Hawaii's population has increased considerably since that time) the distribution of population by race was estimated to be as follows:

Hawaiian, 21,710; Caucasian-Hawaiian, 18,742; Asiatic-Hawaiian, 17,236; Chinese, 27,264; Korean, 6,668; Filipino, 54,668; Portuguese, 20,550; Spanish, 1,267; Puerto Rican, 7,368; other Caucasian, 50,258; and Japanese residents, 148,972

Within the territory, the civil and political structure closely parallels that of a state. The governor, secretary of state, and the higher judiciary are appointed by the President of the United States. The legislature and major local officers are elective. The territory is divided into counties which have the same home rule as those of a state.

As a territory, however, the parallel ends there. Her people cannot vote in national elections for the President and vice president, and they have no senators or representatives in congress, but are represented at Washington only by a single delegate who has no vote.

This, to the people of Hawaii, is contrary to American tradition. To them it means taxation for representation. They point out that up to the middle of 1937 a total of $155,858,707 had been contributed by Hawaii in federal internal revenue.

The people of Hawaii pay the same federal taxes as the people of the states. Tax figures show that Hawaii has consistently paid more into the federal treasury than have 14 to 19 of the states.

Carries State Responsibilities.

She is subject to the same laws. She would be included in compulsory military service in case of another draft, as she was during the first World war. In short, she carries the same responsibilities in every respect as those of a state.

As a state, Hawaii would be entitled to two senators and one representative in congress, with a second representative upon the addition of less than 40,000 people to her present population. (Hawaii claims a 1940 population of 414,000, which either exceeds or compares with the population of nine states.)

Hawaii's gross assessed valuation is more than $425,000,000, surpassing that of nine of the states. This figure, records show, exceeds the gross valuation in any state at the time of its advancement from the status of a territory.

Sugar production is the biggest industry of the islands, accounting for 80 per cent of the world's supply. Vacationists and travelers annually spend upwards of $20,000,000 on her shores. With completely modern public utilities, large financial and commercial institutions, splendid highway system, inter-island transportation by water and air, her progress puts her on a par with other sections of the United States.

Plebiscite Is Non-Partisan.

Now, as a dramatic way of registering her claim for statehood, Hawaii has chosen the plebiscite to be held next November. The matter is non-partisan; both the Republican and Democratic parties in the islands are sponsoring the plebiscite and urging the people to vote. So general and wholehearted is the support being given to it in the islands that it is freely predicted the affirmative votes will be virtually unanimous.

Other fears for Hawaii's chances of eventual statehood center around the islands' military importance. Hawaii is America's first line of defense in the Pacific ocean—the bulwark which stands between the states of Oregon and Washington, with their totally inadequate facilities for warding off an enemy, and invasion by the fleet and air armada of a foreign belligerent.

Army, Navy Oppose.

Hawaii is a Gibraltar-like element in the nation's national defense scheme, and because of that a barrier to its statehood arises. Both the army and navy departments of the United States have expressed strong opposition to any change in the islands' form of government.

Uncle Sam has spent millions for the fortification of the islands, and indirectly to protect the mainland of the United States. California, with extensive fortifications, is considerably better equipped to fight off an enemy invasion than either of the two states to the north.

Pearl Harbor, United States naval base situated in the island of Oahu, eight or ten miles from Honolulu, is the center of the elaborate network of defense. It is the snug and secure anchorage where the whole fighting fleet of the nation can lie at anchor; on its shores are a navy yard, a submarine base, a powerful radio station, fuel tanks, dry docks, barracks and other military necessities.

Because of this, army and navy executives are hesitant to approve of any measure which would change the islands' form of government.

They fear that a change might, by the greater independence of statehood, interfere with future development of the United States' mid-Pacific stronghold.

Although Hawaii is better known to the layman as an ideal vacation spot, it is known to military experts as one of the most closely guarded island groups in the world. This lone guard, standing beneath tropical palms, is symbolic of the U. S. army's heavily fortified Hawaiian area.

Norwegians Given Credit for Weather Forecasting System

SAN FRANCISCO.—To Norway belongs the credit for having originated the system of mass analysis in making weather forecasts, according to Charles L. Mitchell, senior forecaster of the United States weather bureau. That system is now used in the United States.

"While there has been something of a revolution in weather forecasting since the World war," he said, "nevertheless it was the Norwegians who, during the World war, originated the system of mass analysis now in use.

Schools Maintained.

"This is now so much part of the work that we maintain schools in both Chicago and Washington, where weather forecasters can take a three-month course in this part of the work.

"Before the war forecasting was largely by reckoning from high and low depressions as shown on the weather map.

"During the war, however, weather forecasters were unable to get reports from ships on weather conditions, for the reason that these reports are valueless unless the precise positions of the vessels are known.

No Forecasts Sent.

"For manifest reasons the belligerents did not want to make known to the enemy the position of any ship, and so weather forecasts from them were not sent out.

"It was then that the Norwegians began studying cloud and air formations and by the application of mathematics were able to make shrewd weather forecasts.

"At present we are able to make up what might be called a 'topographical' map of air layers, except that the air is always in motion."

'Joe College'? He Doesn't Exist!

STATE COLLEGE, PA.—Hollywood to the contrary, there is no such typical student as "Joe College" or "Betty Co-ed," says Pauline Locklin, assistant professor of English literature at the Pennsylvania State college.

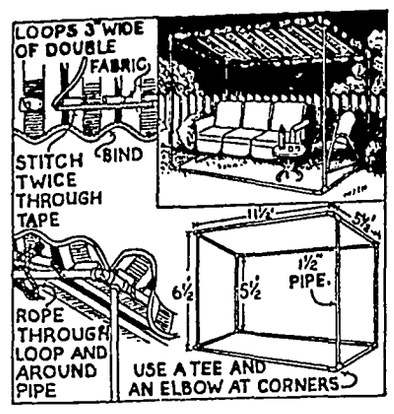
"There is no more a student type," she asserts, "than there is a student nose."

The college man drinks what he is thirsty for and can pay for, she declares. "It may be benedictine, buttermilk or lemon coke." As to dress, the student often is purposely indifferent just to preserve his individual personality.

"The so-called collegiate type of humor is another myth," she said. "Most of such humor is imitative and is copied as much in towns and cities as on a college campus."

HOW TO SEW

by Ruth Wyeth Spears



MR. AND MRS. NEWHOUSE looked out over their backyard and were in no mood to plant an acorn and wait for it to grow up to give them summer shade. Mr. Newhouse bought some second-hand pipe for a song and made a sketch for the frame of a shelter like the one I have shown at the upper right. He had a plumber cut and thread the pipe so it could be put together easily.

Mrs. Newhouse wanted the shelter to be as cool as a dell, so she avoided all the hot red and orange colorings. The pipe frame was painted bright blue. Then she selected green and white striped awning material for the top. This material was 30 inches wide and 12 yards were needed. About 15 yards of bright blue bias binding were used for the scalloped edge. The method of fastening the awning to the frame is illustrated. The fabric loops were made of the awning material stitched in place through heavy woven tape.

Whether you have a new home or an old one, 10 cents to cover cost and mailing charges on Mrs. Spears' Sewing Book No. 1 can save you many dollars. In it are complete directions for slip covers, curtains, bedspreads, dressing tables and many clever and original things that may require the aid of Friend Husband to drive a nail or two. shore, he secreted himself among some barrels, reached the ship safely and returned to America. He arrived in Sangamon county in 1836 and was practicing in the little village of Rochester, near Springfield, when the organization meeting was held.

Almost as adventurous a career as Doctor Hughes' was that of Dr. Charles H. Webb of Livingston county. In 1822, with his brother, he took passage at Pittsburgh on a flatboat bound for St. Louis. At that time a grotto, called Cave-in-Rock, situated on the banks of the Ohio river near Shawneetown was a rendezvous for a band of river pirates who enticed river boats to stop and passengers to disembark with an attractive sign, "Liquor Vault and House for Entertainment."

Captured by Outlaws.

When the flatboat on which Doctor Webb was a passenger reached Cave-in-Rock, the captain and three of the passengers, one of whom was the doctor's brother, were decoyed into landing at that place. When they failed to return, Doctor Webb went ashore to find them. He was promptly seized by three of the outlaws, blindfolded, his hands tied behind him and placed in a skiff which was rowed out into the river and then set adrift.

In the middle of the night Webb succeeded in freeing his hands and with his shoes began bailing out the water that was threatening to swamp the frail craft. At daybreak he managed to reach a small inhabited island where he was provided with a paddle and advised to proceed to Smithland, Ky.

Dr. John Todd

Anxious to learn the fate of his brother, Doctor Webb set out afoot but sprained his ankle and was barely able to hobble along. He was discovered by a girl mounted on a horse. She told him that her name was Cassandra Ford and persuaded him to mount her horse and accompany her to her home. When he arrived there he found that the girl's father, James Ford, had the flute with which the doctor had entertained the other passengers on the flatboat and which had been taken from him when he was overpowered by the outlaws.

Despite this evidence that Ford was one of the outlaw gang, Doctor Webb proceeded to fall in love with Cassandra. Eventually he returned to that vicinity, married her and with his bride settled in Livingston county to practice his profession. In the meantime his brother had been released by the outlaws and made his way safely to St. Louis.

Still another pioneer doctor who had an adventurous career was Dr. Charles Chandler, whose name is perpetuated in the town of Chandlerville, Ill. A native of Rhode Island, he was practicing in that state when the spirit of adventure influenced him to migrate to the western country. Chandler arrived in Illinois at the time of the Black Hawk war and started up the Illinois river with the intention of settling at Fort Clark (Peoria). But when the captain of the boat on which he was traveling declined to go farther because of fear of the Indians, Chandler disembarked at Beardstown. He was so impressed with the beauty of the country around what is now Chandlerville that he entered 160 acres at the land office and built a cabin on his tract.

A Versatile Doctor.

Chandler soon built up a big practice in the new country and often traveled 100 miles in 24 hours over a territory which now includes seven counties in Illinois. He was also active in many other ways. He erected stores and small shops so that farmers might obtain their necessary supplies without traveling to distant Beardstown over the worst kind of roads. With his brother he established a general store, slaughtered and packed for market as many as 3,000 hogs in a year. He acted as postmaster in 1849 and donated sites for parks and cemeteries.

Nor was Chandler the only one of these pioneer doctors who engaged in activities outside of their profession. They helped lay out townsites; start industries and businesses; install systems of education; provide churches; print newspapers; serve in public offices and, when need be, they went to war and fought shoulder to shoulder with their fellow pioneers.

Typical of these public-spirited physicians was Dr. Benjamin Kirtland Hart of Alton, one of the founders of the Illinois State Medical society, who had served as president of his town board and who, three years later, fathered a movement which resulted in the purchase of a site, later the erection of a building, for Alton's first schoolhouse. At the rear of the Peoria home of Dr. Rudolphus Rouse was a fine opera hall which Rouse had caused to be built. The result was that pioneer Peoria witnessed some of the finest drama of the day, since Peoria became a stopping point for road companies traveling from one large city to another.

Like many of the pioneer physicians, Dr. Edward Reynolds Roe turned from medicine to devote his natural talents to the less strenuous pursuits of writing and became so much in demand as a writer while practicing medicine in Shawneetown in 1850 that the Illinois Journal at Springfield employed him as a regular correspondent. Then he turned his hand to fiction and produced "Virginia Rose; a Tale of Illinois in Early Days" (which had for its background the lawlessness centering around Cave-in-Rock); which ran as a prize serial in the Alton Courier in 1852; "The Gray and the Blue"; "Brought to Bay"; "From the Beaten Path"; "G. A. R.; or, She Married His Double"; "Dr. Caldwell; or, The Trail of the Serpent"; and "Prairie Land and Other Poems." Later he became editor of the Jacksonville Journal, then the Constitutionalist.

At the outbreak of the Civil war Roe, who was then the first professor of natural science at Illinois State Normal university near Bloomington, raised three companies, composed mainly of his students, for service in the Union army. He was captain, major, and then lieutenant-colonel of the Thirty-third Illinois regiment and was dangerously wounded at Vicksburg in 1863. Later he became editor of the Bloomington Pantagraph, was appointed marshal of the Southern district of Illinois, and served in the state legislature. His varied career ended in 1893 when he died in Chicago at the age of eighty.

Another literary doctor was Benjamin Franklin Allen, a native of Watertown, N. Y., who began practicing medicine in Kane county, Ill., in 1844. In 1860 he settled in Joliet, Ill., and began to devote his time to writing. Among his writings were "The Uncle's Legacy," which ran as a serial in the Will County Courier for six months; "Irene; or, The Life and Fortunes of a Yankee Girl"; and a series of humorous sketches under the title of "Experiences, Advice, Comments and Suggestions of Barney O'Toole," who seems to have been an earlier "Mr. Dooley."

Star Dust
STAGE SCREEN RADIO

By VIRGINIA VALE
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

PARAMOUNT is paying out quite a lot of money because it's not safe to take a chance on an elephant — or rather, on a herd of elephants. You see, though Hollywood has plenty of practically everything else, it's short on elephants; rounding up a thousand unusually pretty girls would be child's play compared to putting your hand on a dozen of the animals just when you wanted them.

That's why O. C. Stratton, Paramount property department head, has arranged to feed 12 of them from now until next summer, when the filming of "Moon Over Burma" is scheduled to begin.

The elephants belong to the defunct Hagenbeck and Wallace Circus, whose receivers agreed to keep the stock on the West coast if the studio would foot their board bill. So the pachyderms are quartered at Camarillo, Calif., devouring dollars' worth of hay daily—and it is hay—while preparations for "Moon Over Burma" goes on. The story opens in Mandalay and shifts to the teak plantations of Rangoon, where the elephants will be shown hauling the heavy wood, while Paramount forgets about buying hay and just pays rental fees.

When you see "Comin' Round the Mountain" you can close your eyes and pretend you're at home listening to the radio—there are eight well-known radio names in the cast. Bob Burns, of course; Pat Barrett, whom radio fans know as "Uncle Ezra"; William Thompson, the "Old Timer," and Harold Peary, the "Gildersleeve" of "Fibber McGee and Molly"; Don Wilson of Jack Benny's program; and Jerry Colonna of Bob Hope's; Marjorie Bauersfield, the air waves' "Mirandy"; and Cliff Arquette, who's likely to bob up on almost any broadcast.

Bill Phillips, of the Warner Brothers studio, reduced 27 young girls to tears the other day, and got paid for it. You've guessed why, of course—he's the makeup man on "All This and Heaven Too," and they were shooting the scene in which Bette Davis tells her pupils the sad story of her life and makes them cry. So Phillips stood off at one side and blew menthol fumes at the girls, and they wept buckets-full of tears, right on schedule.

If you're going to New York for the World's fair this summer, remember Metro's Information Centre, located in the city—on the little island at Forty-sixth street between Broadway and Seventh avenue. The attendants will supply you with information about the city and the fair, (last year they helped more than a million persons,) give you free guide books and guide pamphlets, and speak to you in any one of 11 different languages if need be. Also, there is a visitors' registry at the booth—you can put your New York address on file so that your friends will know where to find you. Metro deserves a lot of thanks from its friends all over the country for this.

Del Sharbutt, announcer for Lanny Ross, is being ribbed by his friends because of a mishap while playing softball. He was playing first base with a team composed of members of the staff of Columbia Broadcasting System. A ball was hit slowly to him, and Del whirled to throw to third base for a double play. The throw was wild; it hit the pitcher on the shoulder, bounded back and struck Del on the head. Wonder why softball seems to have such a fatal lure for radio announcers.

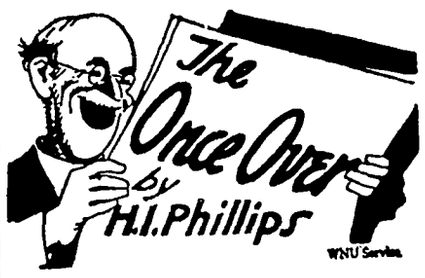
ODDS AND ENDS

¶ Truman Bradley, announcer on the Burns and Allen program, was signed recently for his most important screen role; he'll portray one of five millionaires in RKO's "Millionaires in Prison."

¶ Paramount will make "Aloma of the South Seas" with Dorothy Lamour in the role created for Gilda Gray—though it wasn't a good picture when the shimmying Gilda did it, years ago.

¶ Oscar Levant, of "Information Please," has a featured part in "Ghost Music," Bing Crosby's next.



THAT MILLION-FOR-HITLER OFFER

Mr. Samuel Harden Church,
The Carnegie Institute,
Pittsburgh, Pa.

Dear Samuel:

I have read your offer of a million smackers for the capture of Adolf Hitler and in reply I would state that the proposition interests me. But I do not like the way you emphasize the part about his being caught "alive, unwounded and unhurt." What about me?

However, it is a novel idea and the most original business proposal of a decade. I know of no cash offer like it since the depression and it is good to know there is a man in this country who knows where to get a million dollars these days. For that much money there are people who would do anything. The big drawback is that Hitler has got such a big start, and I don't think it sporting to limit the offer to May. This is pretty short notice for grabbing a guy who has been on the loose so long, and besides, May is a hard month for the capturing business on account of the birds and bees and little green things furnishing so much distraction from any pursuit. Could you extend the time through June?

And are you serious about the "undamaged, unwounded and unhurt" clause in your spring offer? Are you willing to stretch a point? I mean would it be okay if Adolf is brought in with a little mouse over one eye or with a lock of his hair missing? It would be a helluva note if I catch him and you rule the capture illegal just because he says that his back hurts him or something.

Who is going to judge whether he is hurt or not? I want a good referee as I have a hunch that Adolf will do a lot of squawking when he finds himself in Pittsburgh in a "Million Dollar Thirty Days Only Contest," and he may insist that he is in terrible condition instead of being undamaged and as good as new. In fact I think you should stretch a point and say that if he is warped a little in transit the cash offer will still stand.

And about the idea of trying him. I do not want any part of that. If I deliver him it is up to you and Pittsburgh to run the trial. I am taking no chances on trials. All he would have to do would be to get a good lawyer to say that he wasn't quite clear mentally. Then there would be the old business of getting the psychiatrists to ask him a lot of questions and then report he was clearly a victim of the fact his folks made him eat lettuce without sugar in his boyhood or something. He would get put on probation and in no time would be on the loose again. So I want the cash on delivery, Sam.

Let me hear further details from you soon.

Yours,
Elmer Twitchell.

P. S.—What are you offering this week for Mussolini?

'ALL DONE BY MIRRORS'

"The New York police department today began distributing leaflets inscribed 'A healthy driver is a safe driver' in a campaign to keep down auto accidents. 'The health of a motorist is an important consideration in any safety drive,' said Police Commissioner Valentine. 'There are many accidents caused by sudden illness.' "—News item.

Apple sauce! Also hassenpfeffer, baloney and bunk! A healthy driver is not necessarily a safe driver; we have been chased up alleys by some of the healthiest drivers in existence and knocked for a goal by drivers who were notably in the pink.

SHOOTING THE WORKS

There is every indication that Hitler plans to throw everything he has into the war this summer, in order to end it by October. Cabled reports by U. S. observers abroad all point to this.

There is almost certain to be a series of blows aimed at different parts of Europe—Holland, Rumania, Hungary, Greece, in quick succession.

Hitler has ample munitions and raw materials to last him through summer and fall, but perhaps not for the winter. Also there is a big Nazi question mark placed over the presidential elections in the United States. No matter which party is elected, the Nazis are figuring that the United States will at least lift the Johnson act (forbidding credits to defaulted nations) and begin rushing major munitions to the allies on credit.

This Hitler strategy of betting the whole pot on one hand is why Italy is moving closer to war. It was always the Italian plan to bet on the side of the sure winner. And now, Mussolini appears to be convinced that the present moment in Europe is equivalent to June, 1918, when it was a foregone conclusion that the allies were bound to win.

Today — May, 1940 — Mussolini seems to think that the situation is reversed, that the Nazis are bound to win, and a lot of skilled American observers are worried over the fact that they agree with him.

TAFT CLAIMS

A little-noticed press release put out by Taft headquarters last week deserved a lot more attention than it got. It was significant on two counts:

First, its challenging tone toward the claims of Dewey. For the first time, the Taft camp struck squarely and vigorously at the New Yorker. Dewey's managers were poohpoohed as "much more proficient in making claims than in electing delegates," and the flat assertion was made that Taft will have "delegate strength in practically every state . . . and will be the real choice of a majority of the delegates . . ."

Second, for the first time Taft managers did some specific delegate claiming of their own. Previously they spoke only in total figures—ranging from 320 to 370 delegates—but they always avoided specific state figures. This time, however, the Taftites got down to the following particulars:

California—At least half of the 35 delegates will be for Taft.

Delaware—A majority for Taft; none for Dewey.

Indiana—Still unchosen, but Dewey claims of supremacy "fall in the class of wishful thinking."

Iowa—A "favorite son" delegation for Hanford McNider, minister to Canada under Hoover, with Taft definitely in the lead as second choice.

Missouri—At least 10 of Missouri's 20 delegates in the Taft bag.

New York—Taft has a good chance to get a bloc of delegates from Dewey's own home state.

New Mexico—Four of the six delegates privately favor Taft, even though this is the home state of Mrs. Simms, one of Dewey's campaign managers.

North Carolina—At least 15 of the 23 for Taft and not over five "have even a leaning to Mr. Dewey."

Ohio—Solidly for Taft.

The South—"The natural and normal sentiment of the southern states, without a single exception, is for Senator Taft. It is entirely possible that Mr. Gannett will have more delegates from the South than Mr. Dewey."

Washington — Its delegates are not yet elected but not over six of the 16 will be for Dewey.

In summary, the Taft campaign have more votes on the first ballot have most votes on the first ballot.

Looks like the Philadelphia convention will be interesting.

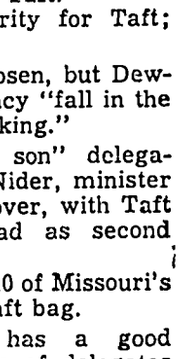
DUCE HARD TO SEE

When Ambassador Phillips called upon Mussolini last week it was the first time in one and a half years (with one exception) that a U. S. envoy had seen the real dictator of Italy.



Phillips

The one exception was when Sumner Welles visited Rome and insisted that Ambassador Phillips sit in on his talk with Mussolini. For 18 months prior to that, Il Duce had not seen one foreign diplomat except the German.

Phillips got the audience only because the President of the United States asked for it personally.

What Roosevelt wanted, of course, was some word regarding Italy's war aims.

Naturally no ambassador can ask the ruler of any country whether he intends to make war. Instead, Phillips raised the question of American shipping in the Mediterranean.

It was at this point that Mussolini replied reassuringly, and indicated that American shipping did not have to worry. But there was nothing definite denying war intention.

POWER AND LAMOUR CO-STAR IN "JOHNNY APOLLO"

Not since "Jesse James" has Tyrone Power had a role like that of "Johnny Apollo" in the 20th Century-Fox drama of that title which co-stars him with Dorothy Lamour at the Avery Theatre on Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, June 2-3-4.

"Johnny Apollo" is the alias of a young college man, a banker's son, who turns mobster when the father he idolized is sent to prison and his wealthy friends turn against him. Dorothy Lamour is more alluring than ever as "Lucky Dubarry," the hard-boiled night club entertainer who understands and loves the boy, no matter what he does Production chief, Darryl F Zanuck, carefully selected the supporting supporting cast. Edward Arnold is seen as the banker father. Lloyd Nolan plays Mickey Dwyer. the gangster whose mob Johnny Apollo joins Charley Grapewin is cast as a tippling ex-judge turned underworld lawyer, and Lionel Atwill is seen as the banker's lawyer, to whom Johnny appeals in vain for aid for his father. Highlighting the story are two special new song hits, sung by Dorothy Lamour, "Dancing for Nickels and Dimes" and "This is the Beginning of the End"

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

By HAROLD L. LUNDQUIST, D. D.
Dean of The Moody Bible Institute of Chicago
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

Lesson for June 2

Lesson subjects and Scripture texts selected and copyrighted by International Council of Religious Education, used by permission.

TESTING CONDUCT BY ITS USEFULNESS

(A Priciple of Temperate Living)

LESSON TEXT—Ezekiel 15:1-6; Matthew 5:13-16; 7 16-20; I Corinthians 10:6, 7.

GOLDEN TEXT—Ye shall know them by their fruits.—Matthew 7 16.

Sound principles are foundational to right living. Right living is temperate living. The first temperance lesson for the year emphasized the sacredness of life. This lesson, which is our second one on that subject, properly stresses the importance of testing conduct by its true usefulness.

The emphasis of modern thinking is upon learning, upon the brilliance of scientific achievement, with little or no concern about personal character. Christianity and the Bible go to the root of that matter, stressing the need of stalwart moral and spiritual character, without which other attainments are lacking m real value and meaning. Unless what a man accomplishes is the expression of the greatness of his character, it is transient and often detrimental in its effect on society.

Tested by its results, the liquor traffic stands conclusively and completely condemned. Even its own frantic efforts to clean up and be more presentable indicates that fact. McAlpine made a rather acute comment when he said,

"IF I WERE A LIAR . . .
I'd advertise beer as a food, whisky as the promoter of the abundant life, and cocktails as the badge of social correctness.
They say that if you repeat any thing times enough, people will believe it."

The Scripture portions before us present five inconsistencies, five mstances where fact denies a false profession.

I. Wood Without Strength. (Ezek. 15:1-6).

The branch of a vine is at its best too crooked and pliable to be very useful, but here we have a piece of vine which has been charred m the fire until it is so useless that it can only be burned up. This is the picture of a life, possibly somewhat limited in its abilities and gifts, but nevertheless valuable, but made utterly useless by careless or dissolute living. How tragic!

II. Salt Without Savor (Matt. 5: 13).

True salt is penetrating, antiseptic and purifying, but savorless salt is good for nothing but to make a road for the feet of men. "Ye are the salt of the earth." Christians, if they have the true savor in their lives, will count, by their very spiritual pugnency, against sin and corruption in their communities.

III. Light Without Illumination (Matt. 5:14).

A light is intended to give illumination to all around about it. It always does that thing unless someone hides it under a cover, and then it becomes not only useless, but dangerous. A life lighted by faith in Christ will shine to the very ends of the earth and, as a missionary once said, "The light that shines farthest shines brightest at home." We are the light of the world, but if we cover our light we deny the very essence of our natures. Here is no thought of proud or selfish display. Light does not shout about itself, it just shines—but it really does shine.

IV. Trees Without Fruit (Matt. 7: 16-20).

Every plant brings forth fruit after its own nature. We do not expect figs from thistles, but we do expect figs on the fig tree. The countryside bears no more desolate figure than a blasted, fruitless fruit tree. Quickly the owner cuts it down and terminates its shame and uselessness by burning it. What about men and women? God has made them in His own image and likeness. He has given them intelligence and personal ability. He has a right to expect the fruit of a useful life from every one, and particularly from the Christian, who is "a good tree."

V. Life Without a Purpose (I Cor. 10:6, 7).

Light and salt are inanimate objects Trees and vines with their wood and fruit are alive, but they are without intelligence and morality. Man, however, as we have already suggested, is the moral and intelligent crown of God's creation, made in His own image and likeness If they who know better, live lives of careless indifference, yea of outright wickedness, how shall they escape the judgment of God in the day when they shall stand before Him to give an account of the manner in which they have used this precious gift of life?

The Beginning of Wisdom

He sent redemption unto his people; he hath commanded his covenant forever; holy and reverent is his name. The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom; a good understanding have all they that do his commandments; his praise endureth forever.—Psalm 111: 9, 10.

PATTERN DEPARTMENT SEWING CIRCLE

HERE'S a beautifully graceful dress that has everything you need to make your figure look more slender and supple. Made with a long, unbroken line in the back, 8631 has a front panel widening toward the hem, (in itself creating the illusion of height as against width because it directs the eye up and down) bodice gathers and shoulder darts. Thus with a few easy details, it assures correct fit over the bust, slenderness of waistline and hips.

The deep, narrow v of the neckline adds to its becomingness, and you can trim that, and the sleeve edges, with dainty frills or lace without losing any of the slimming magic! Wear it now in small-figured print or dark sheers.

Pattern No. 8631 is designed for sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48, 50 and 52. Size 38 requires, with short sleeves, 4¼ yards of 39-inch material without nap; with long, 4⅝ yards of 39-inch material. 2¼ yards lace or ruffling to trim. Send order to:

Bertha Wished to Know Punishment—Just in Case

"Don't fidget!" snapped mother.

Little Bertha stopped toying with the lid of her chocolate box and endeavored to concentrate upon the play. But it was a dull affair.

In two minutes her small fingers were busy again.

"Bertha, don't fidget!" repeated her mother.

Again she was obedient, but once more the production failed to hold her fingers away from the lid of the chocolate box.

"Now, Bertha," exclaimed her mother, "I warn you."

When her mother spoke like that she was not to be disregarded. Glancing doubtfully at the dull stage, and then at the tempting lid, Bertha whispered:

"Would it be a hairbrush, mummy, or just your hand?"

Discretion

Hearing someone prowling about downstairs, the timid husband seized a candle and proceeded to investigate, while his even more timid wife buried her head beneath the bedclothes.

Suddenly her husband came upon a burglar, who covered him with a revolver.

"Oh, don't take any notice of me," said the timid man quickly. "I'm only walking in my sleep."

Maid (peeking through the keyhole)—Really, some people are too inquisitive. There's the missus reading her husband's mail.

Really Missed

Choir Boy—What made you resign from the choir?

Ex-Choir Boy—I was absent one Sunday and some one asked if the organ had been mended.

Cutting Remarks

"Hurry up, Harry! I simply must go out and show off my new dress."

"Wait a minute. I simply must cut the frayed ends off my coat sleeves."

Keeping Time

"What's the idea—only two prunes?" roared the British army sergeant.

"You save the stones twice a week till you get a thousand," said the orderly, "and then you know the war lasted five years all but ten weeks."

Quite Modest

They were discussing a certain public official.

"The trouble with him," observed the cynic, "is that he takes too modest a view of his own insignificance."

KLEMME BOY MAKINK GOOD IN ARMY AVIATION TRAINING

Mrs. Mary Church received the very interesting letter we are publishing here, from Earl Rietz who is stationed now at Lowry Field, Denver, Colorado.

Earl stayed at the home of Mrs. Church while attending high school. He is a graduate of the local school and is another home boy making good in the world. His letter follows:

"Dear Mrs. Church:

"Received your card today, May 13, and will answer immediately Well, here's what we do from 5 a. m. to 5 p. m. At 6:00 in the morning we stand revielle and then clean up the barracks. Chow is at 6:30 and school starts at 7.30 and continues until 12:00 noon. Chow at 12:15 and school starts again at 12:40 and continues till 5:00 p. m. Chow again at 5:15 p. m and then back to the barracks and study about three hours, unless you want to fail the next day Lights go out at 9.30 p. m. to get ready for the same old drag the next morning. Last Week we studied chemical warfare. We put on gas masks and ran us thru all kinds of gasses and we had to sniff the gasses in order to be ab to recognize them in time of wa Casualty gasses such as Lewisite, Mustard, Chlorine, Phosgene and Chlorasetaphenone. Stop me if I spelled that last one wrong Then they put us in the Gas Chambe. and turned on Tear Gas After the chamber was good and full they pulled off our masks and in about two seconds we were all sobbing and choking. Well, anyway, it was quite an experience and I'll never forget the smell of Lewisite gas It smells just like geraniums (at first). This week we are studying "Electrical Bomb Rack Controls." It is very complicated.

"This is quite the country out here and it is hard for me to get adjusted to the high climate. Last week I had quite a few nose-bleeds and headaches, but am getting used to it now.

"Denver is a real town, the best one yet (except Klemme). Well, the European Situation is getting tenser each hour, and I suppose I could argue all day as to whether we should rush in and make fools of ourselves or stay out and make fools of ourselves, however, I am beginning to think the British are "chicken-hearted."

"Now I'll quit and delve into the intricate mysteries of Bomb Racks."

"Maybe more later,"
"Earl"

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS BY ROGER SHAW

German March Toward Paris Marked by Terrific Fighting; U. S. Maps New Defense Plans

(EDITOR'S NOTE—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

II GERMAN WAR:
III Reich

Nothing succeeds like success. The latest Third Reich included Germany, Austria, Czecho Slovakia, Poland, Norway, Denmark, Holland, Belgium, Luxembourg, Memel, the Saar. Its friends and allies took in Russia, Italy, Japan, Spain, Hungary. Its sinister "list" seemed to include Switzerland, Jugoslavia, Rumania, and some said Sweden. It was more than Napoleonic—Poland in 18 days, Norway in 21; Holland in 5. So what next? England by parachute? France by tank?

There was serious talk of moving the French government out of Paris—destination unknown England rounded up another 3,000 Germans and Austrians between the ages of 16 and 60, two-thirds of them refugees from the nasty Nazi terror at home. Some quarter-million English volunteers enrolled to sharpshoot parachuters, and Premier Winston Churchill nervously promised his new constituents blood, and sweat, and toil, and tears—always a clever psychological trick in dealing with dogged Englishmen.

German authorities indicated that the government of any of their "protectorates" depended on how much resistance the "protected" had put up. Thereby, Denmark was getting grade-A treatment, Norway perhaps grade-B, and Poland a very low grade indeed. Holland was expected to get a rating similar to that of the Norse, though perhaps a trifle lower. For the Dutch had fought rather hard.

Belgian Bungle

Brussels, Namur, Liege, and Louvain fell as the Germans pushed ahead in Belgium. (The three big Belgian fortification sites were Namur, Liege, and Antwerp.) The Belgians, on the whole, fought better than the Dutch, but as the Belgic capital surrendered to Hitler, the German invaders were within 75 miles of that not so gay Paree. The Belgian government decamped to a safer spot, Ostend on the channel.

In at least four places, the Germans had pierced the French Maginot line extension, back of the Belgian border. Dr. Robert Ley, the not very Nordic Nazi minister of labor, announced that the German army was performing a "God-given natural mission." The Field Grays, he added, intended to make the world "happy and reasonable." But the French refused to be happy, and the English were certainly not feeling reasonable In desperation, the English Churchill government began to woo Russia with a "new and more friendly approach"—Russia, the recent "red beast" that victimized brave little Finland. Meanwhile, the United States and the 20 Latin American states went on record with an official denunciation of Germany's invasion of Holland and Belgium. Harsh observers branded the joint resolve as a Uruguayan "publicity stunt." And in France, a cabinet reshuffle found the hero of Verdun in the last World war, Henri Philippe Petain, named as vice premier to Premier Paul Reynaud.

Bull on Spot

John Bull, said critics, was on the spot The state department warned 7,000 Americans to get out of Britain, and stay out, and ordered them to go to the peaceful, prosperous Irish Free State. It was indicated that a Yankee rescue ship would fish the U. S refugees out of the emerald Eire. But many Americans refused to leave J Bull.

Sweden Overmatched

Sweden was nervous as bullying German troops, in Norway, were reported massed on the Swedish border—whence comes more than a third of the German iron supply. But that was not all. The entire Swedish match industry, turning out 90,000,000,000 matches per year, was closing down because it could not export. "Sweden is-or-has no match for Hitler," exploded a wit. But fine Swedish iron continued to pour out of Swedish Lapplard

POTOMAC POWER:
FDR Wants Money

The President told congress, dramatically, in joint session, that he wanted a billion bucks and 50,000 warplanes to defend our country against 3,000-mile blitzkriegs. Two-thirds of the billion were to go to the U. S. army. Roosevelt hinted that it might be nice to raise the legal national debt limit—which is $45,000,000,000 He asked that he be given $100,000,000 in cash, to provide for "emergencies." But an answer, in part, came from presidential possibility Willkie, in an Indianapolis speech. Willkie said that adequate national defense depended on domestic recovery. Meanwhile, the continentalists rallied against the anglophiles and internationalists, in and out of congress Senators Johnson, Norris and Wheeler—all of them, naturally, pro-ally — were especially active against any "1917" wiles. But old Pershing, a big man in 1917, spoke of the "possibility of war," while War Secretary Woodring spoke of our maintaining peace It was all very confusing. There was even talk of lending some money to the no-pay French and English, but it was only talk.

Good Old Garner

There was a tale to the effect that Vice President Garner now admitted Roosevelt's nomination for the Third Term. He said, supposedly, that Roosevelt had absolute control of the Chicago convention, and that was that. But, Texas Jack continued (so they say) that he himself would not run again, because he was opposed to Third Terms for vice presidents, as well as for Presidents. Thereby, he established his consistency, and may have opened the door to a swarm of ambitiously would-be V. P.'s. Roosevelt had at least 431 convention delegates pledged or committed, and was expected soon to possess more than the necessary 548 majority.

U. S. CIVIL WAR:
Down in Looseana

Down in Creole Looseana, there was an American civil war going on. It was being fought out between hard-working units of Uncle Sam's tried and true regular army. Some 30,000 blues were defending the state against 25,000 red invaders from Texas. Somehow (an unusual feature of this La-Tex struggle) the defenders were reported as employing blitzkrieg tactics, and seemed to be forging ahead. There even was a fifth column, to make things perfect. This fifth column (so-called) consisted of local bovines, who licked the insulation of army telephone lines, and thereby committed military sabotage in the first, second and third degrees. In Russia, they'd have fixed 'em! But these fifth-columnar cows of Dixie gained reprieve. As to the battleground itself, Looseana—its new governor, Sam Houston Jones, told 100,000 people at a barbecue that no more Huey Longs would run the state.

ON THE MOVE:

25,000 residents in the Dutch East Indies, definitely were off the move. These were suspects, both German and Dutch, rounded up by the watchful colonial authorities, only too conscious of fifth-column and Trojan Horse tactics. Simultaneously, in New York, great dissension arose when a popular native declared: "The fifth column in this country is headed by that fellow in the White House." At this, the pro-Roosevelts decidedly got a move on.

At Odessa, by the Black sea, Russia has a parachuting doctor, who bails out in a big hurry, to get to urgent cases. He delivered two babies from the air. It was suggested that, next December, German parachute men might be disguised as Santa Clauses.

New York hosiery counters reported a hectic rush for nylon, at $1.35. And, alas, the feminine rush was followed by nylon runs. Or so they said. Macy reported 20 fast-moving women at the nylon counter in the first minute, but there was little or no intra-female carnage.

Wonder-of-the-Week

Here is the latest wonder of the plant world—the "Topato." It is displayed here by its "inventor," George H. Chisholm, superintendent and horticulturist at the greenhouses of the Yonkers, N. Y., estate of the late Samuel Untermyer. Chisholm crossed a tomato and a potato to produce a new non-fattening type of potato, which he has dubbed the "Topato."

ANTI-PARACHUTE:
Penn Patriots

England's new war minister, cute-looking Sir Tony Eden, has been active in organizing local corps of sharpshooters to pick off, willy nilly, invading parachute jumpers from across the channel. Jeannette, in western Pennsylvania, was not to be left behind. It formed a group of "sharpies"—the first civilian anti-parachute legion in the United States. Its members feared that parachute activities might be directed against the Pittsburgh industrial belt, of which Jeannette is a part. "Gauleiters" Brust and Landis, local marksman and local editor, headed the Jeannette parachute-poppers.

S. S. HARDING:
In Memoriam

The former United States liner, President Harding, was sunk by bombs off the Flemish coast of Belgium. She was built in 1921, and her tonnage totaled 13,869. Your correspondent returned on her from the war, last October The U. S. lines sold her to a Belgian shipping corporation, after American neutrality rules precluded U. S. boating in the war zone. The Belgians renamed the Harding, the Ville de Bruges. So perished the namesake of the leader of the Ohio Gang But out of death comes life—two brand-new American destroyers were launched in Washington's Puget Sound: the Hughes and the Monssen, both named after Yankee naval heroes, and christened by their widows.

YANKEE JAW-POWER:
We Can't Bite

America is not short on manpower, but it was announced that Americans are short on jawpower. Forty-five years ago, the average Yank could bite 171 pounds-worth. But in 1940, the Yank, degenerated, can only bite 125 pounds-worth. Soft food, alas, has done it. Take the average Eskimo, lucky fellow. He has, it is said, a good strong bite of 300 pounds-worth. This is called "chewing-force."

The woodchopper of Doorn, Holland, figured again in the news. The ex-kaiser was skirted by the Nazi invaders, guarded and ultra-courteously treated. This was to keep the still monarchist army officers—East Prussian Junkers — contented and happy. Gossips have had it that the ex-kaiser, deeply religious and anti-revolutionary, is mildly pro-ally and intensely loyal to his kindly refuge of Holland. It was said that Prussian Wilhelm nearly fled to England with Dutch Wilhelmina!

Known as the "right hand" of Generalissimo Ferdinand Foch in the last World war, French Gen. Maxime Weygand, now 73 years of age, is named commander-in-chief of the Allies in their present conflict with Germany. He comes to the Western front from the Near East where he was in top command and replaces General Gamelin. Born in Belgium he became a French citizen and was head of the army from 1931 to 1935.

Dorothy Thompson, columnist, urged that the Republican party support Roosevelt for a third term. George Sokolsky, columnist, strongly opposed the urge of Miss Thompson. He said that war under Roosevelt would turn these United States into a totalitarian unit. Both columnists write for the New York Herald Tribune,

NEW YORK AIR DEFENSE
Washington, D. C.

The army is not anxious to publicize the fact, but as of today there are only 39 anti-aircraft guns in the whole New York city defense area.

Six months ago not even the most cautious generals would have worried about this. But after watching German air operations in the past month, and after doing a little figuring with paper and pencil on the flight performances of German planes, the army is rushing more aircraft guns to the nation's biggest city.

Twenty-two battalions with 264 additional guns will be sent to New York as soon as the army can get them, but that will not be before the end of the year.

Note—The arithmetic which worried the army was this: Norway to Iceland, 733 miles; Iceland to Newfoundland, 1,500 miles; Newfoundland to New England, 800 miles.

More arithmetic: German Messerschmitt No. 110s have a flying range of 1,700 miles; German bombers have a minimum range of 1,230 miles, most of them more; and Germany has between 8,000 and 10,000 of them.

NAZI STRATEGY

When Sumner Welles was in Berlin on his peace pilgrimage, the Hitler entourage told him flatly that if Britain wanted to continue the war, Germany was ready to lose 9,000 planes—if necessary—in raining the greatest barrage of bombs in history on England.

With Dutch air bases, plus new submarine bases in Norway, the Nazis plan to put the greatest squeeze in history on England, subject her to a terrific air bombardment, and land invading forces for the first time since the triumphal march of William the Conqueror in 1066.

The military strategy of the Nazis is the old Schlieffen plan used by the kaiser's troops in the last war. Briefly summarized, the plan is: Outflank, Develop, Destroy.

To this, the Nazis have added some streamlining of their own, namely the "locusts" or parachute troops, whose objective is to get into the enemy's radio and telegraph offices, disrupt communications, and cause as much confusion as possible behind the lines.

ARGENTINE NEUTRALITY

If anyone around the state department ever had any doubt that Cordell Hull was not a candidate for President, they changed their minds after seeing him sit upon the Argentine proposal for the American nations to give up neutrality for a state of "non-belligerency." This meant a status somewhat similar to Italy's—but friendly to the allies instead of to Hitler.

The Argentines pointed out that, like President Roosevelt, they had sent sympathetic messages to the king and queen of Belgium and Holland; that they had impounded the money and property of the Low Countries in order to keep it out of Nazi hands; and that as a matter of cold fact, none of the Pan-Americans was really neutral anyway.

German Supplies.

Diplomats arriving here from Berlin tell a significant story of Germany's shortage of food and materials. Undoubtedly this had something to do with Hitler's decision to stake everything on victory this summer.

Returning officials report that "Ersatz" coffee is brewed from apple peelings.

The shortage is not only in foodstuffs but also in clothing, which is rationed to insure the supply for the armed forces. A woman may buy clothing only to the extent of 100 "points" in the course of a whole year. And a single pair of silk stockings rates 30 points.

More important from the military viewpoint is the report that German gasoline is of such poor quality that it befouls the motors and causes frequent replacements.

In other words, the question of observers is—how long is the supply line?

Note—German people are forbidden to listen to foreign radio broadcasts, but in many German households at night you might see a strange looking mound covered by a bedspread—the family huddled together secretly near the radio, listening to broadcasts from overseas

THREE-DECKER PULLMAN BERTHS

We've had the three-decker sandwich and the three-decker bus and now we are about to get the three-decker railroad berth.

* * *

The Pullman company is turning out a combination coach-sleeper that will have the berths in three layers: lower, upper and stratosphere.

The new car will represent the combined talents of the railroad, the hotel, the trailer and the parlor-magic industries. Your chair is a railroad chair one moment and—presto!—a three-passenger boudoir the next.

Through the new car the Pullman company carries the art of concealing plumbing to new heights. There are almost as many fixtures hidden under one seat as you will find in most plumbers' supply windows.

The new car is a de luxe coach without the conventional center aisle. The aisle is now about three points to starboard. There are accommodations for 45 passengers. Nothing more than the appearance of the porter with a few mysterious motions is necessary to eliminate the seats and substitute the ground floor, mezzanine and terrace berths.

It has everything but elevator service between bunks.

When all three occupants desire to go to bed at once there is no problem. But it will become a matter for the American Railroad association, the RFC, the SEC and the sundry private and federal agencies when one man wants to turn in and the other two want to play rummy.

Elmer Twitchell's chief concern is that he will be in a lower on a rough road when two fellows in the uppers have breakfast in bed.

The modernization of railroad cars within the last few years has been amazing. So rapid has been the trend that when a man gets into an old-time railroad car today it is like climbing into a 1908 air-cooled Franklin roadster.

And what the roads have done to the dining cars is nobody's business.

They even have hostesses in 'em. She's the brunette who, when you enter all alone, holds up her index finger and asks, "One?" This shows how dizzy those diners are. We hope that whatever happens the roads don't put on three-decker diner tables.

Mussolini's attitude may be described as that of a man who is working hard for peace with both fists.

THE GULL AND THE EARTHQUAKE

A seagull, tired out from a long journey, flew toward land and lighted on a crag, but as it happened an earthquake occurred at that identical moment. To the dismay of the little bird the whole line of rocky cliffs seemed to tremble suddenly, lift upward and then collapse beneath him.

At this the gull flapped his wings and flew back to sea as fast as he could, screaming tragically: "See the evil thing I've done! . . . I lit on the crag for a moment, and as a result I've wrecked the whole coast line!"

His companions consoled him as best they could. "I don't think I'd take all the responsibility," they said gently. "There was an earthquake, too, you know."

silence. They found only the footprints of the Indians who had fled at their approach but on a tree was carved the letters C R O. Pushing on to the site of the "Citie of Raleigh" they discovered that the houses had been taken down and the place enclosed with a high palisade. On one of the posts at the right side of the entrance was carved the word "Croatan."

Before leaving, White had instructed the colonists, if they decided to move, to carve their destination on a tree, adding a cross if they were in distress. The absence of a cross from the tree and the post on which they found the carved words gave White hope that his people were still living. Croatan island was the site of a village of Indians whose chief, Manteo, had been to England with the first Raleigh expedition and who was friendly to the English.

But when White urged the captain of the privateering fleet to send a party to Croatan his request was refused. Their supplies were low and the captain was anxious to resume his operations against the Spanish. Later Sir Walter Raleigh sent no less than five expeditions to search for his "Lost Colony." But the seas were swarming with Spanish privateers and there is no record that any of the ships reached Croatan.

For more than a century the vicinity of the ill-fated colony was unexplored and its fate accepted as an unsolved mystery. Then in 1709 John Dawson, an English explorer, visited the Hatteras Indians who had gray or blue eyes and were familiar with the art of reading, in that they knew that the English "could make paper speak." These Indians were less than 100 in number and it was believed that they were descendants of survivors of the Roanoke colony who had been assimilated into the Indian tribe living on Croatan island.

Old Names Persist.

The name Virginia Dare was unknown among them but Hamilton McMillan and other historians of the tribe believed that the Indian surname "Dorr" originally was "Dare," the change being the result of the tribe's guttural pronunciation. On the roster of the "Lost Colony" were the names of Henry Berry, John Sampson and a score of others which are to be found among the Indians of Robeson county and have been since before the Revolution. An Indian named Henry Berry enlisted in a company of North Carolina colonial troops to fight against the British and Henry Berry Lowrie was the leader of the famous Indian outlaw gang which terrorized that part of North Carolina for 10 years after the Civil war.

Although, in colonial days these Indians were proud of the name "Croatans" and boasted of their white as well as Indian ancestors, today these people do not like the name, some preferring to be known as "Cherokee Indians of Robeson County" while others call themselves "Siouans."

The tribe's aversion to the name Croatan is the result of reports made to the department of interior in Washington the effect that the blood of a number of runaway negro slaves also was to be found in some families of the race. And although the department's study included many excerpts from the histories of McMillan and Stephen B. Weeks, another historian who believed he had found conclusive evidence that the "Lost Colony's" descendants were here, it also quoted others who took the position that the white blood of the race came from roving seamen, including pirates who once were bottled up in the nearby Cape Fear river by ships of the English and early colonial navies. The Indians were incensed and for a quarter of a century have endeavored to shake off the name "Croatan" with only partial success.

The best known name in Croatan history is that of Henry Berry Lowrie, the famed outlaw previously mentioned. The state put a price of $10,000 on his head, dead or alive, and anyone who killed or captured a member of his gang was given half as much. A number were killed in gun fights but in the entire history of the gang's operations only one member was ever captured and held long enough to be executed by the state. What finally became of Lowrie is almost as much a mystery as the antecedents of the tribe.

Driven to Outlawry.

As hated as the Lowrie gang was in the days when its robberies and murders were common occurrence, those who in recent years have studied its history are inclined to place much of the blame on the whites. Among these historians is R. C. Lawrence, an attorney who has devoted the last several years of his life to writing and to research. In the first place, the Indians who volunteered or were conscripted for service in the Civil war frequently were placed with gangs of negro slaves and assigned to work rather than to fight. Many immediately deserted. The final straw was the summary execution of Lowrie's father and brother by members of the home guard, who were investigating instances of petty thievery. On that day Henry Berry swore revenge and regardless of where the blame lay, there is no doubt that he got it.

Most persistent in the war against the Lowrie gang was Frank W. Wishart, formerly a captain of the Confederate army, who was commissioned by the state to run the outlaws down. Along with many others, he was killed by the gang, but Lawrence writes that he is due more credit than any other individual for the eventual success of the campaign.

How and why the gang dissolved is uncertain. One story is that the chief accidentally killed himself while cleaning his rifle. Another is that he called the gang together, formally dissolved it, and left this vicinity forever. Once a group of men from Lumberton, the seat of this county, thought they recognized as Henry Berry Lowrie an old man, obviously part Indian, they found working around a hotel in Oklahoma. The next day they sought to investigate, but the Indian had disappeared and no one was to be found who knew where he had come from.

But the Lowrie name and Lowrie leadership is still to be found here and members of the family are proud of Henry Berry Lowrie, whom they consider another Robin Hood. One of his great nephews, Principal Kermit Lowrie of the Indian school, has as his most prized possession old Henry Berry's favorite rifle. Other descendants of the members of the gang are among the largest landowners of this primarily agricultural region. Their sons go to college and many have made names for themselves in various professions.

The once strained relations between the Indians and the whites of this section are now harmonious. The real turning point came, say the Indians, when more than half a century ago the state of North Carolina recognized them as a race apart and provided separate schools. Today there are three kinds of schools in this county—the Indians, whites and negroes each having institutions of their own. A theater in a nearby town has a separate entrance for members of each race. And in Pembroke the state has operated an Indian school since 1887.

"It's still too early to talk much about it," said one of the younger leaders of the community, "but I wouldn't be surprised if some day we wouldn't readopt the name of Croatan. I know something about the history of my people and to my way of thinking, it's a name of which we should be proud."

IOWA'S GREAT INDUSTRY GETS NATIONAL ATTENTION THIS MONTH

Iowa Dairy Month Being Observed During June All Over State

Iowa is playing a leading role in June dairy month, as the state's annual milk production is valued at almost $66,000,000.

"On January 1, there were 1,487,000 milk cows reported in Iowa valued at $92,194,000," says the Milk Industry Foundation in a statement urging nation-wide support for the Dairy Month Campaign. "Production in 1939 equalled 3,032,000,000 quarts.

"Iowa is of vital importance to the dairy industry," the Foundation declared, "and this June program will benefit consumers by emphasizing the food value in milk and dairy products, and enable producers and distributors to promote increased demand for excess farm milk production.

"In addition to fluid milk which brings the farmer his highest price, Iowa in 1938 produced 229,604,000 pounds of butter, 5,442,000 pounds of cheese, 6,260,000 gallons of ice cream, 34,441,000 pounds of canned milk, 10,599,000 pounds of condensed or evaporated buttermilk.

"In 1938 milk was the third largest single source of farm cash income in the state topped only by hogs and cattle. Cash farm income from milk equalled 84 per cent of the income from all grains, including corn; was 4 per cent larger than corn alone; 16 per cent larger than the combined income from sheep and lamb, chickens, and eggs.

"Estimates for the nation as a whole show that milk production on farms this June will reach a new all-time peak. Last year, June farm milk production in the U. S. totalled 5,332,000,000 quarts of milk."

PECULIAR

A peculiar accident involving a .22 rifle, a man and a strong gust of wind laid Louis Tieden, Elkader farmer, on the shelf for a few days. While herding cattle, Tieden carried a rifle to shoot ground squirrels. He leaned the gun against a fence. A strong gust of wind blew it down and caused it to discharge, wounding him in the right foot.

FRUIT PROSPECTS ARE GOOD FOR IOWA THIS YEAR

Fruit prospects for Iowa this year are very good, states R. S. Herrick, Secretary of the Iowa State Horticultural Society

According to Herrick, small fruits such as grapes and berries are in very good condition with a heavy crop expected. Plum and cherry crop will be good to fair but the Iowa peach crop is expected to be very light. The apple bloom was one of the heaviest in years; however, due to a lack of bees which should be present to facilitate pollination, and to this spring's cold weather, the set of the apples may be greatly affected, thus reducing the yield. Canker worms have also been quite destructive in unsprayed orchard and on elm trees this spring.

DEANNA DURBIN IN COLORFUL TRIUMPH

Heralded as Deanna Durbin's most colorful motion picture, "It's a Date," which has its background in Hawaii, will open at the Avery Theatre Sunday, June 9, for two days.

Marking another important forward step in the development of the Universal star into more mature roles, Deanna's seventh film finds her surrounded by a stellar cast. Kay Francis and Walter Pidgeon share major honors.

The story concerns a famous Broadway actress and her daughter played by Miss Francis and Miss Durbin, who are offered the same role in a Broadway show. In addition, they become rivals for the romantic interest of a Hawaiian pineapple planter, portrayed by Pidgeon. Deanna's boy-friend played by Howard, also figures prominently in the complicated but ingratiating proceedings. Harry Owens and his internationally famous orchestra, the Royal Hawaiians, are also in the cast to carry on the Hawaiian atmosphere for this colorful production.

NEW USE FOUND FOR KLEMME MOUSE TRAPS . . .

Ed Thompson, proprietor of the Runway Mouse Trap Co., of Klemme, received a letter from one of his salesmen in Illinois the other day, telling of a new use for the Runway mouse trap.

An Illinois truck gardener was having trouble with sparrows in his gardens, so conceived the idea of baiting a few traps with corn and placing them in his gardens. The experiment was successful, and in less than a week's time had trapped some one hundred troublesome sparrows

THE BIG BOYS HAVE THEIR LITTLE JOKES . . .

Some of the "higher ups" in the State House have a fine sense of humor. Over at Dows recently at the inter-state fish dinner, Governor Wilson was on the speaking program, and in referring to the fish dinner he said it was easy to tell the difference between Democrat fish and Republican fish. He said, "Republican fish are game fish . . . . ."

Down at the state office the other day, a friend dropped in to chat with Treasurer Bagley of Mason City, and asked that jovial gentleman "What is the difference between a sweet potato and H. R. Gross?"

Mr. Bagley bit and inquired, "What is the difference?"

Replied his friend: "Gross is a common 'tater!"

MACNIDER TELLS 'EM OUT IN WASHINGTON . . . .

Col. Hanford MacNider, of Mason City, and Iowa's candidate for President of the United States on the Republican ticket, was the keynote speaker at the Republican state convention held at Tacoma, Washington, Saturday. MacNider's speech was broadcast over a national hook-up.

MacNider spoke of the dangers of a possible third term for the present administration and one of the most forceful facts he brought out was the apparent "scare" that the New Deal is trying to throw out at the present time in wanting to putover a big armament and preparedness program. MacNider threw out the challenge for Mr. Roosevelt to explain what he has been doing the past seven years and why this country is so poorly prepared to defend itself against possible invasion.

It would have been a wonderful thing if every citizen of the United States could have heard MacNider's talk Saturday. It would certainly make everyone, Republican or Democrat, sit up and take notice of what the New Deal has put over in seven short years.

Last week, Ray Bryan, 44, of Harvey, chopped down a tree. The tree fell on him, caused injuries that resulted in his death 24 hours later.

STRANGE GAME

An Englishman's viewpoint of American baseball—excerpts from an account in the Ashington Collieries Magazine:

"A diminutive person about four feet high, complete with player's uniform including giant jockey cap, is handing bludgeons around for inspection." Yes—it was the bat boy! He continues: "The fielding is the liveliest thing imaginable. Those at the bases and outfield are armed with a single glove as large as a frying pan. The balls are skied to a tremendous height, but I never saw a catch missed."

In a Nutshell

The theater was in an uproar.

"They're calling for the author," said the man responsible for the play.

The manager grabbed the playwright and impelled him along the passage. As he shoved him toward the curtain he said curtly: "Well, just go in front and tell them you're sorry."

A COUPLE OF TEETH
Washington, D. C.

This is a parable. It is being written within the hour that I had two teeth yanked. They were fine perfect teeth. All mine are. Never before, except for one that got broken in a controversial colloquy, did a dental surgeon ever do anything to me—and I am 58. At 80 my mother had all her teeth. It runs in the family.

This year, in the cool impartial efficiency of the army medical corps, I was told by the chief of dental surgery at Walter Reed hospital: "These two teeth have to go if you don't want to lose half a dozen."

I was very angry. Even his X-ray showed their perfection.

I raged up to New York to consult independently my favorite experts—two of them—Ted Fonarton and Joe Levy.

Now my two teeth are gone and, as the anesthetic wears off, it hurts like hell.

Everybody remarked what swell teeth they were, even after they were out. But an infection had destroyed the foundation in which they were imbedded.

By the protective action, advised by experts less than two years ago, I could have saved them. I felt nothing, so I didn't do what my experts advised.

England understands this sort of thing now and so do France and Holland and Belgium. We are beginning to understand it in a panicky sort of way.

Three years ago a veteran expert on American industrial preparedness, a man with unusual sources of information in Europe, Mr. B. M. Baruch, told the President what was going on there, what wasn't going on here at all, and not going on fast enough in England and France.

But we rocked along—exactly as I did with my teeth. Now that we see what ingenious fiendishness in the hell of modern war looks like, every drowsy editorial page, column of comment and panicky legislator begins to demand "billions for defense."

O. K., but it isn't enough. We can't meet this danger simply by "passing a law," even if it appropriates billions.

The answer to three questions is absolutely imperative. (1) What are we to defend? That is an answer to be made by the President and the state department. (2) What do we need to defend it? That is an answer to be made by the army and navy. (3) How can we best and most quickly and economically get what we need? That is for the leaders of industry.

For God's sake let's show just a fraction of Hitler's intelligence and preserve not only our skin but the teeth we are going to need so badly.

U. S. BLUNDERS

Among the snap judgments coming out of Europe is that only a dictatorship can make effective war.

It is not a fact. Woodrow Wilson said wisely of 1918: "The highest and best efficiency is the spontaneous co-operation of a free people."

It is true that we stumbled lamentably before we got into the war—and immediately afterward.

We stumbled because we were misinformed and far from unity of purpose. As soon as the great majority of our people were informed and had decided on what we must do, no nation in history—not even Germany today—ever made a quicker, better or more massive mobilzation and attack.

It isn't a question of form of government or organization. It is solely a question of right men in the right places.

If a dictatorship were the answer to efficiency the dictatorship of Joe Stalin is the most absolute on earth.

Germany is doing a record-smashing job of war-making and showing her competition up as bush leaguers. But that is solely because Germany turned her military and industrial problems over to experts in both arts.

England didn't. She suppressed Churchill until the guns began to roar. He was a trained expert.

We have followed the British blunder. In this administration experience in this bloody business of war or any other business has been a passport to oblivion.

EZEKIEL TEACHES PERSONAL RESPONSIBILITY

LESSON TEXT—Ezekiel 33:7-16.
GOLDEN TEXT—So then every one of us shall give account of himself to God.—Romans 14:12.

Personal responsibility is a subject well worthy of careful and repeated consideration. We talk so much about social, national or racial responsibility that we are prone to forget that the social order, nations and races, are made up of individuals. The Bible, while recognizing the relationship and responsibilities of nations and social groups to God, rightly stresses individual responsibility. It is man who is made in the likeness and image of God. He is the one who has fallen into sin, and he needs the regenerating grace of God in the Lord Jesus Christ. It is man who stands responsible to God, both as an individual and as God's representative in carrying His message to others.

I. Man's Responsibility for the Lives of Others (vv. 7-11).

Ezekiel had the official responsibility of a watchman sent by God to his own people in their captivity in Babylon. His was a special calling, and yet is it not true that, according to the teaching of the New Testament, every Christian is called to be a witness, a winner of souls, and a watchman?

1. The Watchman's Commission (v. 7). His appointment is by God, and the warning words he is to speak are given to him by God. Every true preacher and teacher of the gospel should be a God-called man, presenting the Word of God. Otherwise, his ministry will have little meaning and no real power. The same is true of every Christian; a personal touch with God must precede his efforts to win others to God.

2. The Watchman's Responsibility (vv. 8, 9). Being a watchman is not a duty that one bears lightly, for it has grave responsibilities. Lives are dependent on the vigilance and faithfulness of the watchman. Even those who watch over worldly goods or who guard the safety and comfort of others are held by us to a high measure of responsibility and are liable for misfeasance or carelessness in office. What about those of us to whom the destiny of eternal souls has been committed? Read the solemn words of verses 8 and 9.

3. The Watchman's Message (vv. 10, 11). The Jews who were in captivity because of their sin and failure were despondent. They saw no ray of hope; they were under the overwhelming burden of their sin. The message of God's watchman was one of hope to the repentant people. God is gracious toward the sinner and has no pleasure in punishing him. "Why will ye die?" places the responsibility squarely where it belongs—on the sinner himself.

II. Man's Responsibility for His Own Life (vv. 12-16).

Whatever may be our responsibility for the lives of others, certain it is that we must each one answer to God for our own lives. Ours is the glorious opportunity of living our life—and ours is the responsibility for it.

1. Consistent Living Required (v. 12). This verse evidently does not mean that a righteous man overtaken in a moment of defeat is lost. It rather refers to the one who has made an outward show of being righteous. Confident of himself, he has then fallen into careless living, and all at once his true character is revealed in outright wickedness. That man cannot then draw on his past record as though it were a bank account to be used to justify him in his hour of failure. Righteousness is a matter of the heart. It is a spiritual rebirth, expressing itself in changed conduct and consistent living, not only yesterday and today, but also tomorrow.

2. Real Repentance Accepted (vv. 13-16). God was ready in Ezekiel's day to accpet the genuinely repentant man and woman. Infinitely more precious and warm is the welcome that Christ now gives to sinners who turn to Him, for He, our blessed Lord, has now worked out the way of salvation on Calvary's tree.

'In' Not 'For'

Am I to thank God for everything? Am I to thank Him for bereavement, for pain, for poverty, for toil? . . . Be still my soul; thou hast misread the message. It is not to give thanks for everything, but to give thanks in everything.—Dr. G. Matheson.

DETERMINE TIME TO CUT ALFALFA BY ITS BLOOM

Experiments which have been conducted in Iowa show that the best time to cut alfalfa is when it is about one-tenth to one-fourth in bloom, according to E. S Dyas, Iowa State College extension agro-nomist.

Cutting alfalfa earlier than the "one-tenth" stage will improve the quality of hay but will also injure the stand and endanger future pro-duction, he says Cutting it later will result in bigger yields and less injury to the stand, but reduces the quality and feeding value of the hay.

"Alfalfa gives the highest yields and stands live longest when cut at about the full bloom stage," Dyas says. "But farmers who have fed early-cut alfalfa hay don't like hay cut at full bloom stage be-cause many of the leaves are lost and the stems are harder."

SET 2,100,000 TREES IN IOWA THIS SPRING

Iowa farmers speeded up conser-vation this spring by setting 2,100-000 young trees, reports G. B. Mac-Donald, state forester at Iowa State College

Farmers were able to plant an estimated 2,000 acres to woodlots, windbreaks and gully control areas under the 1924 Clarke-McNary Act calling for government aid in dis-tributing planting stock .State for-est nurseries at Ames and Keosau-qua supplied the trees which were planted partly under the AAA pro-gram.

By signing up for the 1940 AAA program, Iowa farmers received up to $30 by planting 4 acres of land to forest trees. They received five soil-building credits of $1 50 each for every acre containing at least 650 trees Windbreak plantings re-quired only 300 trees per acre.

"This is the first year the tree planting provision of the AAA pro-gram has been effective," MacDon-ald said "Payments this year are over and above payments for other soil-building practices."

Planting this spring was heaviest in West Central Iowa where Soil Conservation Service camps are lo-cated. Monona county used about 130,000 trees and Harrison county some 90,000. Other high counties were Crawford, Winneshiek, Wood-bury and Montgomery.

Iowa farms now include between 1½ to 2 million acres of wooded land. This acreage is expected to show an increase next year as more farmers participate in the AAA tree-planting program.

BELMOND VOTERS VOTE IN FAVOR OF FRANCHISE

Central States Is Granted 25 Year Franchise at Polls

BELMOND—The Central States Electric Company was granted a renewal of its franchise here Thurs-day for a term of 25 years.

A total of 880 votes were cast in the special election with 536 ap-proving the issue, 338 opposing it and six ballots thrown out as spoiled.

Two years ago, when the fran-chise renewal was first considered, an election was called to vote bonds for a municipal light and power plant. The proposition was defeated at that time.

H. F. Kellogg, of Iowa Falls, division headquarters for the Cen-tral States utility, is manager of the Belmond plant.

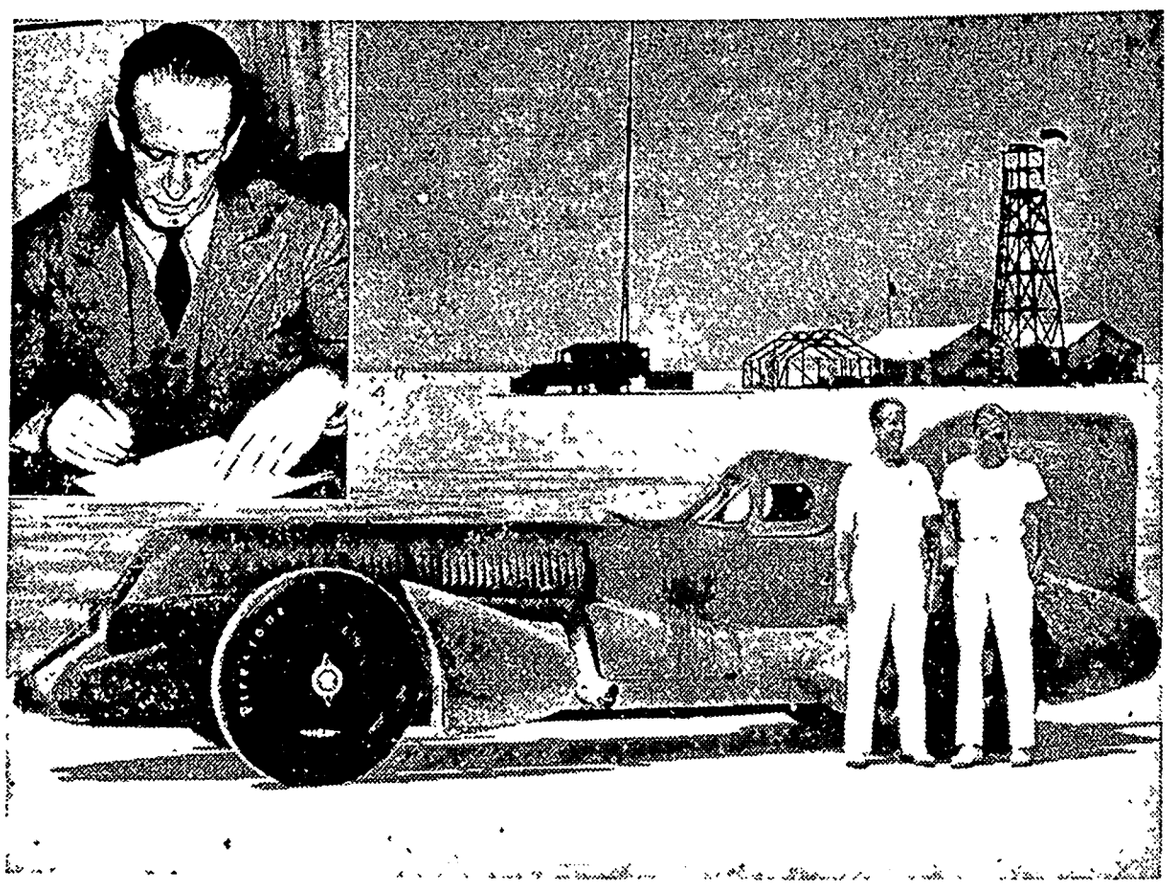
Mayor Elected in Safety Campaign Now Plans to Capture Speed Title



Here you see Mayor Ab Jenkins of Salt Lake City, at his desk, and (below) with his son Marv beside the "Mormon Meteor III," in which they will attempt to establish new speed record. Also (top to the right), the Bonneville salt flats. The salt surface is as hard as concrete and perfectly flat. It is the world's fastest speedway, is the claim.

Salt Lake's Chief Magistrate Will Try for World Record On Salt Flats; Will Also Tour United States.

By RUFUS HARMON

(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

The unusual spectacle of a mayor of a city of 150,000 driving a racing car at a speed of nearly 200 miles an hour will be enjoyed by several thousand Salt Lake City residents this midsummer. To them, however, it won't be an unusual event at all!

For their mayor is Ab Jenkins, world-famous speed king, who holds more world records than you could shake a stick at.

The odd combination of mayor and speed king is just another chapter in the amazing story of Mayor Jenkins—building contractor, automobile barnstormer, stock-car record breaker, world speed king and now mayor and police commissioner of his own Salt Lake City!

Aids His Livelihood.

Breaking records is no publicity stunt for Jenkins. For many years it's been the means of his considerable livelihood. And inasmuch as the mayor's job in his city doesn't pay a very large salary, Jenkins' world-record attempts this summer will be made for the express purpose of winning prize money to balance the Jenkins' family budget! It is, in other words, his job.

He broke into national prominence in the summer of 1932 when he drove 24 hours, without relief, to set a new world's record for that time and distance. This annoyed the American Automobile association contest board considerably. As a matter of fact, they refused to believe it at all. So the next summer he returned to the same speed site—the now world-famous Bonneville Salt Flats in western Utah—and with the watchful eye of the AAA on him, proceeded to do the same thing and raise his own record.

So far as speed is concerned, this is far from a climax to his spectacular career. For he intends, before he hangs up his goggles, to bring the world's land speed record to America.

Aiming at 400 Miles.

There's quite a story behind these flats. Jenkins first drove a car on them in 1926, and was so certain that here was the ideal speed course that he finally badgered an automobile company into letting him try for the world's record which he set in 1932. Then, with bigger things in sight, he labored unceasingly and at his own expense to get Sir Malcolm Campbell to bring his Bluebird out to try and reach the then undreamed of speed of 300 miles an hour. Campbell finally came in 1935, and the result is now familiar history. Campbell did better than 301 miles an hour and was followed by two of his countrymen, Cobb and Capt. George Eyston, who between them have pushed the land speed record to its altitudinous 367 miles per hour figure.

Now Jenkins wants that—and he's aiming at 400 miles an hour!

Just to give you an idea of what Jenkins has done in the way of speed, he has a list of achievements that is almost unbelievable. In his time, he has broken more than 2,000 records, some of them many times.

Motor for $2,800? Nix! This Mayor Has a Spare

No orthodox mayor is Salt Lake City's Ab Jenkins.

The fire department needed a new motor for one of its hook-and-ladder wagons. A requisition for the motor was brought to the mayor's desk.

"Nothing doing," said he. "Twenty-eight hundred dollars is too much. I've got a motor the department can have."

Ab wouldn't take money for it, either. He turned the motor over to the city as a gift—and was genuinely surprised the newspapers gave the story a big play.

He now holds 294 world speed records. He is the only American to hold any world speed records.

Makes Tours for Safety.

Most of these have been made in his revolutionary series of "Mormon Meteor" cars. His present car of the series is the "Mormon Meteor III," in which he believes he can travel better than 200 miles an hour. Mechanically it embodies new ideas from tip to stern—a 700-horsepower giant that is the racing mayor's brain child in every respect.

But this is only one angle to the amazing achievements of the Salt Lake City mayor. For years he has toured the nation in the interests of safety. He speaks with authority, for he has driven nearly 2,000,000 miles without an accident of any kind!

It was on a safety platform, as a matter of fact, that he was elected mayor. That happened last November when from a popular vote of more than 43,000 he won his position by a margin of only 51 votes! As mayor, he is also commissioner of public safety—and since he took office Salt Lake City is witnessing a thorough renovation of its police and fire departments!

Plans Good Will Tour.

Not, however, along political lines. "I don't know anything about politics," Jenkins says, "and I don't intend to learn. This is a nonpartisan city government, and the only people I'm indebted to are those who elected me. They're entitled to the best I can give them, and that's what I'm going to try and give them."

In addition to his world record runs on the Salt Flats this summer, the mayor also is planning a little jaunt across the country as a purely goodwill gesture. In making this trip, he will start at the New York World's fair, finish at the San Francisco World's fair, and between these two spots will greet mayors of 106 cities. At each stop, he'll invite the mayor to come to Salt Lake City, "The Center of Scenic America."

The trip will be interrupted briefly at Indianapolis, where Jenkins has been accorded the coveted honor of driving the pace car that officially starts the annual Indianapolis Speedway's 500-mile Memorial day classic.

Jenkins' car is built to travel in a circle, for on the Bonneville Salt Flats he drives continuously around a 12½ mile course. Its body is set off center to assist steering.

This trip was inspired by an earlier adventure of Mayor Jenkins. In 1926, he broke the cross-country automobile record. He piloted a car from New York to the Golden Gate in 86 hours.

"I didn't have time to stop and shake hands with any mayors on that trip," he said, "so I think it's only fair to go back and tell them all hello this time."

Eleanor Makes As Much as F. D.

But Most of Mrs. Roosevelt's Pay Goes to Charity.

By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT ALLEN

Not many people realize it, but Mrs. Roosevelt makes about as much money as her husband—and gives most of it away. Her last income tax statement contained a list, three and a half pages long, of the individuals and organizations to whom she made donations.

Topping the list was the American Friends Service committee, to which she has given, over the past seven years, a total of $100,000. And she now plans to give them $30,000 more.

Underprivileged 3-year-old Joan, one of Mrs. Roosevelt's "adopted" children.

Principal source of her revenue, past and present, is radio. When she broadcast for her latest sponsor, she was paid $3,000 for each program. She never saw the money, however, it being paid directly to the Friends organization each week.

Ham Fish Objects.

On a new radio program, Mrs. Roosevelt declined to reveal the exact amount of this revenue, but she plans to pay off a Friends Service deficit of $30,000.

In this case, however, the Friends Service committee will not get all the revenue. Congressman Ham Fish has seen to that. Roosevelt's "good neighbor" (Fish lives near Hyde Park) howled on the floor of the house two years ago that Mrs. Roosevelt was evading payment of income tax. He insisted that she should list all income, whether she received it or not, and pay tax on it.

So Mrs. Roosevelt's present practice is to list all income, pay tax on it, and donate the balance. This cuts heavily into her donations, since internal revenue exempts only 15 per cent of charitable donations.

Few Made Public.

Undisclosed, except to the internal revenue bureau, are hundreds of small organizations and individuals who get from $10 to $1,000 from Mrs. Roosevelt. She has even expanded her secretarial staff to take care of requests from the thousands of people who think she is the fountain-head of private charity.

Only occasionally are these gifts made public, as when the "Foster Parents Plan for War Children" revealed that she had pledged to care for a young Polish girl, Janina Dybowska, in a French refugee camp, at a cost of $9 a month.

Able to make in a single week more than most men earn in a year, Mrs. Roosevelt is not growing wealthy. She balances her budget by giving away practically every dollar she makes.

When the war began, Mrs. Roosevelt told the Red Cross to put her down for a regular contribution of $50 a month for relief in Europe. She made the same commitment to the American Friends Service committee, this being over and above the weekly thousands which it gets from her new radio program.

And for years, Mrs. Roosevelt has poured thousands into the homestead project at Arthurdale, W. Va., where the school depends almost entirely on her support. Meetings of the school board are held as her guests in the White House.

BRITISH FLEET FOR U. S. LOANS

L. W. ("Chip") Robert, secretary of the Democratic national committee, has a plan for refunding war debts, also for selling more supplies to the allies and at the same time ensuring Western hemisphere defense.

Briefly put, it is to take a mortgage on the British fleet in lieu of war debts.

In other words, the British would make a small token payment, then promise to turn their fleet over to the United States on the war debt in case of default. In return, the Johnson act would become inoperative, and the United States would extend immediate war credits.

Behind this, of course, is not so much the matter of war debts, but the very real fear that the United States may lose its greatest bulwark of protection—the British fleet.

How important the British fleet is to American defense is only just percolating to the general public. Real fact, however, is that the United States is not now prepared to defend both the Pacific and Atlantic coasts, and will not be prepared for four more years. It would take at least that long to build a second fleet.

Note—Another plan receiving informal consideration by some of the insiders is to repeal the Johnson act and give immediate credits to the allies, in return for a mortgage on the French and British possessions in the Western hemisphere.

GREENLAND AIR BASE

You can write it down as certain that should Hitler send an air expedition to Greenland or occupy it otherwise, Roosevelt would oppose that occupation, if necessary with the armed forces of the United States

However, should Hitler get to Greenland first, the United States would have no adequate airplane force or naval strength in the Atlantic to dislodge him.

If Hitler took Greenland or Iceland, the United States would have about as hard a time getting him out as the allies had in rooting the Nazis out of Norway.

Military axiom (emphasized by this war) is: Once the enemy gets control of a seaport or an air base, it is going to be twice as hard, almost impossible to get him out. So you may see something done by the United States about Greenland in the not too distant future.

HEMISPHERE DEFENSE

These are days when the United States is supposed to be bending every effort to co-ordinate the defense of the Western hemisphere; days when President Roosevelt impresses upon congress the vulnerability of the Panama canal and Latin America to airplane attack.

Boiled down to cold fact, however, the United States has done very little toward co-operating with Latin America on Western hemisphere defense.

For instance, four years ago Brazil asked the United States to permit the leasing or sale to South American neighbors of decrepit destroyers rusting in Philadelphia and San Francisco harbors since the World war. But congress threw up its hands in horror of rearmament and said No.

Then in March, 1939, a bill was introduced in congress permitting Latin American nations to build ships in U. S. navy yards and buy certain equipment from the U. S. army and navy which would not conflict with our own national defense—all paid for in cash.

The bill passed the house of representatives but hung up in the senate. And there it still hangs. In fact, it has been stymied for a year by Senator Vandenberg.

LATIN AMERICAN CRITICISM

Meanwhile Latin American nations, not understanding the American parliamentary system by which one man sometimes can thwart the rest of congress are critical, saying U. S. doesn't co-operate.

Note—The senate foreign relations committee also has buried the Argentine sanitary convention which permits the entry of dressed lamb from Patagonia, the Antarctic end of Argentina, where hoof and mouth disease does not exist.

HOW HITLER FIGURES

To understand the present tactics of Germany you have to go back to a remark attributed to Hitler before the war really got serious:

"If the war lasts four years I would lose 4,000,000 men. It is better to lose 3,000,000 men in three months."

Hitler is determined to push the war to a quick finish this summer, no matter how long and tragic may be the stream of coffins going back from the front.

Hitler has ample supplies to last through the summer, but not beyond. So if the war drags past the autumn, Germany is lost.

THOSE WEEK-END JAIL TERMS

("Under a new law the courts in New York state may let prisoners serve jail terms on a part-time basis. If the convicted man has a job and must serve thirty days, a judge may let him serve it week-ends or on other specified days."—News item.)

"When I read items like this in the papers these days I never know for certain whether I am reading the funny papers or a report of an actual fact," declared Elmer Twitchell today. "Maybe sentencing men to the hoosegow for breaking the laws and then arranging it so the sentence won't interfere with their lives very much is a swell idea, but it still leaves me dizzy.

"I always thought the idea of a jail sentence was to teach a lawbreaker a lesson and make him feel crime didn't pay, but if a fellow who cracks a safe, sticks up a bank cashier or ambushes a peaceful pedestrian knows that, even if convicted, the jail term won't be much of a hardship, I give up.

"The whole theory of punishment used to be that it would at least cause some inconvenience. The authorities used to hold that a term in stir was bound to take an offender away from his regular pastimes and industries. Nobody seemed to feel that these terms should be arranged so the prisoner would hardly notice 'em.

"It is going to seem funny to me, at least, when I read of a judge saying: 'I find you guilty as charged and sentence you to 60 days in jail. Would you like to serve it all in one lump?'

* * *

"Naturally the prisoner is going to reply: 'Well, I tell you, yerronor, I have a job when I work at it, and it would be a favor to me if I could get back to it and go to jail only after my working hours.'

" 'Just how would you like this jail term arranged?' the judge is going to ask.

" 'I do not work Tuesdays or Fridays, judge. Tuesdays I go to the ball game, but I would be willing to go to jail Fridays. It rains on a lot of Fridays, anyhow.'

" 'Well,' the judge will say, 'under this new law I guess Fridays in jail for you will be all right. Would you be able to fix it so you could report at the jail Thursday nights?'

" 'Not very well,' the prisoner will reply. 'My work is rather tiring and I would rather go to jail early Friday morning, say around ten o'clock.'

" 'Couldn't you make it eight o'clock?' the judge will plead.

" 'Not without great inconvenience,' the prisoner will reply.

" 'Very well, I will compromise and make it nine o'clock,' the judge will reply.

"It is all very interesting if somewhat disturbing," concluded Mr. Twitchell. "I hope the rest of the country don't copy the idea."

MEMORY

I remember once, so long ago,
A sweet springtime in the rain—
When a boy took me out riding
Whom I never met again.
We drove into the country.
Where the fields with grass were green,
And saw a weathered apple tree—
The first one we'd ever seen.
It's boughs were bridal robed in white.
There in the rain it stood.
The boy stopped near and wondered
If a few stolen blossoms would Destroy its grace and beauty—
If it still would be the same.
I can smell the rain-washed petals,
But I cannot recall his name!

  On every hill-top,
  in every valley and plain.
Liberty's School Master!
Tyranny's scourge at all times
  in every clime and nation.
Laughing to scorn the teachings of Monarchy's "Divine right"!
Setting at naught the claims of princes and potentates!
Standard of Freedom

Emblem of a United people,

  sun e'er shone o'er:
  knowing no master, Fearing no king,
  Kneeling to none but Almighty God!
Marking the pathway for

The beacon light of civilization!
"OLD GLORY" We salute thee!
There is no stain on any stripe

The lustre of thy stars

"OLD GLORY" SPEAKS: "Americans, WHAT you are I AM, Don't let the red Flag of Communism or Anarchy Supplant Me".

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

PURRED on by what William T. Kerr, founder and, since 1898, national president of the American Flag Day association, calls "the affrontery of all the forces of un-American- those groups who support Atheism, Communism, Bolshev- Nazism, Fascism and other foreign isms," the association rging every community in the United States to celebrate Week this year with patriotic programs and is suggesting w Flag Week feature—the observance of a Citizenship gnition Day.

But a general community mbly of newly made, foreign- citizens and the youth of vot- ge, particularly associating th Flag Day, is an innova- In presenting this plan for tizenship Recognition Day, president of the American Day association points out no other time seems so ap- riate as during the celebra- of Flag Week with its climax e nation-wide observance of Day.

"They do not to realize that they have, perhaps through no particular merit of their own, received the highest American privilege, making them the political equal of the most favored person in the land. Holding a Citizenship Recognition Day offers an opportunity for emphasizing their responsibilities as citizens which so many of us overlook."

A Greater Significance.

In view of the present situation in Europe—the extinguishment of human liberties and the oppression of smaller nations by the armed might of totalitarian governments—citizenship in a nation "with liberty and justice for all" should mean more than ever before. For this reason the celebration of Flag Week this year has an even greater significance than in years past and 1940 seems an appropriate time for inaugurating an observance of Citizenship Recognition Day as an integral part of it.

If, as has been suggested, it is observed on Saturday, June 8, it will be the opening event in the celebration of Flag Week along with the patriotic-religious services in synagogues on that day, to be followed by similar services in churches on Sunday, June 9. Chief among the latter is the annual service held at one of the principal Revolutionary war shrines—the chapel at Valley Forge in Pennsylvania. Many Sunday schools will also hold loyalty Flag Week programs in connection with the observance of Children's Day on June 9.

The American Flag Day association, the proponent of a nation-wide Citizenship Recognition Day, is the pioneer organization formed to popularize the observance of the birthday anniversary of our flag. It was founded in Pittsburgh in the midst of the Spanish-American war and Mr. Kerr was elected its president, an office he has held ever since. An employee of the freight traffic department of the Pennsylvania railroad, he has devoted all of his spare time to promoting the observance of Flag Day and to having it designated as a national holiday.

When Mr. Kerr was a young boy, a railroad engineer told him the story of Betsy Ross and the early history of our flag. Inspired by this and aided by his mother and his father, a veteran of the Union army in the Civil war, he began making plans for a movement to recognize officially the birthday of the flag on a nation-wide scale. The eventual result was the organization in 1898 of the American Flag Day association, a non-partisan, non-sectarian, non-racial, non-profit association, devoted solely to the patriotic work of honoring the Stars and Stripes on its birthday.

A Legal Holiday?

Since that time it has worked persistently to popularize the custom of displaying the flag on June 14 and to have Flag Day made a legal holiday. Some resistance has been encountered, according to Mr. Kerr, because some business men think that we have too many holidays in this country. They point out that June 14 lies between Memorial Day on May 30 and Independence Day on July 4 so that two legal holidays within a little more than a month should be sufficient.

However, Mr. Kerr and his associates believe that the observance of the birthday of our flag is justified by its historic significance—the formal adoption of the Stars and Stripes as the emblem of the new nation on June 14, 1777. "We are learning a new understanding and new appreciation of the flag," says Mr. Kerr. "We are not looking upon it as a waving banner that leads us into battle, nor an emblem of war, but more as a symbol of achievement, progress, helpfulness and friendship. In the light of events in recent years the waving of our flag has come to signify the glories of peace and the joys of friendship rather than the accomplishment of war."

As the result of the efforts of this association, in 1938 Flag Day was made a legal holiday in Pennsylvania, the state which, because of the action of the Continental congress 163 years ago, can be regarded as the "birthplace of Old Glory." Massachusetts and Connecticut have statutes requiring their governors to issue Flag Day proclamations but these two and Pennsylvania are the only commonwealths which officially recognize Flag Day.

The national observance of the day—though not as a legal holiday—is due to President Woodrow Wilson who on May 13, 1916, issued a proclamation designating June 14 of each year as Flag Day. It has been so observed since that time. Although various persons have, from time to time, been designated as the "originator" of Flag Day, it is doubtful if that title can justly be awarded to any individual, since several Americans have contributed to the idea. Undoubtedly the work of Mr. Kerr, since the founding of the American Flag Day association in 1898, greatly stimulated popular interest in the celebration and he, therefore, has a claim to some share in the title.

DEFENSE AND POLITICS

Our problem is in production and not in politics. There is a crisis in national defense. It is a need for immediate rearmament. It is a problem of industrial production and it is that alone.

The record of this administration and the published programs of both the army and navy are absolute proof that it is moving to a solution far too slowly to be of any use. It can be made to move much more rapidly.

Ours is the most efficient industrial production machine in the world. It has the best production managers, men amply able to get this vitally necessary increased speed for the government. But this government has no such men.

The screamingly obviously necessary first step is to get them—right now. They don't have to hold office. They will come on request.

They will see what is needed. They will get their fellows in industry to co-operate voluntarily.

Are we doing that? We are doing just the reverse of that.

It is well known in Washington that the President was planning to put three Republicans in his cabinet in the vital post of war, navy and commerce. Names mentioned are Frank Knox, Alf Landon and Fiorello LaGuardia.

WAS IT JUST SOCIAL TALK? J. P. Morgan, financier, (at right) and British Ambassador Lothian at English speaking Union dinner.

Is that a production measure or a defense measure? It is not. It is pure politics. It is third-term politics.

It is said to be to "unify the country" on the rearmament program. The country doesn't need any unification on that. It is almost unanimous on that.

The real purpose is plainly to break down our two-party system using this as an excuse—and to regiment the election.

With the trend toward dictatorship the greatest threat in the world, this is the last thing the head of a Democratic party should be trying to do.

The two-party system is the essence of our democracy and the American way of life. This is a blow at its heart.

Mr. Roosevelt pleaded for the adjournment of politics. He, himself, is the hottest political issue.

If he wanted to adjourn politics, he would announce himself in public, as he has to some people in private, as not available for a third term.

Nobody can believe even Mr. Roosevelt's assurances, except in writing and in public, that he is not a third-term candidate. Yet, no self-respecting Republican could accept a place on this cabinet without believing that.

If any did, he would be exposing himself to sucker stultification after a third election of Roosevelt, after the powers of a dictator had been granted the President.

In the direction of a real solution of the overwhelming vital problem of production, to bring an uninstructed political amateur into the war department, for example, to take the gimp and tucker out of Louis Johnson, would be a catastrophe.

This barefaced use of a national crisis for the purposes of a partisan political attempt to perpetuate a particular President is the blackest mark with which this administration has yet smirched its own record—more impudent than the 1937 conspiracy to revolutionize this to a personalized government by the court-packing and other defeated legislative plans—worse than the purges and the WPA political bribery and coercion of 1938. As in those other cases, there is strong hope its stench is so great it can't be swallowed.

A TON OF TRIPE

Secretary Ickes, the original triple termite, made a speech before the Amalgamated Garment Workers.

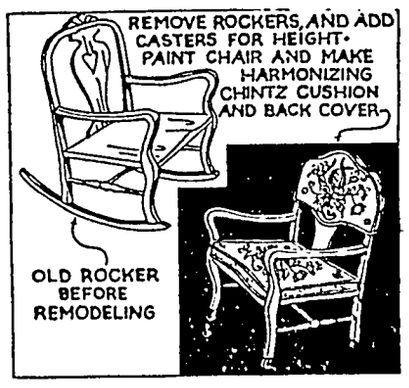
After a few punches at the economic royalists, it gloated that they are flocking to the Roosevelt standard under the stress of threatening war.

Therefore, Mr. Roosevelt—and, incidentally, Mr. Ickes—must now be drafted because "democracy universally demands it," both at home and abroad.

Well, it's all a ton of tripe.

HOW TO SEW

by Ruth Wyeth Spears



REMOVE ROCKERS, AND ADD CASTERS FOR HEIGHT. PAINT CHAIR AND MAKE HARMONIZING CHINTZ CUSHION AND BACK COVER.
OLD ROCKER BEFORE REMODELING

A CERTAIN Miss Fixit, and that was not really her name, inherited a house full of furniture that was not old enough to be either quaint or antique. One day she sent for my little Book No. 4, and there she found a sketch showing how to plot a room color plan based on a rug, or a picture, or a piece of drapery material with good coloring. Miss Fixit had a picture that she had always loved because of its beautiful colors. Just for fun, as a sort of game, she made a room color plot based on that picture. Then she suddenly realized that, after all, color is very cheap—anyone can have all they want of it for very little money.

That was really a turning point in the life of Miss Fixit. This old rocker that she made over is merely a sample of what may happen when a clever young lady is bent upon bringing color into her life. The chair has been painted a pale turquoise blue, and the seat cushion and back are covered with an inexpensive chintz in turquoise; cherry red; primrose yellow and deep green, with red bias bindings.

I wish every reader interested in choosing colors for her home might have a copy of my Book 4. It contains an illustrated rule for making a room color plan, based on the colors in a picture a rug; a vase; or a piece of drapery material with lovely colorings. The rule is so clear and easily understood that I am sure every reader of these weekly articles would be delighted to have a copy. To get your copy, send 10 cents in coin and ask for Book 4. Constipation Relief That Also Pepsin-izes Stomach

When constipation brings on acid indigestion, bloating, dizzy spells, gas, coated tongue, sour taste, and bad breath, your stomach is probably loaded up with certain undigested food and your bowels don't move. So you need both Pepsin to help break up fast that rich undigested food in your stomach, and Laxative Senna to pull the trigger on those lazy bowels. So be sure your laxative also contains Pepsin. Take Dr. Caldwell's Laxative, because its Syrup Pepsin helps you gain that wonderful stomach comfort, while the Laxative Senna moves your bowels. Tests prove the power of Pepsin to dissolve those lumps of undigested protein food which may linger in your stomach, to cause belching, gastric acidity and nausea. This is how pepsinizing your stomach helps relieve it of such distress. At the same time this medicine wakes up lazy nerves and muscles in your bowels to relieve your constipation. So see how much better you feel by taking the laxative that also puts Pepsin to work on that stomach discomfort, too. Even finicky children love to taste this pleasant family laxative. Buy Dr. Caldwell's Laxative—Senna with Syrup Pepsin at your druggist today!

That some voters still are in need of being educated in the proper method of marking their ballot was again brought to the attention of the counting board in the recent primary, when in Ell township a total of twenty-five ballots were not properly voted

Of this number the greatest error was made by the voter when writing in the name and neglecting to place a cross in the square in front of the name written in Four ballots were mis-voted when the party casting the ballot voted for more than one candidate for the same office.

Three ballots had double marks in the square.

Three ballots had crosses in squares on blank spaces, evidently the voter intending to vote in the square just above.

One ballot was defaced and contained this inscription written exactly as follows: "We need God fearing officerics." Of course the ballot was entirely wasted Note the spelling.

EXTENSION WORK NOW REACHES 177,000 MARK
That Many Changed Practices County Agents Show In Their Reports

Eighty per cent of the farmers in Iowa benefited directly from the cooperative extension program in 1939 by adopting practices recommended by local agricultural agents, working in cooperation with other agencies. This was reported today by R. K. Bliss, director of the Iowa State College Extension Service.

The annual summary of county agent reports shows that more than 177,000 farmers out of 214,000 living in Iowa changed certain agricultural practices as a result of the educational program.

Includes Homes, Farms

These changes included adoption of seed treatment and other plant disease control measures, use of recommended fertilizers, following of marketing recommendations, application of economic information, organization of insect control measures, and use of improved conservation practices.

Other practices adopted included improvements of home grounds, planting of orchards, windbreaks and woodlots, establishment of wild-life areas, adoption of erosion control practices, improvement of buildings and machinery, and improved livestock feeding and management.

Many In Club Work

One-third of the homemakers - more than 76,400—benfited directly from the programs of local home demonstration agents, according to the summary.

Nearly 20,000 Iowa farm families had children enrolled in 4-H club work.

Iowa buying and selling cooperatives reported 180,000 members. About one out of every three farmers is a member of a cooperative creamery and one out of every four belongs to a cooperative elevator.

WHEN Count Theo Rossi, the speedboat champion and "vermouth king," took a flying trip over South America with his bosom friend, Tyrone Power (before Annabella became Mrs. Power), they were hailed everywhere as "the world's two most eligible bachelors." The count, still a bachelor, made quite a dent in the hearts of the Hollywood girls last summer, but, like J. Edgar Hoover, he preferred Shirley Temple.

More recently he has left his mark on the movie colony by designing some square glasses. Almost the first person to get some was Dolores Del Rio; Hedy LaMarr, Joan Bennett, Rudy Vallee, and Peggy Moran followed suit, as did a number of the smart restaurants.

And now Perc Westmore, Hollywood's ace make-up expert, claims that those square corners fit into a girl's mouth more naturally than does the edge of a round glass; he declares also that, as they create less pressure on the lower lip, they help to preserve the natural form of the lips.

Hollywood's smudgiest girls are Ann Dvorak, Helen Mack and Lola Lane, who are featured in Columbia's "Girls of the Road." The script calls for them to work in mud and muck throughout the film, wearing soiled clothes and even dirtier faces. Mary Booth, great-granddaughter of Edwin Booth, makes her movie debut in the same picture.

Recently at a baseball game a bewildered six-year-old boy in military uniform found himself so besieged by autograph seekers that he missed an entire inning of the game. He was Gary Crosby, eldest son of Bing, attending the game with his grandfather, and he'd like to choke the fellow who recognized him and pointed him out to the crowd.

The announcement that major radio networks are planning to use name stars from stage, screen and radio during the annual summer slump has created a wave of mental depression among Grade B performers, who had banked on filling in as summer replacements.

Kathleen Burke, the famous "Panther Woman" of the movies some years ago, is now playing the part of "Rebekah" in "Light of the World," the daytime radio show based on the Bible. Miss Burke has been absent from the screen for the past four years, during which time she married a Spanish dancer, Jose Fernandez and had a daughter.

A source of delight to the production men and engmeers who handle Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt's Tuesday and Thursday NBC informal talks is the absolute ease with which she goes through her routine. A seasoned veteran of the air, the First Lady knows all the hand signals for speeding up and slowing down her speech, and is proving exceptionally easy to work with. Finishes right on the nose, too.

Mary Martin came home exhausted the other day; for a scene in "Rhythm on the River" she'd been working in front of the cameras in a heavy beaver coat and the temperature under the lights was 97! Arrived at home, she was confronted by the immediate need for buying a house for her mother, Mrs. Martin being one of the few people in this country who doesn't want to be alone in a house in which Greta Garbo used to be alone, and like it.

The lovely Mary took the house for herself and her mother before she married Richard Halliday. After her marriage she moved out, and her mother and the servants rattled around in the mansion. She has a six-room bungalow now, and likes it much better.

On a recent "Vox Pop" program Parks Johnson was doublecrossed in his efforts to lead into a natural ad lib commercial. Parks asked one of the men he was interviewing "What do you do after a fast run up the stairs?" The answer he expected was "I puff," whereupon Parks was all set to hand him a complimentary tin of his sponsor's tobacco and then launch into a recital of its merits.

But the man stopped him. "Oh," said he, "I always wonder why I did such a foolish thing!"

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

HAGGAI URGES THE BUILDING OF GOD'S HOUSE

LESSON TEXT—Haggai 1:2-12.
GOLDEN TEXT—And let us consider one another to provoke unto love and to good works: not forsaking the assembling of ourselves together, as the manner of some is. —Hebrews 10:24, 25.

Religious work—or, more correctly stated, Christian work—is a difficult and discouraging task, except for the grace and blessing of God. Not only does the Christian worker have to struggle against that arch-enemy of God and of the souls of men, Satan himself, but he must overcome the deadly indifference and carelessness of men both outside and inside the Church. Then, as if that were not enough, he finds another enemy, the discouragement of his own heart.

Haggai ministered to the Jews who had returned from captivity and who had begun to rebuild the temple. Opposition had developed before they had made more than a beginning, and they at once gave up and turned their interest to their own affairs and the building of their own homes. God was displeased by this sinfulness on their part, and brought judgment upon them through a prolonged drouth. Haggai was called to awaken their conscience and to encourage them to action.

I. Consider Your Ways (vv. 2-6, 9-11).

It was not necessary for the prophet to work up any eloquent plea to stir the conscience of the people. He had only to point to their own ways. They were thus faced with three reproving facts.

1. Indifference (v. 2). They were negligent and indifferent, saying the time had not come to build. The same kind of folk today are very sure that the congregation simply cannot afford to keep up preaching services, or heat and light the church for Sunday School.

2. Selfishness (v. 4). They built for themselves ceiled houses and lived in luxury, while God's house lay waste. One is reminded of our own communities, which have money for every conceivable comfort and convenience, but only a few niggardly pennies for God's work.

3. Loss (vv. 6, 9-11). Being stingy toward God is a losing business. He has only to withhold His blessing and we will find ourselves destitute. That is true in the physical realm and is even more true in the spiritual life. Withholding from God will always result in loss (see Prov. 11:24).

II. "Build the House" (v. 8).

God's work is constructive. He may have to destroy and tear down, but He only takes away the old and undesirable that the new and worthy may be built. Three words stand out here.

1. "Go." The Lord wants His people to get into action. Haggai was interested in getting things going. Let us follow his example.

2. "Bring." We are not to come to the Lord's service empty handed. Only as He blesses do we have anything to bring, but often we fail to bring even that which He has supplied.

3. "Build." God's work is committed to us. We are to be His builders.

III. "The People Obeyed" (v. 12).

"Behold, to obey is better than sacrifice, and to hearken than the fat of rams" (I Sam. 15:22). God is looking for obedient people, and is ready to bless and use them. The response to Haggai's message came from

1. The Governor. One wonders what progress America would make back to God if its rulers were to lead us in obedience to His commands and in seeking His face in repentance and prayer. Thank God for every truly spiritually minded national leader, and pray that others may yield themselves to the control of the Lord. Then came

2. The High Priest. All too often religious leaders have actually hindered the work of God—and what a hindrance they can be! We read that in Haggai's time the high priest obeyed. Christian leaders, are we too going before our people in unquestioning obedience to God? If not, why should we not begin now? With such leadership, we are not surprised to hear that

3. The People Also Obeyed and Feared God. Many capable Christian workers believe that the youth of America of our day, far from being worse than their fathers, are actually seeking for real spiritual leadership.

False Christs Shall Rise

And then, if any man shall say to you, Lo, here is Christ; or lo, he is there, believe him not. For false Christs, and false prophets shall rise, and shall shew signs and wonders, to seduce, if it were possible, even the elect.—Mark 13: 21, 22.

Chowders may be made of canned soups to which leftover cooked meat, fish or fowl have been added. One cup of "filler" should be added for each cup of soup. Chicken blends with asparagus or celery soup; veal is excellent with tomato or beef boullon, while beef is especially suitable for old-fashioned bean or pea soup.

After a blanket has been washed and dried pin it on the line and beat with a carpet-beater. This makes the blanket beautifully soft and fluffy.

Look 20 Years beyond the Refrigerator you buy today

Every NORGE ROLLATOR REFRIGERATOR is backed by the reputation and the resources of the great BORG-WARNER CORPORATION, world-famous manufacturer with 20 factories in 5 states

When you buy an electric refrigerator, look wisely to the future. Look 10 years ahead . . . or 20. Look beyond the refrigerator as it stands today, new and bright and gleaming. Visualize the greater needs which it may be called to meet in the years to come. Consider the satisfactions of service well rendered that can come only from a product ably engineered and ably built by an organization experienced in precision manufacturing.

Such an organization is Norge, backed by the resources and engineering skill, the seasoned reputation and world fame of the great Borg-Warner Corporation whose score of factories employ thousands in five states.

You will look today, of course, at the advanced features that distinguish the Norge refrigerator in its field . . . at the highlights of detail and design that are winning such high acclaim throughout the world. In the big SR-8 model, as shown above, you will admire extra size and ample capacity, a freezer of stainless steel, the convenience of the exclusive Handefroster and Coldpack, the sliding shelves, glass-covered drawers and Cellaret. You will appreciate the simple efficiency of the refrigerant-cooled Rollator Cold-Maker which Norge has built to almost unbelievable limits of precision for lifetime service.

But before you decide, look again at the record of integrity and achievement which Norge has made in the past. That, we submit, is the reason you also may look far to the future with faith in Norge.

DRY SUGAR PACK IS RECOMMENDED

Fruit Prepared That Way For Locker Storage Best Plagge Says

Tests with packing strawberries for frozen food lockers indicate that the dry sugar pack is most satisfactory, according to H H Plagge, Iowa State College, pomologist, who is doing freezer locker storage work.

Preliminary work with the sugar pack, shows that this method preserves flavor and color better than some sugar syrup packs

Mixed In Pan

Results show that a syrup pack a 50 per cent concentration, is more satisfactory than 40 per cent but a dry sugar pack seems superior to either solution," Plagge says In the sugar pack three parts of strawberries by weight are mixed with one part of sugar. The strawberries and sugar can be mixed in a large flat pan, care being taken to avoid bruising of fruit as much as possible. Medium-sized, well matured but not over ripe strawberries should be selected for locker storage.

The syrup pack is especially recommended for raspberries, apricots, sweet cherries, peaches and rhubarb, and a weak brine for asparagus, snap beans, carrots and peas.

Airtight Containers

Continued work on different kinds and types of containers for fruits and vegetables shows that airtight jars or cans are usually more reliable than most other kinds of containers for fruits and vegetables For short periods of storage—up to 6 months—the paper cartons may be satisfactory, but if the product is to be stored for longer the periods of time, an airtight container is recommended

The major reasons for failure in frozen fruits and vegetables are improper selection of products and inadequate scalding of the vegetables.

Scald Vegetables

All vegetables should be scalded, one of the most important steps in preparing the product for storage. About 4 to 5 gallons of rapidly boiling water should be used, and only about a pint, or a pound of the vegetable should be scalded at one time. The product should be immersed in the boiling water for the length of time required and then plunged immediately into a large vessel of cold water to stop cooking and avoid over-cooking

Proper scalding of vegetables intensifies the color and is responsible for the bright, attractive green color in frozen vegetables, It also further cleanses the product, softens it and lessens the danger of undesirable changes due to certain plant enzymes or the plant ferments, Plagge says.

U. S. BUYS 150 CARLOADS OF EGGS IN IOWA

The United States goverment has purchased more than 150 carloads of Iowa eggs since May 15 in an effort to bolster the price of eggs and poultry and at the same time provide better nourishment for persons living on government relief, A. D. Oderkirk, Iowa State college extension representative, said.

Contrary to the practice of other years, the egg buying is being made at the point of origin through out the farming states, Mr Oderkirk said, rather than on the big New York and Chicago markets

The government is also buying better grade eggs this year instead of lower grades as has been the case before. The result has been that egg prices have been supported to some extent, although the more is definitely not a price pegging one.

Most of the Iowa eggs are being sent from here to southern states, although a few have gone to northern Michigan, according to the Iowa State man. The extension servile of College, under the direction of Mr. Oderkirk, has been cooperating with the United States marketing service in inspecting the eggs.

According to goverment officials, action in buying eggs is taken only when prices are believed to have reached such abnormally low levels that producers are being seriously hurt and the resulting curtailment of production.

EVANGELICAL AND REFORMED CHURCH MEETS AT LANCASTER, PA., JUNE 9

The Evangelical and Reformed Church, formed of two churches which merged in 1934 on a basis of mutual respect and confidence, has adopted a Constitution and at a meeting of its Central Synod in Lancaster, Pa, June 19 to 26, will declare this Constitution in effect, thus completing its organic union.

The history of the union of the Evangelical Synod of North America and the Reformed Church in the United States has been marked throughout by the spirit of confidence in which the original step was taken six years ago. A Judicial Commission set up at that time, to adjudicate any difficulties that might arise, has not held a single meeting

A number of the Boards of the two former churches have already been united. The women's organizations have been merged into the Women's Guild and the men's organizations into the Churchmen's Brotherhood. Three church papers have been merged and two theological seminaries consolidated. At this meeting of the General Synod, Boards will be chosen to represent the united church. A unified budget for support of all of the denominational work will be adopted

With the incorporating of the new Church, all authority that has been divided in the period of transition will be centered in the merged Church and its Synods. The 34 new Synods take the place of the former 56 Classes and 20 Districts.

SELL CHICKENS IF YOU CAN'T SELL EGGS.

Whenever less than half of the birds in the poultry flock are laying, it's time to cull out the "lazy" hens to keep them from eating up the profits, says W. R. Whitfield, Iowa State College Extension poultry tryman.

The old saying, "if you can't sell eggs, sell chickens" still holds true, he says, especially at this time of year.

Among the characteristics which deserve consideration in culling poultry are color and condition of the head, amount of yellow pigmentation in yellow-skinned breeds body conformation, time of molting, condition of vent, and general health and vigor.

A good layer has a bright red comb, very little yellow pigment in the skin and on the legs, a broad, deep body, and a large vent. Good birds usually molt in the fall rather in than in the summer.

Admiral Taussig Who Predicted War With Japan Has Long Standing Feud With F. D.

By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

WASHINGTON. — At Annapolis, where midshipmen put plebes through a constant cross-fire of hazing, one of the stock questions fired at a youngster is:

"Mr. Jones, what did Admiral Taussig say?"

And the first-year man clicks his heels and snaps back the traditional Annapolis answer: "Sir, we are now ready!"

This refers not to Rear Admiral Joseph K. Taussig's recent and startling prediction that war between the United States and Japan was inevitable, but to a statement he made to the British during the World war which has become a naval classic.

This gives one sidelight on the man who astounded the American public with his frankness in predicting war with Japan.

That prediction has now been discussed and editorialized from coast to coast and from beer-hall to parlor. But there are several backstage factors which have not been discussed except in hush-hush groups of naval officers when they get together.

One item is that no love has been lost between the President and Admiral Taussig.

Roosevelt-Taussig Row.

Admiral Taussig's row with the President goes back to 1915, when several naval officers, particularly the late Admiral Sims, were critical of Josephus Daniels and of Assistant Secretary Roosevelt in their preparation for war.

Taussig was then chief of enlisted personnel in the bureau of navigation and joined in this criticism. After the war he even testified before a congressional investigation committee that the navy department heads had failed "to take adequate steps to provide personnel necessary for the proper conduct of the navy during the war."

This was in 1920, just as the Republicans were trying to dig up political dirt to be used in the Harding campaign, in which Roosevelt ran as Democratic candidate for vice president. Naturally Roosevelt resented Taussig's playing into the hands of the opposition, and wrote a sharp letter to the senate naval affairs committee denying the charges.

Thirteen years later, when Roosevelt became President, Taussig had just been appointed assistant chief of naval operations, a most important post. And he went to the new President and suggested that Roosevelt might want to transfer him in view of their previous difficulties. The President, however, told him to forget it and continue in his new job.

Brilliant Career.

It is no exaggeration to say that Taussig's career is one of the most brilliant in the navy. His father, Edward David Taussig of the distinguished Jewish St. Louis family, was a rear admiral before him.

Rear Admiral Joseph Knefler Taussig was born in Dresden, Germany, in 1877 while his father was on duty. Since then he has become the star scholar and strategist of the navy. Twice he has won the Institute of Naval Affairs gold medal. Eleven times he has been decorated for bravery in action. His specialty has been studying the Far East.

Taussig came up for assignment to new duties in 1936; therefore it was expected that he would be made commander of the United States fleet. However, in a conference between the President and his highest naval advisers, doubt was cast on the wisdom of having a man of German Jewish descent no matter how brilliant his record, head the United States fleet at a time when religious and racial prejudice had been made such an international issue.

Heads Scouting Fleet.

So Admiral Taussig was appointed commander of the scouting fleet And after three years in this position, suddenly he was given the relatively unimportant job of commanding the fifth naval district at Norfolk, Va. This was a definite comedown.

Whether Admiral Taussig resented this shelving is his secret. Being human, probably he did. Whether he let it get the better of him when he blasted at Japan before the senate committee never may be known.

'OH, SAY, CAN YOU SEE!'

Do You Know the National Anthem?

By BYRON BYRD

It isn't a moment too soon to begin thinking about the Fourth of July. In fact it wouldn't hurt to think a little bit about Labor day.

One good reason for an early start is the "Star-Spangled Banner." With the world in the shape it's in it behooves us to approach our national anthem with at least a modicum of familiarity. Most often we attack Mr. Key's poem as though it possessed but five words. We begin resolutely with "Oh say can you see?" and then never complete the question. See what? Our only reply is a mumble. And as for the melody we are downright anarchistic. We mouth along in our own independent fashion, throwing in a note here, tossing in another there, until finally the anthem begins to take on the appearance of Fort McHenry after the British fleet finished its bombardment. The "Star-Spangled Banner" is a gtod song if you can sing it. By beginning our practice now we should be able to sing it by Independence day.

And while we're about it, it wouldn't do any harm to brush up on "My Country 'Tis of Thee." So many Americans now go to Canada for winter sports and fishing that a disturbing minority of our good citizens end up "My Country 'Tis of Thee" with "God Save the King." Now as friendly as are the relations existing between England and America and as much as the American people wish Mr. and Mrs. George VI a long, happy and distinguished career, the fact remains that terminating "My Country 'Tis of Thee" with "God Save the King" is anachronismatical. A case could be made for it being metachromatinic also, but being anachronismatical is bad enough and should be sufficient to bring about a speedy end to the whole business.

Other Good Reasons.

There are other reasons for thinking about the Fourth of July early. For one thing, there is no discipline, no efficient preparation. Our children aren't certain if the Fourth of July is in commemoration of the Whiskey Rebellion or of the charge up San Juan hill; and we elders, on the other hand, are utterly helpless when one of the youngsters asks why James Buchanan was chosen to deliver the message to Garcia, or who helped the Green Mountain Boys take the Louisiana Purchase from the Indians. A touch of American history, therefore, would not be amiss between now and Independence day.

Then there is the picnic. Typical of American fiddle-braininess, we find that in our hurry we packed our basket with one small bottle of ketchup, one jar of dry mustard, one diaper, a tangerine, 300 paper napkins, 4½ pounds of potato chips, and a box of paper clips.

As for the beverage we discover that the babbling brook which looked so inviting from the road is little more than a drainage system of a nearby farmyard, and since we neglected to bring a supply of typhoid antitoxin we face an afternoon of steaming coffee although the heat is driving the mercury through the rivets of the thermometer and the humidity is causing the cuffs of our trousers to roll up like rugs.

Beware the Firecracker.

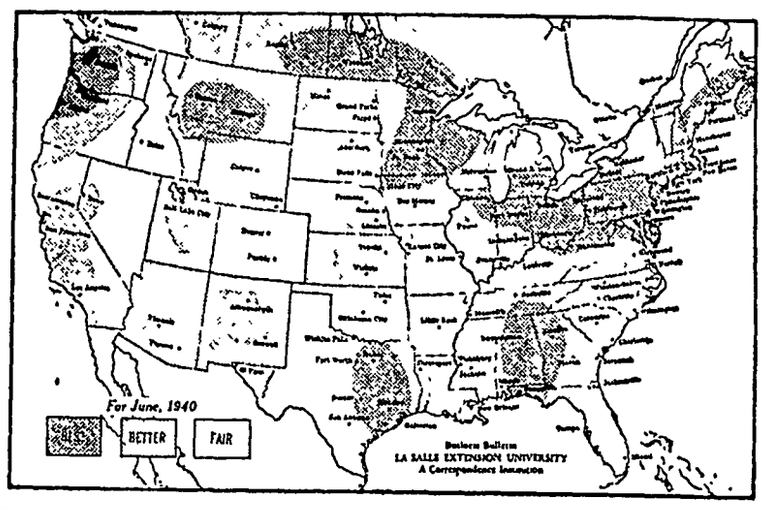
There is still another phase of an American picnic that is especially exasperating. That is the matter of athletic equipment. Whenever we select a fir-shaded spot along the rocky shore of a mountain lake we find we have packed our tennis racket, catcher's mask and hockey stick. On the other hand when our choice is a small grove beside a thistle-dappled field we lift the lid of the rumble seat to discover that a last-minute impulse caused us to pack our outboard motor and a take-apart billiard cue we bought one time for no accountable reason in a boardwalk auction house in Atlantic City.

America, someone has said, is the home of the free and the land of the brave. This is a good point. But too often many young Americans take advantage of their freedom to exploit their bravery. This is distressingly true during the firecracker season when our children celebrate the Fourth of July—that is, from May 1 until October 31. The least our public officials could do is pass a law prohibiting children under nine months of age from purchasing and setting off fireworks unless accompanied by a Saint Bernard dog equipped with a fire extinguisher.

Aside from the fact that generation after generation is growing up with only three fingers to a hand and only one ear to a head, the setting off of fireworks by children too young to walk constitutes a fire hazard. It is easier than one imagines for a baby's burning dress to ignite the curtains

The foregoing are examples of what occurs when we permit a holiday to catch us unawares like an overdrawn checking account. Let's not put off thinking about the Fourth of July another moment.

Agricultural Areas Lag



The map, accompanying the June Bulletin of American business conditions issued by La Salle Extension, showing the high spots of activity in the U. S. in the past month indicates the industrial regions continue ahead of the agricultural.

Volume of Trade Six Per Cent Higher Than One Year Ago

By L. G. ELLIOTT
President, LaSalle Extension University

CHICAGO.—Even the added uncertainties created by the intensification of the war have not interrupted the slowly rising trend in many lines. The major disturbances have been most striking in the financial and commodity markets rather than in trade and industry.

The lead in an upward trend has been taken by the steel industry. The rate of operations rose from 60 per cent of capacity to over 70 per cent. A year ago the rate was 45 per cent. Activity in other basic lines, such as the machine-tool industry, have reached a new peak at 93 per cent of capacity. Automobile production so far this year has been the second highest on record, and not far below the peak in 1929.

New orders for many types of industrial goods have been increasing and inventories are lower than they were a month ago. Consumer buying has been maintained at about 6 per cent above last year at this time.

Securities Decline.

The decline in prices of securities and of many commodities was sharp and in a short time carried the price level back to the low point of a year ago. The drop was most marked in agricultural products and has thus reduced farm purchasing power. Changes were much less in prices of industrial commodities.

In estimating the future trend of business, allowances must be made for unexpected or sharp changes in the European war which might greatly modify the current trend.

War Costs

¶ Cost in human life in the present war is less so far than in a comparable period in the last World war.

¶ German figures are not available. The London Economist estimates it at $14,000,000,000 to $16,000,000,000.

¶ Sweden, neutral more than 100 years, spent $200,000,000 last year for war preparedness as against $45,000,000 in 1936.

JAP ORDERS DELAY U. S.

One of the things which is holding up the manufacture of more military equipment for the army and navy is the fact that so many U. S. factories are sending machine tools to Japan.

The war department has just finished a confidential survey of the machine tool industry and finds that most American plants are working on orders for the Japanese. Machine tools are all-important in the munitions business, because they are used to equip new factories expanding to meet new national defense orders.

As far as the war department is able to ascertain, Japan has plenty of machine tools, and is storing many of the new shipments now received from the United States—for emergencies. Japan also continues to be a big importer of U. S. scrap iron, and also is storing it for the future.

These are two reasons why President Roosevelt has asked special powers of congress to embargo shipments of materials which are considered vital to the defense of the United States. He expects, as soon as authorized by congress, to slap an embargo on scrap iron and machine tools to Japan.

G. O. P. BLASTS

The barrage of Republican blasts against a coalition cabinet which has strafed the country recently was no spontaneous meeting of minds. Neither was it aimed entirely at the President. It was aimed much more against the Republican party itself.

Inner G. O. P. master minds admit that their political chances have been almost as hard hit as the shattered allied lines in Europe. Prior to this catastrophic development G. O. P. election prospects appeared very bright indeed.

It looked as if the campaign would be fought chiefly on Republican ground; that is, on domestic issues. Also, it was doubtful whether Roosevelt would run. But the Hitler blitzkrieg changed this situation overnight.

Roosevelt's move to bring one or more Republicans into the cabinet made things worse.

Something had to be done fast to block this.

The barrage on Roosevelt was opened by Colonel Lindbergh's speech pooh-poohing any invasion danger. In inner G. O. P. circles this is credited to Hoover via his close friend William Castle, former undersecretary of state.

This was followed up with the carefully spaced statements by Landon, Hoover, Representative Wadsworth, House Floor Leader Martin and others demanding that the President renounce a third term as the price for G. O. P. participation in the cabinet.

ICELAND AND U. S.

There is a lot more behind the rushing of American consuls to Greenland and Iceland than appears on the surface.

Boiled down to cold facts, the Roosevelt administration is afraid of a Nazi air base only 1,500 miles from Maine. Bombing planes already have been developed which can fly this far—loaded.

CAPITAL CHAFF

Said Mrs. Ruth Hanna McCormick Simms: "I have never seen anything like the sentiment out West for Tom Dewey." But in her home state of New Mexico, Mrs. Simms was turned down as a Dewey delegate.

Interesting sidelight on how things are shaping for a third term: Rep. Gene Cox of Georgia is one of the bitterest anti-New Dealers in congress. Yet the day after Georgia leaders named a third-term delegation, Cox announced he would support this year Roosevelt if he is the candidate.

Apron Dress Is an Intriguing Theme on the Fashion Prog

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

WHAT is importantly new on the style program? The answer is the dress with a detachable apron front. Can you imagine aprons putting on fashion airs? Well, that's just what is happening. It's not only your daytime frocks that are being smartly aproned but evening gowns are flaunting the most gorgeous (either tie-on or simulated) apron fronts wild flights of fancy could possibly envision.

Watch and you will see dainty black evening sheers glorified with cunning apron attachments that are embroidered and bespangled most gorgeously. By the same token simple little daytime frocks take on a dress-up mien in that cunningly devised lace-frilled or quaintly beruffled apron fronts are made to tie on or take off in a jiffy.

And what a boon these fascinating new apron dresses are to a limited clothes allowance. You can see the logic of the argument in an instant —sans apron front attachment you have a simple foundation gown that will carry you through trim and trig during the "don't-dress-up" hours of the day or evening. Comes time to "doll-up" a bit for a luncheon or tea or the unexpected whatever the occasion may be, and here's where the new apron attachment performs its magic. Tie it on and you will be "all dressed up" and some place to go. And if this isn't economy, thrift and good style all in one what better could fashion offer, we would like to know, than a two-some that can be faithfully utilitarian one moment and glamorously festive the next.

The attractive frocks pictured present the theme from both a day and a night viewpoint. Consider them as merely a forerunner of what "is yet to be" in way of apron frocks for now that the vogue for the apron dress has been so succ launched, designers are all a veloping the wealth of poss offered in this new and fas fashion trend.

ed in the new art very soon after articles about Daguerre's process had been reprinted from French and English journals in American newspapers as early as March, 1839. One of these was D. W. Seager, an Englishman, who was living in New York in 1839. As a result of Dr. Taft's investigations, he makes the statement that Seager "was the first person to make a successful daguerreotype in the United States; which he did on September 27, 1839."

As for the claim that Draper made the first successful portrait of a human being, Dr. Taft's conclusions also give that honor to another man. Alexander S. Wolcott of New York. Wolcott, who was an instrument maker and manufacturer of dental supplies, took a daguerreotype of his partner, John Johnson, on October 7, 1839, according to Taft, and this was the "first photographic portrait."

Draper's Contributions.

Although denying to Draper the honor of being the first to make a successful photographic portrait, Dr. Taft sums up his important contributions to photography thus:

"He was among the earliest to attempt photographic portraiture.

The earliest photographic portrait which has survived. It is a daguerreotype of Miss Dorothy Catherine Draper, made by her brother, Dr. John W. Draper, probably in the summer of 1840.

These attempts were based on such scientific principles as were then known; he sent abroad an early daguerreotype portrait, apparently the earliest which has survived; he published an extensive account of these experiments, thereby enabling and encouraging others to benefit from his experience; and he became associated with Morse in the opening of an establishment for the purpose of taking portraits, thus becoming one of the founders of a new profession."

Dr. Taft's mention of "the earliest daguerreotype portrait which has survived" is a reference to Draper's famous portrait of his sister, Miss Dorothy Catherine Draper, which is still in existence and which is owned by the Rev. Sir John C. W. Herschel of England, grandson of Sir John F. W. Herschel, the distinguished English scientist to whom Draper sent it in the summer of 1840. It was accompanied by a letter, the full text of which is printed for the first time in Taft's book. In this letter Draper stated that "I believe I was the first person here who succeeded in obtaining portraits from life."

"It will be noted that the letter is dated July 28, 1840, and that no reference is made to the date on which the portrait was made," comments Dr. Taft. "It will also be noted that the exposure of this early daguerreotype portrait was only 65 seconds. Previously published accounts concerning this daguerreotype have given exposures ranging from 10 to 20 minutes, which have evidently been based upon such general information as was available m Seager's exposure table (printed in the American Repertory of Arts, Sciences and Manufacturers for March, 1840, the first ever printed in this country).

"Judging from these facts, the date of the letter, the relatively short exposure required and an examination of the portrait itself which shows rather great contrasts, I am of the opinion that it was taken outdoors during the summer of 1840."

In September, 1840, Draper published an article in the London, Edinburgh and Dublin Philosophical Magazine in which he described in detail his method of making photographic portraits, such as the one of his sister. He stated that in his earlier attempts he dusted the face of the person sitting for the portrait with white powder (probably flour) to secure greater contrast but that a few trials showed him that there was no advantage in this. To get greater illumination on the subject he used mirrors to reflect the sun directly upon the sitter "but in the reflected sunshine, the eye can not support the effulgence of the rays." In order to support the head and keep it still during the long exposures required for these early pictures, a staff terminating in an iron ring was attached to the sitter's chair and so "arranged as to have motion in all directions to suit any stature and any altitude."

Instrument of Torture.

"The modern patron of the photographer's art may not recognize the instrument of torture described above," writes Dr. Taft, "but to those who had photographic portraits made 'in the long ago' it will be remembered as the familiar head rest which was part of every photographer's equipment, a device which was used, as can be seen, from the early inception of the art up to fairly modern times."

It must have been a very trying experience for Miss Dorothy Catherine Draper and it is doubtful if many of the belles of 1840 would have been willing to endanger their complexions by having flour smeared over it or sitting exposed to strong sunlight for long minutes while trial pictures were being taken, not to mention enduring the discomfort of that "instrument of torture," the iron head rest. So she deserves great credit for her contribution to the development of the art of photography and even though it is debatable if her brother can justly claim the honor of being the first to make a photographic portrait, there is little doubt that one distinction does rest with the Draper family.

Dorothy Catherine Draper was the first photographic "model"—the ancestor of the "glamour gals" who smile so bewitchingly at us from the pages of thousands of magazines and newspapers today.

"HOLLYWOOD was never like this!"

Jean Arthur was talking. Dressed in faded jeans, a leaky sombrero and a blouse that most women would use for a dusting rag, she stood in front of the adobe hut which is her dressing room at Old Tucson. Old Tucson is just what it means, a reproduction of the original walled city of the sixties, where Wesley Ruggles is currently filming Clarence Budington Kelland's "Arizona." Situated 16 miles north of present-day Tucson, it is a monument to movie ingenuity, a village of 125 buildings, re-created by Columbia studios' technicians from the original plans of early Tucson.

"Running water is a luxury out here," Miss Arthur said, wiping the perspiration from her face. "To speak of hot water is heresy. There just isn't any. Not that a tub of water wouldn't reach the boiling point if placed in the sun, but there are so many horses, cows, dogs and pigs around here that a tub of water wouldn't have a chance to get warm."

She has turned her back on glamour these days. She is bent only on making "Phoebe Titus," who sold pies for a dollar apiece, believable and real. She is starred in "Arizona," with William Holden and Warren William backing her up, and she's going to give us a picture worth seeing and remembering, though the thermometer does register 126 degrees.

"Waterloo Bridge" is another picture that you'll remember. Vivian Leigh proves that, in "Gone With the Wind," she was no flash in the pan; in fact, she's as good or better in "Waterloo Bridge" as she was in that Civil war epic.

And the picture gives you a new Robert Taylor. His little moustache is tremendously becoming (even though his wife, Barbara Stanwyck, said "Thumbs down!" when he raised a real one). He puts real life into his role, that of a young British army officer in the last war.

The movies are doing very well indeed by Arizona these days. Two hundred and fifty members of the cast and crew of Edward Small's "Kit Carson" troupe landed in Flagstaff the other day; among the actors were Lynn Bari, Jon Hall, Dana Andrews, Raymond Hatton, Director George B. Seitz, and many others whose names are familiar to movie-goers.

From Flagstaff the entire troupe will go to the Indian trading post of Kayente, on the Navajo Indian reservation, where a special town has been built to accommodate the Hollywood folk for their month-long stay.

The mail response to Johnny Green's new Sunday evening "Rhyme-O" program seems to upset the common belief that writing poetry is the special province of a selected few. On this musical audience-participation program, Johnny uses four-line verses, and asks listeners to send them, $5 going to the writer of each verse used.

In one week Green received 10,000 individual letters containing rhymes—and there was an average of three rhymes in each letter.

THOSE RADIO TAXICABS

There's another revolt in the offing. This time it's against radios in taxicabs. No man can serve two masters and no taxicab driver can do justice to three traffic lights and four or five radio programs.

A public cab should be a conveyance and not a loud speaker with hot brakes and loose fenders.

There is no reason why a man who wants to cross town in a hurry should be obliged to ride with a swing orchestra, a cooking program or a couple of radio comedians.

The taxicab companies insist that the customers prefer radio hacks. They say the riders regard an outside aerial as more important to transportation than four-wheel brakes. But this correspondent doubts it. He thinks the ride is tough enough without the incidental static.

For every cab fare who wants to hear "Oh, Johnny," "Town Hall Tonight" or the United States Marine Band while taking sharp corners on two wheels, there are at least ten who prefer to do their rough riding unaccompanied by symphony orchestras, radio tenors and masters of ceremonies.

It has sprung to the rescue of a long-suffering public with a demand that taxi driving by ear be forbidden, and that the hose be turned on the quaint notion that there isn't noise enough in a big city without radios in taxicabs.

* * *

The drivers won't give up without a battle, however. They contend that their lives are drab without music, wise cracks, hints on how to prepare a shrimp salad and a voice shouting from somewhere every five minutes, "Right, Miss Turpey! 100 per cent right! Lincoln's first name was Abraham, and you win five silver dollars!"

They insist that, with or without passengers, they are entitled to the full companionship of the Radio Corporation of America. If that contention is sound then a paper hanger is entitled to use his portable radio while papering your living room and a doctor is justified in listening to the Bison City Quartet while discussing your symptoms.

This department is also mildly opposed to radios in private automobiles. Driving is hazardous enough in modern traffic without giving the driver three extra switches, another glass dial and a lot of additional noises to worry over.

WAR NOTE

The servants are listening to the broadcasts all night and both German and French cooking is in a severe slump—in fact, it's terrible. That's why you see so many familiar faces dining out en famille.

R. ROELOFS JR.

A telling commentary on the contrast in living on two continents came over the radio the other day. "The French commander," the voice said, "has called on all men to die at their posts rather than retreat. The fate of the world is at stake," he declared. "Warneke now rubs a new ball. The count is three and two."

Firestone Develops New Type of Traction Tire

Through the development of a new wide base rim and a dual purpose tire bead design, the basic shape of pneumatic tires for farm tractors has undergone a revolutionary change to give regular size tires many of the advantages of oversize tire equipment without extra cost, according to an announcement by The Firestone Tire & Rubber Company. With the new dual purpose bead construction, a standard size tire is equally adaptable for mounting on either the old narrow base rim or the new wide base rim.

When the wide base rim is utilized, the tire is changed from its customary circular shape to an open "U" shape. This greatly increases the cross section of the tire, adds to the air space and contributes to greater flotation in extremely wet and muddy operating conditions or in loose, sandy soil.—Adv.

So you need both Pepsin to help break up fast that rich undigested food in your stomach, and Laxative Senna to pull the trigger on those lazy bowels. So be sure your laxative also contains Pepsin. Take Dr. Caldwell's Laxative, because its Syrup Pepsin helps you gain that wonderful stomach comfort, while the Laxative Senna moves your bowels. Tests prove the power of Pepsin to dissolve those lumps of undigested protein food which may linger in your stomach, to cause belching, gastric acidity and nausea. This is how pepsinizing your stomach helps relieve it of such distress. At the same time this medicine wakes up lazy nerves and muscles in your bowels to relieve your constipation. So see how much better you feel by taking the laxative that also puts Pepsin to work on that stomach discomfort, too. Even finicky children love to taste this pleasant family laxative. Buy Dr. Caldwell's Laxative—Senna with Syrup Pepsin at your druggist today!

GOP FARM PLANK

Determination of Iowa members of the Republican delegation to the national GOP convention at Philadelphia to "be in" every conference connected with agriculture is beginning to get results. Early in 1939 Jim Milroy, then state Republican chairman, inaugurated a series of conferences with governors and other political figures of the midwest states. These meetings have continued ever since and have included the governors of the corn belt states. They were for the most part informal conferences but at all times the common interest of the states represented were foremost. When a state convention met in Des Moines to choose delegates to the national convention both Governor Wilson and State Chairman Harry B Swan removed themselves as delegates at large in favor of two promanent farmers, Lloyd Cunningham of Cresco and George Patterson of Burt.

IOWA IN 1917

Iowa's probable part in the present world wide war emergency recently sent newspaper reporters into a search of the archives for a review of events during 1917 At that time the Thirty-Seventh general assembly was in session The late William L. Harding was governor Among other things the Thirty-Seventh appropriated a million dollars for the "providing equipping, raising and for the benefit of any military organization of the State of Iowa for service in the armies of the United States or call of the president." The money was also earmarked for expense arising from enlistments, physical examinations, transportation and sustenance and "all other necesary and advisable expenses." Other "military purpose" acts included an alien census which required all citizens of foreign countries to register within twenty-four hours a $15,000 appropriation to finance a census if resources and men and material available for use in the event of war;" and a $75,000 appropriation for the purchase and improvement of a suitable camp or training ground for the military forces of Iowa. This money was used to buy additional ground and expand facilities at Camp Dodge

IOWA PREPARING

Congress is acting swiftly in supplying the legislation and money necessary for a great plan of national defense but the military and naval branches have not waited for the day they felt was inevitable. For many months the permanent headquarters staff under General Charles A. Grahl was put the department in order for quick action when the call comes. Business and industrial firms will be asked to grant three instead of two weeks leave to employees who are members of a Guard unit. Just as Congress is acting swiftly now on plans prepared months — perhaps years ago - the Iowa legislature if called into emergency special session would need waste little time in gearing this state into the military plans of the War Departmen The bills are drawn and need only to have the dates filled in Sample blank forms have been prepared It is known that Iowa industrial organization plants of the state has been inspected and lubricated for months. It will get into motion quickly and smoothly when the time comes. That it is coming none in a position to know doubt.

GUARD CALL

President Roosevelt has asked congress for authority to call the National Guard into service in the various states should an emergency develop making such move necessary Whether such new authority is needed in Iowa depends upon final interpretation of existing laws. Governor Wilson is of the opinion that existing laws give the President the necessary authority in proper emergency. In a recent statement on the matter, the governor cited a section of the code which provides "whenever the United States is invaded or in danger of invasion from any foreign nation, or rebellion against the authority of the government of the United States, or the president is unable with the regular forces at his command, to execute the laws of the union, it shall be lawful for the president to call forth such numbers of the national guard as he may deem necessary." The code further provides that when so called by the president 'the guard shall serve during the term so specified either within or without the territory of the United States."

LIFE, LOVES AND SONGS OF FAMOUS ACTRESS ARE ALL IN "LILLIAN RUSSELL"

Blonde and lovely Alice Faye portrays the first and greatest of America's glamour girls in Darryl F. Zanuck's production of "Lillian Russell," the 20th Century-Fox film which comes Friday for five days to the Avery Theatre, and features Don Ameche and Henry Fonda with her.

The colorful life and loves of the striking American beauty are revived in all their splendor and magnificence in "Lillian Russell" with the sparkling, dashing days of America's most fabulous era as a background.

Lillian Russel was famous for her marvelous voice as well as her splendid acting and great beauty, and Alice Faye sings many of the songs Lillian popularized Among these are "After The Ball Is Over,' 'Rosie, You Are My Posie," "My Evening Star," "The Band Played On," and many others.

Don Ameche has the role of Lillian's composer-husband, who struggled to author her greatest stage success. It is Ameche's third composer role and advance reports indicate his acting again is outstanding as it was in "Alexander's Ragtime Band" and "Swanee River."

Henry Fonda is cast as Alexander Moore, the newspaperman, who fell in love with the gorgeous Lillian when they were both young, but failed to tell her about it. Fresh from his triumph in "The Grapes of Wrath," Fonda is said to give another stirring portrayal in a highly dramatic role.

The great Lillian Russell numbered among her admirers such famed persons as Diamond Jim Brady, the financier, and Jesse Lewisohn, the copper king, played respectively by Edward Arnold and Warren William.

Pigeons Is Pigeons.

Expressmn William Pavlovec of Calmar, must have felt a good deal like the expressman in Ellis Parker Butler's famous "Pigs Is Pigs," story recently. Instead of guinea pigs, however, Expressman Pavlovec received a shipment of 85 coops of homing pigeons,which he released from the ball park at Calmar at half hour intervals. Immediately the birds flew off in the direction of their home in Milwaukee.

Mayor's Proclamation

IN ACCORDANCE with the wishes of the Department of Safety of the State of Iowa, we are designating Saturday as one of the many days that we will check on the public for violations, not only on the drivers, but on the pedestrian as well.

The loss of life is appalling, 500 to 600 killed and 10,000 to 10,500 injured in a year is far too high. Every time you get into your car and under the wheel we want you to hesitate just a second and say, "I'll be careful." We feel that willing co-operation of the car drivers of this community is far better than forced co-operation, and for awhile at least, we are going to ask that you observe the rules of Town and State.

To the pedestrian, we ask that you give the driver a break also. Don't cut across the streets, but cross at the crossings. We want to bring this point home to the parents, instruct and impress on your children's young minds that darting across the street from out of between parked cars is very dangerous. No matter how careful a driver may be, this letting your children "cut across" makes it a hazzard even for the best driver. All accidents are not the fault of the driver.

Now then, starting Saturday June 23, we are going to check violations, so be careful. Don't get your name on the list too many times or it may be necessary to call you in for instructions. The State Highway Patrol is at our disposal for the enforcement of this undertaking and for instructing of the violator that don't want to co-operate willingly.

Here are a few of the noticeable erross we all make, check yourself:

1. Speed. Stop Signs.
2. Intersections. Watch your turning, don't skid around.
3. Park your car between the yellow lines.
4. Back out carefully from the curb.
5. Don't turn around in the street, go to the intersection.
6. To the pedestrian (especially children). Stay on the side walks, cross at the crossings.
7. Liquor and Gas don't mix. (Please report at once to the Mayor all cases of driving while drunk, that you may see. Its your duty).
8. To the driver, DRIVE CAREFULLY!
9. We ask all to co-operate, after all accidents just don't happen . .
10. Our community has a good reputation, let's keep it.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

MALACHI DEMANDS HONESTY TOWARD GOD

LESSON TEXT—Malachi 3 7-18
GOLDEN TEXT—Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse, that there may be meat in mine house, and prove me how herewith, saith the Lord of hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it.—Malachi 3 10

Spiritually sick—and desperately so—was Israel in the days of Mal- achi. The nation had been released from captivity in Babylon and had been back in their own land for almost a century. The outburst of religious enthusiasm which charac- terized their return had resulted in the rebuilding of the temple (Ezra 1:1-4). In this they were encour- aged by Haggai, as we recall from our lesson of last Sunday. They had later been led by Nehemiah in re- newed interest in spiritual things and in the rebuilding of the city wall, but now again they had turned away from God. Malachi came with what one might call God's last word before judgment upon their sins. The lesson centers around four words.

I. Apostasy.

"Ye have turned aside" (v. 7, R. V.). This was God's complaint against His people. In spite of His blessings upon them, they had inter- married with the heathen, they had dealt treacherously with their breth- ren, and had neglected to worship God. What was even worse, they felt no conviction about their sin and denied that they owed God any- thing, not even the debt of common gratitude.

Read the insolent, self-confident questions and assertions of the people in verses 7, 8, 13 and 14. Think how perfectly they fit the atti- tude of thousands of unbelievers and backslidden Christians in our day. One might almost think that Mal- achi were reading the secret thoughts of our own people, and pos- sibly of our own hearts.

II. Robbery.

Illness commonly has its center of infection, whether it be physical or spiritual sickness. Malachi struck at a very vital point when he re- vealed that the heart of Israel's dif- ficulty was dishonesty toward God.

That dishonesty reflected itself in spiritual things, but, since Malachi was talking to an arguing genera- tion (just like ours), he gave them a concrete illustration of their deceit —they had withheld from God the tithes and offerings.

Men who would never cheat the telephone company out of a nickel will rob God consistently Sunday after Sunday by sanctimoniously slipping a thin dime into the collec- tion plate. If that is all a man can and should give, God will bless it and multiply it for His glory. But certainly it does not befit one who lives in luxury to give God's work the smallest piece of change which he can decently slip into the plate.

Tithing may be said to be an Old Testament principle. Doubtless it is also true that the principle of New Testament Christianity is that all we have belongs to God, but often the one who hides behind that fact does not give as much as the people of Old Testament times. Is that honest?

III. Judgment.

God is love, but that does not mean that His patience is without limit nor that He will forever with- hold judgment. He says, through Malachi (v. 9), "Ye are cursed with a curse." The blessing has been withheld (v. 10). The devourer is in the land (v. 11). He promised them release and blessing if they repented and returned to the right way, which obviously means that their failure to do so would bring judgment. We know that Israel despised God's warning and to this day is paying for its sin. Will America be wise enough to heed God's call?

IV. Blessing.

So often the loving God had to speak through His prophets of im- pending judgment on sin, but how gracious He is in that He always holds out the promise of blessing for repentance and obedience.

Look at the precious promise in verse 10. Thousands of Christians join the writer in saying, "That is true in A. D. 1940 just as it was in 400 B. C." Read verses 11 and 12. Note that our God is not only a great God, but a good God. Consider the blessings of spiritual fellowship—the certainty of victory revealed in verses 16 and 17. One marvels that Israel could resist such a loving plea just as one wonders also why men of our own day of God's grace still resist His gracious invitation.

Slip-Covered Boards Make Handy Screen

By RUTH WYETH SPEARS

DO YOU need a screen to keep drafts from a child's bed? Or perhaps you would like to have a good-looking one to cut off the view from the dining room into the kitchen or from a bedroom into a bathroom? Well, here is an idea for that screen. Buy four well- seasoned boards each 1 foot wide; 1 inch thick and as long as the height you wish the screen to be; also 9 hinges of the 1-inch butt type used for cupboard doors. Next, select a smart chintz to cov- er your boards. To estimate the amount of chintz, multiply the height of the screen by three and then add ¼-yard. Now, just fol- low the directions in the sketch and you will have your screen in no time.

And, by the way, if you are in- terested in making a collection of fabric toys, complete directions for the Rag Baby on the floor are in Sewing Book No. 2. The Sleepy Time doll on the bed and the Ban- danna doll on the shelf are in Book 4; the Stocking Cat is in Book 3. You will also find full directions for the crocheted rug in Book No. 3. Directions for the lamp shades are in Book No. 1. Send 10 cents in coin for each book desired. Car Drivers Using Precaution Say Town Officers

"CROSS AT CROSSINGS" IGNORED BY SIXTY-THREE MEN

Klemme Officials Checked Traffic Violations Saturday Night

The results of the Safety Check-up by Klemme officials Saturday night is far from encouraging as there were over one hundred cases where persons literally flirted with death!

Last week Mayor Grange published a notice asking the public to co-operate in a safety move here, but according to the Saturday night check-up, the notice did not seem to be very effective, or the public seemingly is none to willing to promote safety.

Many Violations

Here are some of the violations made during a two hour check-up by town officials:

Mother and child crossing street from between parked cars, 3 cases. (Mothers, are you deliberately teaching your child to take chances with death? It would be better for you to take your child by the hand and teach him to cross at the crossings.)

Thirty-seven boys and girls, ranging in age from about five to sixteen, darted from between parked cars to cross the street, dogging traffic in doing so. Thirty-seven boys and girls won the race against death in so doing!

Sixty-three grown up men did the same stunt. However, officials stated that most of them looked up and down the street before crossing from between parked cars. They set a very poor example for the youngsters to follow.

One Town Councilman was among the number of Jay Walkers.

Mayor Grange stated that the children usually travelled in groups of three to five, and often a group in crossing from between parked cars would split up to dodge the cars, sometimes scampering back and make a fresh start. Very dangerous business.

Only one or two cars were improperly lighted and only a couple of drivers used main street for a pleasure tour. One car was watched and checked which drove up and down the street and made thirteen U turns at intersections without a stop. That driver was adding to the hazard of jay-walkers. Thirteen may be his unlucky number on the next check-up.

The officials were well pleased with the way car drivers were cooperating, as they drove slow and used caution in watching for pedestrians.

Further check-ups will be made and if violations continue, more drastic steps may have to be taken. Town Officials are asking that all drivers and pedestrians alike observe safety rules. Parents should teach their children the rules of safety . . . it may save a life.

Dole Debauches, Says Mormon Leader, So Church Sets Up Own Work Welfare

By
CLARENCE D. WILLIAMS
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

"WE MORMONS have cared for the essential needs of our own since the struggling days of the 'forties' under the guiding hand of the great colonizer, Brigham Young."

So says 83-year-old Heber Jeddy Grant, president of the Mormon church. But he doesn't rest with talk, and that accounts for the huge Mormon church welfare plan to banish unemployment.

This plan, wholly divorced from politics, seeking and wanting no aid from any municipal, county, state or federal agency, is going to be a permanent plan to "help people help themselves," asserts the man who is prophet, seer, revelator, and leader of more than 800,000 faithful since 1918.

The project is based purely upon religious principles, assert its sponsors, which were laid down by the church a century ago.

Operate Coal Mine, Factories.

The plan, which materially reduces the total amount necessary for adequate relief in any given community, has been showing rapid results. There has been established in Salt Lake City a central bishop's storehouse, in addition there are 67 regional and stake storehouses that serve approximately 100 of the 127 stakes and there are small emergency bishop's storehouses in the remote rural wards of the church.

The welfare plan operates a coal mine, a large canning factory in addition to smaller units scattered all over the church, a clothing factory, a clothing renovating shop and salvage plant, with several stores established to distribute their output, and two saw mills. One stake is undertaking an experimental soap manufacturing project and still another group is manufacturing ladders and another adobes for building homes.

Newest venture in the plan is the construction of 23 grain storage elevators having a total capacity of 350,000 bushels. At the present time a large crew of workmen, the majority of whom are devout church members, are working day and night pouring concrete in the giant forms. They will be paid in kind and will receive some cash. The grain elevators are located in Salt Lake City.

Ever since the planner, Brigham Young, drilled the necessity of hard work and thrift into his flock there has been more or less strict obedience to his commands.

Heads Many Businesses.

The life and character of Mr. Young, second leader of the church, unquestionably have inspired the five men, who since Brigham's death in 1877 have worn the mantel of president of the Mormon church.

Heber J. Grant, seventh president, is a native of Salt Lake City. He is tall, erect and still is a "powerhouse" despite his recent serious illness which forced him to refrain from his strenuous and untiring job of attending to even the smallest details of operating the church.

President Grant in addition to being titular head of the Mormon faith is head of many powerful Utah industrial and commercial organizations. They include factories, banks, hotels and insurance companies. In spite of all that keeps him "on the go" he keeps in close contact with the most humble members of his flock.

Keen-minded and witty Mr. Grant is a firm believer in work and more work.

"It keeps you young and maintains your pride," he asserts. He is dead set against such retirement plans as Townsend advocates.

"Why, it's the silliest thing I have ever heard," he said. "I certainly do not indorse such a pension plan for my members."

He stopped to figure out how much he would have received if the plan were effective when he was 65 years of age.

"Why, I would have received thousands of dollars. No sir, I urge at all times that church members give a full day's work for their full day's pay."

And he added: "I urge that they keep on working their life time, providing they are able."

Along with his right hand men, First Counselor J. Reuben Clark Jr. and Second Counselor David O. McKay, who make up what is termed the "first presidency," bearded President Grant quickly points out the church can care for its own in the future if it can be relieved of the debauchery to character which follows along with a dole.

In order to render moderate financial assistance to those who were engaged in small farming or business, and who did not have a bankable undertaking, the church set up the Co-operative Security corporation. This company has made a number of small loans, which are largely character loans, but has limited the amount it would lend to any one person to a few hundred dollars.

Finally, the church has not yet made any effort, or pretended to make any effort, to take its members from governmental work projects. Leaders say it has merely urged those on such projects to do a full day's work for a day's pay.

While the church welfare plan aims, of course, to help those in need, its real purpose is not merely to substitute church gratuities for others furnished by charitable or governmental agencies, but to rebuild the characters of its members and to promote and foster the patriotic, civic, and spiritual qualities of the people.

He Knew Poverty.

Heber Jeddy was born in 1856 in a pioneer house where the large Z. C. M. I. mercantile establishment now stands, nine years after Brigham Young had arrived in Utah with his band of pioneers fleeing from persecution in Missouri and Illinois.

When Heber was a growing boy the Mormons under President Young were beset by disease, famine and more persecution. Mr. Grant's father, Jedediah, was one of Young's leaders. His boy, Heber, grew up under conditions of poverty. He struggled hard to support his mother after the death of his father when he was at a tender age. He possessed the will to succeed with everything he undertook to do. He later built his mother a fine home when he was often branded as a failure. Meantime he exhibited a talent for business and weaved his pattern of life, without the aid of anyone except his mother, who constantly encouraged him to carry on under the ideals laid down by the L. D. S. church.

The churchman has many favorite sayings which he has recited to Latter-day Saints at various church conferences that are held in the historic oval-shaped tabernacle on famous Temple square.

One of his sayings is based on his "persist in doing" philosophy.

Praises Sense of Humor.

He asserts: "That which we persist in doing becomes easy to do; not that the nature of the thing has changed, but that our power to do has increased."

The Mormons, particularly those in the western states, have proved to be long-livers. Longevity is typical among the pioneer families in Utah.

Heber Grant, who will be 84 years of age next November 22, believes that age is a quality of mind. He often has repeated: "Age is a quality of mind; if your dreams you've left behind, if hope is cold, if you no longer look ahead, if your ambitions are dead, then you are growing old."

A humorist and a known philanthropist, President Grant has appeared at many leading conventions as a principal speaker, often "stealing the show."

"Without a sense of humor a person will fail to make friends," he declared. "And the more friends, the more you get out of life."

He warned that the "curse of idleness shortens a man's life." He said those who are near, or in the so-called "pension age" better think twice before they take a permanent rest.

Heber Jeddy Grant, 83, president of the Mormon church.

Mr. Grant has been a great organizer and devoted many of his early years to missionary work and was the first representative of the church to preside over a mission in Japan. He was only about 26 years of age when he was ordained a member of the council of twelve apostles.

No More Polygamy.

He was made president of the council of twelve apostles during the presidency of Joseph F. Smith and following President Smith's death in 1918 he was elevated to the top ranking position he now holds.

The once burning Mormon question—polygamy—has long been forever banished. Any person of the faith who attempts in any way to practice plural marriage is excommunicated from the church.

President Grant has had three wives and was the father of twelve children, two boys and ten girls. His sons and two of his wives are dead.

He has been quoted on the subject of polygamy as follows:

"Plural marriages have long been passe. Although they used to be in good form among members, today they are condemned. There are still some who attempt to practice it, but they suffer when they are discovered. Before the practice was forbidden it was different. Contrary to the propaganda spread by the enemies of the church, plural marriages as practiced by church members were not different from any other form of holy matrimony.

"The laws of the church were such that a man was required to get a written indorsement before he could enter into plural marriage, and he had to have an excellent character. Even when the practice was common, the number of such marriages was insignificant compared with the population."

Urges 'Words of Wisdom.'

The church president is constantly urging his flock to obey the teachings of the "Word of Wisdom." This prohibits the use of intoxicating liquors, tobacco and tea and coffee.

In his entire career as president of the church, Mr. Grant has only been absent from two general church conferences in Salt Lake City. Both times he was forced to remain away on account of illness. Once he had to go to Chicago to undergo an operation and again he wasn't able to preside at the great gathering in April, 1940 when he was confined in a Los Angeles hospital.

The annual report of the church for 1939 shows a total church membership of 803,528 There are 645,618 in the stakes and 157,910 in the missions.

Should Germany conquer England, take a look at the Articles of Confederation, drafted by the Founding Fathers of the United States in 1777. You will find, say Pearson and Allen, Washington columnists, a paragraph giving specific legal precedent for Canada seeking admittance as a member of the United States. The Founding Fathers opened the door in long-forgotten Article II as follows:

"Canada acceding to this Confederation, and joining in the measures of the United States, shall be admitted into, and entitled to all the advantages of this Union. But no other Colony shall be admitted into the same unless such admission be agreed to by nine states."

According to this, it would appear that Canada could become a part of the United States without a referendum vote by the other 48 states.

FARLEY RELEASES

William Burke, Massachusetts Democratic state chairman, has confided to friends that he received a personal letter from Farley containing authority to release the delegation "if the President's name is presented to the convention." Since this is certain to happen, Jim's letter means he will not fight a third term nomination.

Burke's friends attribute Jim's letter to the sweeping change in public sentiment since the catastrophic war developments. Hitler's blitzkrieg through the hapless lowlands

Massachusetts' 34 delegates are the only ones pledged to Farley.

Whether his retirement from the nomination race means that Jim is ready to manage another campaign is unknown.

SUPERIORITY IN TANKS

The fighting which took place in Flanders probably was the most desperate in the history of the world, even bloodier than the Battles of the Marne and Verdun. Corpses were piled house high. The trapped French and British made the Germans pay in floods of blood for every foot they advanced. They knew that most of them had no chance of escaping, but their objective was to weaken the Germans, give time to General Weygand to strengthen the defenses of Paris.

The key to this war (and also to American defense) is to remember that khaki does not stop machine-gun bullets, while tanks do. Also that it is impossible to whip an enemy whose airplanes can spy out every move and blast that move even before it gets started.

The air and tank preponderance of the Nazis is the crux of their successes.

NAZIS IN SOUTH AMERICA

The problem of protecting the Monroe Doctrine has undergone intensive nights of study of late around the state, war and navy departments. Nobody is exactly predicting that Hitler will invade South America this year, but nobody expected him to invade Norway either. And the British, one year ago, didn't expect to be invaded at all, and did not very well prepare for it.

So U. S. strategists, not knowing what Hitler, in the full flush of victory, might do, are endeavoring to be prepared.

On the maps of South America hung in government offices these days are two danger spots. One is Brazil, the other Uruguay. Other spots are bad, but these two have the largest number of Nazi sympathizers and fifth column plotters.

Uruguay is simply honeycombed with Nazi agents. There are also strong German colonies in southern Brazil, and even in Buenos Aires. In Argentina, the older army officers are strongly pro-German, having been trained by a German officer. In Brazil, the younger army officers are pro-Nazi.

Particularly worrisome is the fate of these countries with Italy in the war. There are at least 2,000,000 Italians in Argentina—or about one-fifth of the population. Also there are large Italian colonies in Uruguay and Brazil.

Chief undercover strategy of these racial groups is to overthrow the present governments in South America, in favor of puppet governments friendly to the Nazi-Fascist cause. Then these puppet governments could renounce the Monroe Doctrine and invite Hitler to the Western hemisphere.

Note—New aviation aids, enlarging of airports, training of pilots, and even the co-operation of the U. S. fleet in using Brazilian harbors are now under discussion to bolster the present pro-allied governments of South America.

WAR CHAFF

Senator Josh Lee of Oklahoma says: "The people of my state are probably ahead of the President in his attitude toward Europe."

Dorothy Thompson says the best key to Italian war sentiment was given her by an Italian in Milan, who said: "Curse the English, who drove us into the arms of those swine, the Germans!"

U. S. diplomatic reports from Russia describe a bad food shortage there.

MOVIES-IN-THE-SLOT

Are the movies going "back where they came from": the nickelodian, the nicolet and the peepshow?

* * *

News from Hollywood so indicates. Dozens of promoters are getting in on a gold rush they think will come with the introduction of movies by slot machines in taverns, barrooms, luncheonettes, ice-cream parlors and poolrooms all over the country.

You drop a nickel in the slot and get a movie show with music. The idea is to flood the country with "movie cabinets" through which a customer may get a movie with his beer, cake, strawberry sundae, three-decker sandwich or hotdog.

Tyrone Power and Deanna Durbin will be presented with a short ale and an onion. Mae West, Eddie Cantor and E. G. Robinson may be obtainable with a cup of java and a plate of beans. Errol Flynn and Kay Francis through the mere deposit of a nickel will become inseparable from a cocktail and a hand of rummy.

You may even get Raymond Massey in a new Lincoln drama at the Seaside Grill.

The new device brings Radio City to Hogan's Elite Cafe, transfers Roxy's to Finnegan's Bar and makes Greta Garbo, bock beer, Mickey Rooney, Gary Cooper, and a game of Kelly pool allied products.

It isn't hard to imagine a fellow rolling into a tavern, pulling out a handful of change and demanding "The Garden of Allah," a sardine sandwich, a rye highball and a couple of short newsreels with ginger-ale.

Jimmy Roosevelt is getting some of the blame. He was among the first to leap into the new idea with both feet. Since that time scores of movie figures are aboard and it is reported that some of the major producers have money in it.

Tremendous returns are predicted, especially if Will Hays doesn't stop such screen revivals as "Fun in a Turkish Bath," "The Bathing Beauties' Ball," "The Boudoir Burglar" and "Parisian Nights"

* * *

The whole idea will cheapen pictures, topple the movie industry from the penthouse level to the underground rathskeller and probably throw another rock at the legitimate picture houses. But it's coming.

SECRETARY LA GUARDIA

Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia of New York has been mentioned as an assistant secretary of war or for some other place in Mr. Roosevelt's emergency cabinet. The very idea is staggering. Fiorello might or might not keep us out of this war, but he would start so many others that we would forget all about the present crisis. We can see him now, assistant secretary of the navy, attired in fire helmet, rubber boots and naval blouse, carrying a fire hose in one hand and a pair of binoculars in the other, ready for all comers.

Mayor LaGuardia is the only man in America who could plan a naval battle, dedicate a viaduct, open a new school, issue an ultimatum to Germany, deliver a talk on kitchen economics, put through an aviation program, throw out a first baseball, denounce the press and lead a tank attack, all in one afternoon.

"What general who headed the American forces in 1776, crossed the Delaware in an open boat and chopped down the cherry tree is the George Washington bridge named after?" the quiz man asked Jimmy Durante in a recent radio burlesque of the question and answer craze.

"How much time do I get on tha' one?" demanded Jimmy.

"In two weeks they had spotted ten cows and one bull in that corner of Texas as meeting their requirements, picking one here, one there. They hired a cattleman who knew the country to gather them at a central point of shipping, and having exhausted this end of Texas, they moved up into the great coastal plains region between Houston and Beaumont. Here was an entirely different country, one of the great range cattle sections of the state. The region was combed thoroughly and ten excellent longhorn cows and two good bulls were gathered.

"Inasmuch as the steers are the ones that developed the extremely long horns, three glorious animals with good-sized horns were brought to be kept as an exhibit of what a longhorn should be. They are all young and their horns will probably grow at least 18 inches more in a few years.

Branded "U. S."

"The two shipments were concentrated at Fort Worth and dipped three times at seven-day intervals to free them of the deadly Texas fever tick and tested for tuberculosis. Then the whole bunch were put through a branding chute and branded 'U. S.' on the left hip.

"The longhorns were shipped from Fort Worth to the Wichita national forest. It was like old times to sit in the caboose of a long freight train with a car of cattle ahead and crawl over the top of the train in the dark to make sure the cows were all there. Cache and the Wichita forest were eventually reached and the cattle placed in the pasture provided for them. Swarms of people came out from surrounding cities to look them over, and the old-time cowmen of the region all agreed that the bunch which had been collected were really fine specimens of the old longhorns—perfect types with which to build up a modest herd of 250 or 300 head and thus preserve the breed for future generations of Americans to study and admire."

By 1929 the original herd of 24 longhorns in the Wichita national forest had increased to 40 and since then there has been a small increase each year. But the recent statement made by biological survey officials that there are now only 250 pure-strain longhorns, including no doubt the herd in Oklahoma and scattered numbers in other parts of the West, indicates that this animal is nearing the "end of the trail" and it is not inconceivable that an epidemic or sickness or some other unforeseen circumstance might easily wipe the breed out of existence.

Origin of the Longhorn.

It has been a "long trail," in more than one sense, that the longhorn has traveled His history traces back to the days of Cortez. The Spanish conquistadores brought the first cattle to North America from the hills of Andalusia, in southern Spain. Two centuries before any cattle were sent to Texas the Spaniards were successfully raising good ones in Mexico. The first herds crossed the Rio Grande into Texas when the missions were built. Around each mission the padres kept good-sized herds of beef and milch cattle, and oxen for transporting heavy loads.

As the years passed numbers of these cattle escaped and became wild, running as free on the endless prairies as the bison and the antelope. Inbreeding caused deterioration and settlers arriving from the states east of the Mississippi late in the Eighteenth and early in the Nineteenth centuries found herds of scrawny wild cattle everywhere, with horns out of all proportion to the animal's size. They were fleet, tough creatures, as well adapted to the arid region as the antelope and deer or the buffalo herds that were growing less numerous.

In the years before the railroad came to Texas, without a rod of fence anywhere between the Rio Grande and Kansas, the longhorn roamed at will over the vast range. There became so many in Texas then that often they were killed for their hides alone. Occasionally herds were driven to New Orleans, which is 650 miles from San Antonio, and to Mobile and Vicksburg. They rarely sold for more than $5 a head and the demand was not very brisk.

Then came the Civil war. Texas couldn't and wouldn't send herds northward, and the Union blockade of the Mississippi river was so effective that only one or two droves got through, swimming almost under the guns of warships below Vicksburg. Their numbers were greatly diminished, the remnant finally reaching the Confederate army. When the war ended the cattle industry in Texas was nearly ruined.

It was during this hour of depression that a ranchman conceived the idea of driving cattle to the North. If the buyers wouldn't come to Texas for cattle, he would take his cattle where he could sell them, or, at least, where the prospects were good. He selected Abilene, Kan., end of rail on the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe. So, in 1867, the first herd of longhorns "went up trail." They arrived at their destination, were sold at a good profit and the cattleman went back to Texas for another herd.

The news of his success spread like wildfire, and the next year other herds were driven northward, with varying degrees of success. But Texas cattlemen were used to hard luck and difficulties. Within two or three years trail driving became an established business and in one year three-fourths of a million head arrived in Kansas. The longhorn was in the heyday of his glory and the cattle industry thrived in Texas.

Disaster on the Range.

It continued to flourish with the discovery by the cattlemen that by driving their steers to the northern ranges and fattening them there they could increase their profits. By 1880 the land was badly overstocked and undernourished. Then came the drouth of 1885 when cattle perished by the thousands around tanks and waterholes. This was followed a few years later by severe winters which wiped out whole herds. Other factors which spelled the doom of the longhorn were the coming of the barbed wire, which marked the end of the open range, and the settling of the West by homesteaders.

Long before the last great herd went "up the trail" in 1895, progressive cattlemen had been introducing blooded stock and crossing them with the longhorns. Shorthorns were tried first but the shorthorn wasn't so good at "rustling for his grass." In the Hereford the cattlemen found the animal that, crossed with the longhorn, was ideally adapted to the Texas ranges.

So the lanky old longhorn was through as a beef type. He became a hybrid and began losing his individuality in the red-coated "white-face." As a pure strain he exists now only as a curiosity on a few ranches in Texas, at live stock shows and in the "reservation" set aside for him in Oklahoma. He is a "Vanishing American."

Star Dust
STAGE SCREEN RADIO

By VIRGINIA VALE
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

EACH year Hollywood makes a "sleeper" — a picture that, during the making, created no excitement, but during the preview showing had all the earmarks of being one of the best of the year. "It Happened One Night" and "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington" are two of the better known sleepers. This year's, according to some of the people who have seen it, may be "Down Went McGinty."

Written and directed by Preston Sturgis, with a cast including Muriel Angelus, Brian Donlevy and Akim Tamiroff, it is the "saga of a bum."

It may be the making of a new star, Muriel Angelus. In England she is one of the foremost musical comedy stars; she played the lead in "Balalaika" on the stage there—you'll recall that Nelson Eddy and Ilona Massey did the picture version. She has been in this country for two years; last year, while singing on the New York stage in "The Boys From Syracuse," she was signed up by Paramount, and "The Light That Failed," with Ronald Colman, was her first picture. Then she did "Safari" and "The Way of All Flesh," followed them with "Down Went McGinty."

—*—

When John Barrymore seemed to be unavailable for the role of John Barrymore in "The Great Profile," at Twentieth Century-Fox, Adolphe Menjou was engaged for it. Then Barrymore's plans changed, he took the part, and Menjou took his salary, as the studio had no other picture ready for him.

Rod Cameron, a young, six-foot Canadian, went to Los Angeles a year ago to learn the dime store business. That didn't work out very well, so he quit, took up little theater work, and now finds himself acting for Paramount.

Death brought him his first role, that of "Corporal Underhill" in Cecil B. DeMille's "Northwest Mounted Police." Earl Askam, a former stage star and war hero, was to have played it, but he died recently of a heart attack, and young Cameron (whose real name is Rod Cox) was summoned for it. By a grisly coincidence, the role includes a death scene, but he's so elated over getting the part that he can't afford to be superstitious.

Now that they need passports to sail for a tour of South America, it has been discovered that many of Toscanini's NBC Symphony musicians are men without a country. It seems that there was a general impression among them that all they had to do to become American citizens was to file their intentions of doing so; now they're not Americans, and, as they renounced their native lands, they don't legally belong anywhere.

George Brent, working in Warner Brothers' "The Sentence," offers to put up $10,000 at 10 to 1 odds that he won't marry for another three years. "That's no reflection on Ann," he says, meaning Ann Sheridan, whom gossips have him wedding soon. "It's just that I'm going to wind up my picture contract then, and I'm not making any marriage plans until I do."

Miss Sheridan (working in "They Drive by Night," same studio) is equally vehement. "George and I haven't even discussed getting married," says she. But—it's the kind of buildup that so often leads to an elopement, in Hollywood!

Carl Hoff, on the CBS Al Pearce show, drew an impressive crowd the other day and wished he hadn't. He parked his new coupe and then tried to get out of it, and couldn't. He went through assorted acrobatic convulsions, thrusting his feet and arms out of the windows in all possible combinations, while the crowd offered advice hilariously. The new coupe has patent thief-locks on its doors. Only after he had struggled till he was limp did it occur to Hoff to pass the key to one of the amused bystanders

Cottons Go to Top of the List In Fabric Aristocracy Class

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

WHEN it comes to fabric aristocracy cottons are tops this season. It's not only that ginghams and piques and gabardines and sharkskin, dimities, voiles, chintz, percale, swisses and organdies are smart for daytime it is the style prestige that is accorded them for dine, dance and evening wear, no matter how formal the occasion, that is the news that is big news.

Speaking of smart cottons for party, wedding, and graduate wear, the new Swiss organdies are simply breathtaking in their loveliness. As a convincing argument behold the enchanting evening frock pictured in the foreground of the accompanying illustration. With its yards and yards of full-flounced skirt it is reminiscent of the old South. By the way, most stylish cottons this summer are of the romantic type, and this lovely model is no exception to the rule. The fine Swiss cloque organdy which fashions this lovable gown has a June-garden patterning of rose, blue, lavender and white flowers that is simply entrancing. Tiny rose and blue velvet bows pretify the skirt flounces catching also the front draping of the flattering bodice. Soft shirring adds interest to the brief puffed sleeves.

Formal bands of fine embroidery and cutout are lavishly applied to sheer crystal-clear Swiss organdy for the graceful summer party frock shown above to the left. Under the demure collared bolero the low-cut camisole bodice is finely tucked below a wide edging of embroidery which is repeated as shoulder straps. The endlessly swirling skirt is caught at the waist by a wide pastel taffeta girdle finished with a miniature corsage in delicate shades.

It adds to the zest of the new summer fashions that they are that versatile in their styling. You can choose any silhouette you please and be "in style" whether your choice be mermaid slimness or "Gone With the Wind" southern belle types that register picturesque bouffancy. One of the fascinating vagaries of the present mode is the tiered silhouette as pictured to the right in the group. An adorable multi-colored floral printed cloque organdy fashions this tiered frock which, we are quite sure you will agree, bespeaks a new high in summer prettiness.

Speaking of the now-so-fashionable cloque sheers, an exquisite tissue-like matelasse seersucker has been brought out this season that is taking the world of fashion by storm. This exquisite sheer in dark colors makes up beautifully for day wear as well as for night and it is ever so lovely in pastel colorings. For the woman who sews, these diaphanous seersuckers are a veritable find in that the simpler you make them up the more effective is the gown, since the material is so all-sufficient within itself.

Another sheer enjoying a maximum of style prestige is dotted swiss, especially red dots on white, for white with red accents is all the rage just now. You will find, likewise, that cotton sheers that are spectacularly patterned with gorgeous red flowers or other motif in red are ever so good style this season. With these red and white cottons wear a red hat with matching gloves and for a fine finesse climax the ensemble with red shoes such as were so successfully launched for Southern resort wear earlier in the year.

(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

Hoods Everywhere

Everything that can be consistently styled with a hood is being styled with a hood. Most of the hoods are detachable which makes them eminently practical. When you go motoring or stroll on the beach with a snappy wind blowing off the water, when you go to midsummer night dance parties a short coat with detachable hood made of camel's hair and lined with red Scotch plaid as here illustrated will serve you well. A coat of this type with its cunning hood is likewise lovely if carried out in pastels.

Off-Face Berets Control Hairdress

Much is being said lately in regard to the relation of hairdress and hat. The recent trend toward big off-face berets worn far back on the head may, so fashion experts declare, bring about a revival of the pompadour since most hats of this type are even now posed behind a mass of curls atop the forehead.

Fancy Is Turning To Pink Accents

If you will look about in the neckwear departments you will note a surprising showing of dainty pink collars and cuffs, jabots and other accessory items. Go to the jewelry section and it is possible you will think you are "seeing through rose-colored glasses" for many of the clips, brooches, earrings, bracelets and necklaces register pink tones and tints. The same may be said of gloves of flowers and down in Southland during the resort period the accent on pink expressed itself in dainty flannel coats such as many a fashionable wore.

Which all goes to show that the flair for pink accessory touches is very much in evidence this season and all through the summer fashions one will see the new black or navy sheers so popular for afternoon wear, made lovely and appealingly feminine with flattering accents of pink!

All-White Fashion Gaining Momentum

The all-white movement is gaining momentum. The fashionable thing to do is to carry it out from head to foot. The young smart set are thrilled with the idea of all-white so much so they dance in white, play in white, in fact take keen delight in ensembling dress, hat, bag, gloves, shoes, to which they add jewelry and flowers all in white.

Quilted Velvet Is Popular for Wraps

Little jackets and capes of pastel colored velvet that is prettily quilted make charming evening wraps to wear over dainty lingerie frocks.

Liver sausage contains all the nutrients of liver. It is high in protein, in iron and copper and in several of the most important vitamins. Thus, a greater use of liver sausage in the family menus means the addition of an item of unusually high food value.

Iowa's four "top" soybean varieties are Mukden and Manchu in the north and Illini and Dunfield in the south.

"FLORIAN" STARRING ROBERT YOUNG COMES TO THE AVEY FOR TWO DAYS

Robert Young fresh from his triumph in "Northwest Passage," plays Anton, the horse trainer, in "Florian" which opens a two-day engagement at the Avery Theatre in Garner Sunday. Beautiful Helen Gilbert, discovered as a cellist in a studio orchestra, tested by Winfield Sheehan for "Florian" and winning important roles in "Andy Hary Gets Spring Fever" and the "Secret of Dr. Kildare." As a result of the test, plays Diana, the countess whom Anton loves. World reconstruction and shattering social distinctions in the story plus their mutual affection for the Lippizan horse make possible their romance. Irina Baranova, Ballet Russe ballerina, and Reginald Owen, noted for many outstanding screen characterizations, have leading supporting roles. The most important character role is played by Charles Coburn, eminent stage actor. Lee Bowman and Lucile Watson complete the cast of featured supporting players.

JONAH: THE OUTREACH OF GOD'S LOVE

LESSON TEXT—Jonah 3 1-10; 4.10, 11.
GOLDEN TEXT—Salvation is of the Lord. —Jonah 2 9.

"There's a wideness in God's mercy
Like the wideness of the sea;
There's a kindness in His justice
Which is more than liberty.

"For the love of God is broader
Than the measure of man's mind;
And the heart of the Eternal
Is most wonderfully kind."

Such is the message of the book of Jonah. How appropriate it is to close our series of studies on the prophets with this declaration of God's love and mercy.

I. A Second Chance (3:1-3).

Jonah had been sent to Nineveh with a message from God, but, secretly wishing in his heart that this great city which was the enemy of Israel should be destroyed rather than repent and receive God's blessing (see 4:2), Jonah made an attempt to run away from God's commission. We know how God patiently dealt with him and now gave him a second chance to do His will.

How gracious God is "to continue to us . . . the privilege of service even when we seem to have sinned away our first chance, misused our endowments, and have by our very failure embarrassed His plans." Dr. J. Stuart Holden goes on to point out that only God gives a second chance. Nature does not; man seldom, if ever, gives his fellow who has failed a second opportunity. But God does. Praise His name!

There was also a second chance extended to Nineveh. God was not willing to bring judgment upon the city without another warning. Quoting Dr. Holden again: "I care not what is the history of failure, of shame, of sin which is behind you . . . I care not how close upon your heels are the hounds of accusation and condemnation which bay at you. I tell you that Jesus Christ is here . . . to give you a second chance, and that everything depends upon your attitude of acceptance or rejection of His proffered grace and mercy."

II. A Stirring Revival (3:4-10).

So great was the city that it would have taken Jonah three days to bring his message to the entire population (see v 3). He had only begun when, at the end of the first day, the city, from the ruler down to the humblest inhabitant, was in deep mourning and repentance for its sin.

Jonah, the man who had been brought back from a living death as a sign (Luke 11:29-32) to Nineveh that God was gracious to repentant sinners, pointed to the fact that though his message was one of condemnation (v. 4), they might expect God to be entreated of them (v. 9). He was (v. 10).

God has sent times of revival when whole cities—and even whole nations—have been turned from their sin. Such revivals have been occurring in recent years in various mission fields. Thousands of earnest Christians are praying now that such a revival may come again in our own land The writer knows where helpful literature along this line is available without cost. Let us pray and be faithful, and trust God to bring revival to the hearts of men.

III A Selfish Reaction (4:10, 11).

Jonah, instead of rejoicing in the repentance of Nineveh, showed his narrowness and selfishness by becoming angry (see 4:1). How petty and childish are the attitudes of men when contrasted with the mercy of God.

The Lord, dealing gently with Jonah, gave him a place of refuge and a gourd plant to shade him from the sun (4:5, 6). Then, to teach him a lesson, a worm was permitted to kill the gourd (v. 7). When Jonah was greatly concerned over the loss of the plant, God pointed out to him that it is wrong to be stirred up over the passing of material comfort and not to be concerned for the souls of men.

How many of those who poured out millions of dollars (and rightly so) for the relief of the harassed people of Finland, would give five cents to win them to Christ? Many who will give liberally of money, time and effort to the commendable work of flood or famine relief, will not so much as cross the road to talk to a neighbor about Christ. A farmer will sit up all night to care for a sick cow, but will he spend an hour or two on Sunday or some evening of the week in an effort to win his neighbor's boy (or his own boy) to Christ? These are pertinent and serious questions. What is our answer? God will hold us responsible.

A Prayer

O God, Who hast given to us the knowledge of right and wrong, and hast taught us that it is Thy will that we choose the right throughout our lives, give us grace to be loyal to the right as we see it, and faithful to the highest we know. Amen.

Patterns
SEWING CIRCLE

THIS dress has a beautiful line—slim-hipped, high-busted, exactly the silhouette in which women's sizes look best. And it's so simply designed! The bodice is fitted in with long darts above the waistline, and gathered just beneath the shoulders, where narrow ruffles add a soft, dressy touch, without any suggestion of width or weight. The paneled skirt flows into graceful fullness at the hem, accenting the narrow-hipped look.

Make this design (No. 1971-B) of small-figured print, flat crepe, georgette or chiffon, with decorative buttons down the bodice in the front. The plain v of the neckline invites all sorts of different jewelry and necklaces.

Barbara Bell Pattern No. 1971-B is designed for sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46. Size 36 requires 4½ yards of 39-inch material without nap. Send order to:

To remove whitewash from a ceiling, dissolve one pound of alum in one gallon of strong vinegar. Apply with brush, let soak in well and scrape and wash as usual.

Always keep flour in a warm, dry place. Damp flour will never make light cakes and pies.

Moisture in the refrigerator encourages the growth of bacteria, causing food to spoil. Wipe off all moisture inside the refrigerator and be careful to remove spilled foods.

For whiter mashed potatoes or boiled rice, add a pinch of cream of tartar to the cooking water.

Never serve food in a dish that is too large for amount of food served. It detracts from the appearance of your table.

Never leave sugar, raisins, currants or peel in paper bags. They all go moist and sticky very quickly.

coming to the Avery Theatre 7-8, Sunday and Monday, a designed for laugh purposes comedy of contemporary set- and circumstances, ensconces a novelist and a young doctor in apartment, unmarried, but rnalistically reported wed, and resents them as living so in tended matrimony for a period three weeks. It is indicated to audience that they sleep in arate rooms and the source of and situation comedy counted to envoke laughter is this en- ced dwelling together of a girl nous for her best seller about ppy spinisters and a doctor who ests career women. Loretta ung plays the man hating spini- and Ray Milland the doctor cast in his word.

PEDESTRIANS BEGIN TO OBSERVE TRAFFIC RULES BETTER

Mayor Grange reports that pedestrains are giving better cooperation in observing traffic rules than they did a couple of weeks ago. However, there are still quite a number who insist on taking chances by not crossing at the crossings. Most of these are older people, according to the Mayor.

Children are doing better and are using the crossings and watching the traffic better, says Grange.

Drivers are also cautioned not to park too near the fire hydrants. A Klemme business man appeared before the Mayor Monday morning for that violation of the rules

Complaints have also been registered that a very few business men are "hogging" parking spaces by driving their cars up town early in the evening and taking choice locations. It is suggested that the few who are doing this should either leave their cars at home, or park a couple of blocks away, so that customers can use these parking spaces.

Town officials, however, are pleased with the co-operation they have received the past week both by pedestrians and drivers. Check-ups will continue and consistent violators will probably have to be dealt with more strenuous'y if they fail to render co-operation.

FUTURE OF GOLD

"I have been doing a little thinking lately about what would happen to Uncle Sam's enormus pile of yellow metal down in the hills of Kentucky if the world under dictatorships went on a barter basis,

"The price tag on our gold reserves now reads $19,250,000,000 Yes — nineteen billion. United States has 77 per cent of the 25 billions of gold in the world France recently reported 2 billions in gold; Britian, 1 16 billions, and all other countries, 2.5 billions Last known figures for Germany were a bare 29 millions in gold and Italy, 193 millions The totalitarian governments are on a barter basis. They'd like nothing better than to let America wallow in its own gold hoard They'd count it good clean fun to see the world's 25 billions in inflated gold value smashed down to 25 million, or even 25 cents.

"The world financial picture is now crystal clear The democracies are tied to a gold basis and the dictatorships are married to the barter system for currency and trade. In a nazi Europe, Hitler would enjoy seeing the United States crack up financially

"When Italy went to war, the British pound plunged 19 cents to $3.53 on free trading and the French franc slumped to 1 99 cents —almost nothing. The mark and the lira were unshaken. At the same time Europe's flight gold is gushing into New York with every ship. The department of commerce reported 438 millions more came from Britian, Canada, South Africa, the Netherlands and Switzerland in May alone.

"It would be hard on American pocketbooks as well as on American pride, if Fort Knox became as absolete in world affairs as a Maginot line.

SILK TESTS MADE IN CALIFORNIA

San Joaquin Valley Farmers Considering Rubber Raising Too

FRESNO, CAL., Farmers of the fertile San Joaquin valley are considering possibilities of producing two new crops which might add millions of dollars in wealth each year to their income.

Production of silk in Tulare county as a major industry in competition with "King Cotton" is considered a distinct possibility.

The rubber producing plant guayule could be grown profitably in Kern county, provided the commercial price of rubber climbs to two or three times its present level, agricultural experts believe.

Addition of raw silk to the long list of diversified products raised commercially in the San Joaquin valley has been promised by two Armenian immigrants who have carried on experiments for several years.

Kansanjian of Yettem and Philip Avedigan of Dinuba announced they intended to propogate 80,000 mulberry trees to provide food for silkworms. Kansanjian, who became familiar with raw silk production in Armenia, has found that silkworms thrive in Tudare county. He has been carrying out his experiments in partnership with Avedigan on a small acreage near Yettem. They estimate they have about 1,000,000 silkworms now hatching.

Silkworms, eat only leaves of mulberry trees and grow for about six weeks before they spin the cocoons from which the raw silk is recovered.

Lewis A. Burtch, Kern county agricultural commissioner, said guayule was grown successfully in Kern county several year ago on the Hoover ranch near Wasco. Burtch pointed out, however, that despite favorable climate and weather conditioss, the costs of production in relation to the price were excessive.

He said rich agriculture land would be tied up for three years before a crop of guayule could be harvested with the process repeated for each crop.

Possible commercial production of guayule is being studied by the agricultural council of the Kern county Chamber of Commerce. Emory Gay Hoffman, secretary of the chamber, said apprehension that the European conflict would spread to affect the Dutch East Indies and other rubber producing areas and interfere seriously with importation of needed supplies of raw rubber in the United States has spurred interest in domestic production of rubber.

Klemme Creamery Wins Honors In Iowa State Brand Competition

ANNUAL REUNION IN HONOR OF IOWA PIONEER HELD

Lau Family Gathered At New Hampton To Honor Memory Of Christian Lau

Living relatives of Christian Lau assembled Sunday, June 30 at the fair grounds park, New Hampton, in honor of this frontiersman who emigrated from Germany to settle in Iowa 84 years ago.

He was the father of August C., Henry, William, Christ and Mart Lau, and Mrs. Wm. Greiman, Mrs. Wm. Buehlmeyer, Mrs. Wm. Huff, and Mrs. Henry Reusch.

This gathering was also in commemoration of the 76th homecoming of this Union soldier who served in the Civil War at the age of 33 and fought in that great battle of Gettysburg 77 years ago.

He was a resident of Klemme 46 years ago.

Two daughters and one son still survive. They are Mrs. Wm. Greiman, 79, Garner; Mrs. Henry Reusch, 74, South Hayhen, Michigan; and Mart Lau, 68, of Randolph, Minnesota.

Those present from Iowa points were Mason City, Klemme, Garner, Britt, Kanawha, Guttenberg, Garnavillo, Elkader, Webb, Edgewood, Manchester, Waterloo and Waterville.

Those from other points were Detroit and South Haven, Mich; and Chicago, Ill.

This was the third reunion of its kind and was well attended. Those present enjoyed the baskets of food brought by the ladies.

An electric loud speaker was set up on the grounds and several took part in the program which consisted of accordion solos by Mrs. Sam Harvey of Mason City; Mrs. Carl Swanson of Garner; and Billy Reusch, of Detroit, Mich., sang a solo. Hymns were sung by the entire group.

A five-piece orchestra by the Priebe family, of Waterloo, played several nice selections. Talks given by some of the old-timers were very interesting.

It was planned that next year this reunion will be held again somewhere in Minnesota.

Mr. and Mrs. Quentin Stille, accompanied by Cecil Blank, drove to Harlan, Iowa, last week where they visited a loom factory, and while there Mrs. Stille purchased a new rug weaving loom.

Mrs. Stille states that since she began making rugs, that she has turned out a total of 732 rugs, and has orders ahead for over 100 rugs.

Seventy-four Creameries In Contest At Mason City

KLEMME CREAMERY MANAGER WINS IOWA STATE BRAND MEDAL

Last Thursday the Iowa State Brand Creameries' plant in Mason City entertained over two thousand five hundred persons at a dairy luncheon. Buttermakers and creamery patrons from north Iowa were invited.

The buttermakers of the organization were greatly pleased to learn that large increases in sales and volume were registered the past year, and the dairy outlook is bright.

Outstanding items on the day's program included the election of directors of the oragnization and addresses by Prof. H. H. Kildee of Iowa State College, and Prof J. O. Christianson of the University of Minnesota.

Awards were given out to the ten high buttermakers among whom was Paul Mueller, manager of the Klemme Creamery who received one of the three silver medals awarded. These awards were presented to the buttermakers whose creameries had the highest average workmanship score for the past year. Mr. Mueller's score was 98.01. Workmanship consisted of such items as correctness in butter moisture content, correct salting and weighing of tubs, together with correct methods of working the butter.

Mr. Mueller's record can be considered outstanding as there were seventy-four creameries competing for honors.

COOLING OF CREAM IS DIFFICULT NOW

Hot summer days present farmers with a real problem in caring for cream on the farm, but if a few simple rules are observed, cream can be kept for several days without losing much of its quality, Ia. State College dairy industry men say.

In the first place, all utensils used in handling milk or cream should be thoroughly scalded each time after use. Rinsing in cold water is not sufficient. The milk should be carefully strained, using a strainer of not less than 16-quart capacity, and cotton trainer pads should be used only once. Strainer cloths aren't satisfactory.

Cooling the separated cream is a big job on many farms. In no case should the attempt be made to cool cream in the refrigerator. It should always be cooled in water first, since water cools forty-eight times as fast as air.

The cellar is not a cold enough place during the summer to keep cream. Furthermore, the absorbed flavors which usually come from storing cream in cellars is particularly objectionable and materially lowers the quality of butter made from the cream.

Another precaution to follow is to avoid mixing warm and cold cream. Stirring two or three times a day will insure rapid cooling and will give the cream good body. Cream should be delivered as frequently as possible.

INTOXICATED

When farmers living near the Claus Petersen farm near Harlan saw a car driving helter-skelter throubh the fields, paying no heed to fences or other obstacles, they called the sheriff, fearing the driver might be insane. He was intoxicated and was released after agreeing to pay for all damages.

JOB TEMPTED TO DOUBT GOD'S GOODNESS

LESSON TEXT—Job 2.1-13.
GOLDEN TEXT—In all this Job sinned not, nor charged God foolishly.—Job 1:22.

Poetry has in all ages been the language of the soul. Feelings beyond the reach of the choicest prose seem to pour forth unhindered through the poetic channel. That is one reason why Christian people find such a response in their own souls as they read the magnificent poetry of the Bible. For the next three months we are to be privileged to carry on a study of the poets of the Bible. None of us should miss a single lesson.

The book of Job deals with and solves the fundamental problem, "What is the meaning of the suffering of the righteous?" Our first lesson presents Satan as the great adversary and accuser of man, and reveals that man may successfully resist him by faith in God.

I. Satanic Accusation (vv. 1-5).

The lesson opens with a scene in heaven, where the angelic beings present themselves to give an account of their activities. Satan, too, is there as the adversary and accuser of men's souls. He had already, by God's permission and as a test of Job's faith, destroyed all of Job's property and taken from him his family (see Job 1:14-19), but he had not destroyed Job's trust in God (1:21).

Now Satan had a new charge; namely, that Job could bear the loss of his children and his riches, but if God would permit his own body to be afflicted, he would deny God. It is the familiar refuge of those who would lie about the servants of God to say, "He is in it for what he gets out of it." Those who use that lie do well to recognize the originator of their calumny; they are working with Satan when they thus hinder the Lord's work.

II. Spiritual Integrity (vv. 6-10).

The trial of Job was most severe, for only his life was spared. His affliction was evidently not only that of boils on his skin (which would have been bad enough), but a systemic condition which made his whole body sick and made him so repulsive as to be unfit to live with other people (see Job 7:1-5, 14, 15; 16:8; 19:17-20).

Not only did he suffer physically within an inch of his life, but he was subjected to the mental and spiritual torture of having the one who should have stood by him—his wife—urge him to renounce his faith in God and die. Many who have borne excruciating physical pain have broken down under spiritual cruelty, but Job still maintained his integrity.

Why God permitted him to suffer he did not yet understand, but he knew God and he was willing to take from His hand evil as well as good (v. 10) as long as His heavenly Father was in control. What a testimony!

III. Sympathetic Friendship (vv. 11-13).

His wife and neighbors had abandoned Job, and even the children of the street despised him (19:18), but he did have three friends. Thank God for friendship—not the fair weather kind, but the type that stands by in the hour of trouble. These friends apparently came from a distance (vv. 11, 12) and at some sacrifice of time, effort and money. Friendship that doesn't cost anything usually doesn't amount to anything.

Note the intelligent and sympathetic manner in which they shared his sorrow. They were themselves sorrowful (v. 12) and they sat with him, not saying a word. In the hour of deepest need words are futile and often only add to the sorrow, but how much it means in such an hour to have someone who will silently, and yet sympathetically, stand by. One could wish that his friends had continued as they began and not later have spoiled their comfort by many important sounding but foolish words which the Lord had to condemn in the serious words found in Job 42:7, 8.

We shall see the answer to the question regarding suffering in our lesson for July 21 as being that man might be brought to really know God and to see himself in the light of God's holiness. Thus, by victory through testing, man proves to himself and to his fellow men that God is worthy of our fullest confidence, that faith in Him will bring us through the deepest darkness and the severest trial.

Roots of Evil

To abolish evil its roots must be dug up and exposed in the sunlight, where they will wither and perish. These roots thrive underground and are cancerous.

No More Vanity

Ye shall see no more vanity, nor divine divinations; for I will deliver my people out of your hand; and ye shall know that I am the Lord.—Ezekiel 13:23

PATTERN SEWING CIRCLE DEPARTMENT

USE this one inspired pattern to make your whole outdoor play wardrobe! Think what a convenience and saving that will be! Pattern No. 1949-B includes a sports shirt with convertible collar, a double swing skirt, and shorts and slacks that are cut the same way—only the slacks, of course, go to greater length, clear down to your instep, in fact. So you see by making all three parts of this generous pattern, you'll be smartly equipped for active sports and looking on as a spectator while vacationing. They are all exceptionally well-cut and they fit beautifully as sports things, however casual-looking, simply must be.

Denim, flannel, sharkskin, gingham and sailcloth are excellent, style-right materials for this design. You'll find it easy to make, guided by the step-by-step sew chart.

Barbara Bell Pattern No. 1949-B is designed for sizes 11, 13, 15, 17 and 19. Corresponding bust measurements 29, 31, 33, 35 and 37. Size 13 (31) requires 6¼ yards of 35-inch material for suit with shorts; 7¼ yards for suit with slacks; 2¾ yards for skirt. Send order to:

HOW TO SEW

by Ruth Wyeth Spears

HERE is Betsy again — that clever girl in Sewing Book 3, who streamlined an old iron bed. In her house there was an enormous kitchen and her mother hated big kitchens. So, a partition was used to divide it into two rooms. The half with a door into the front hall was for Betsy to entertain her own special friends.

The old linoleum was painted dark green. All the walls were painted cream and then pink stripes were painted on the new wall. The neat and efficient cot cover is cream chintz with pink roses and green leaves. The sides of the pad, the two end cushions and the center cushion are green, lighter than the floor. The cut-down table with the tin tray on top is painted with the green floor paint with some of the cream wall color added. Next week Betsy's mother solves another home decorating problem.

NOTE: Betsy is now making a hooked rug for her new sitting room from directions in the Sewing Book 5. It also contains directions for streamlining an old couch; rockers; dining room chairs and other "attic magic." Send name, address and 10 cents in coin to cover cost and mailing. Send order to:

TOO MUCH WATER SPOILS CONCRETE

Dirty Gravel Is Also Common Concrete Failure Cause On Farms

Using dirty gravel and pouring too much water in the "mix" are mistakes which cost Iowa farmers thousands of dollars every year in inferior homemade concrete, declares Henry Giese, Iowa State College agricultural engineer.

"The strength of the cement-water paste used determines the strength of the finished concrete thinning the paste to make it go further is 'fatal.'"

"When the gravel or other aggregate used is fine, more paste--not thinner paste - must be added to the mix," he says. "The proportion of water to cement is more important than the proportion of cement to aggregate."

Measure Carefully

Concrete for most farm construction should contain a total of 6 gallons of water per sack of cement, according Giese, but since sand is usually damp, 5 gallons of water per sack are usually sufficient to fill this requirement.

When a full sack isn't being used, or another method of figuring is desired, Giese suggests the two-third formula.

Under this plan, the amount of water, cement, sand and gravel are measured by the pail. For each pail-ful of cement, use two-thirds of a pail of water, 2 pails of sand and 3 pails of gravel. When the sand is quite wet, it may be necessary to cut the amount of water to half a pail, and when the sand is bone dry, to increase it to three-fourths of a pail.

When gravel contains too much organic matter, the cement often fails to "set" properly, Giese warns And when it contains clay, the paste cannot get a good grip on the pebbles or grains of sand. Gravel taken from stream beds often contains tannis acid, resulting from decomposition of leaves. This also is undesirable.

Here's Clay Test

"Sand or gravel containing a lot of clay or organic matter should be discarded in favor of clean material or washed if used at all," Giese says.

To determine the fitness of gravel for concrete mixing, the standard procedure is to fill a pint jar with 2 inches of sand, fill with water, shake and allow to settle. If there is more than one-eighth of an inch of clay in the sand after it settles, the gravel is unfit for use unless washed.

"There are really five important factors in making concrete which is sufficiently durable and strong," Giese concludes. "These are good material, correct proportions and proper mixing, placing and curing Neglect of any one of these factors may result in poor quality concrete"

After strawberries are harvested, the leaves of the old plants should be mowed, raked up along with the mulch and burned This practice kills the strawberry leaf roller and destroys strawberry leaf spot.

SOME PLANTER

For 40 years running, Ralph Story, Anamosa farmer, has been using the same corn planter that he planted his fields with this spring The planter has averaged about 80 acres of planting a year and has done a good, steady job of planting

A study made by Iowa State College extension home management specialists reveals that farm families don't use extra money to "splurge" Out of 188 farm families the 30 having the highest incomes averaged $4,000 more income, but spent only $722 more than the low income group. In the higher income families it was found that living expenditures did not increase in the same proportion as income and the greatest increase in family expense was for house repair and improvements.

CLEAN OLD GRAIN OUT WELL BEFORE HARVEST

Weevils, sawtoothed beetles and other insects present in old grain may cause serious damage to the new crop unless the granary is thoroughly cleaned before harvest, warns Harold Gunderson, Iowa State College extension entomologist.

Many supplies of hold-over grain particularly old corn, are infested with storage insects, Gunderson says.

To keep the pest from spreading to grain which soon will be stored he suggests removing old grains from the bins, sweeping out the entire granary, and using a commercial fly spray. Spraying the granary every other day for a week after it is cleaned will kill all stages of stored grain insects still present.

Gunderon suggests airing out the granary for several days to remove fly spray odor before new grain is binned.

Six Serious Situations Face America If Hitler Is Completely Victorious

By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT ALLEN
(Released by Western Newspaper Union)

WASHINGTON. — The authors of this column have received many inquiries as to whether, in their opinion, the United States will be dragged into the war. Obviously, this is a question extremely difficult to answer.

However, we have endeavored to set forth below the circumstances which are almost certain to exist after Hitler is completely victorious in Europe as it now seems he will be.

SITUATION NO. 1 is the strong probability that there will be no lenient peace. France and England, if conquered, will be made to feel the conqueror's heel.

One reason for this is that Hitler, himself, knows how easy it is to re-arm if the conquered nation is given half a chance.

It may be that his friend the duke of Windsor, as reported since the duke left his liaison post with the British army, will be reinstated on the throne of England, but if so he will be a mere puppet.

It is important to note that the United States has leaned heavily, though indirectly, upon the British fleet for this protection.

SITUATION NO. 2 will be a Nazi search for raw materials. They will get some when they take France and England, but not nearly enough. France probably will cling to her most important areas in Africa, and may even set up a new government there. Britain should be able to keep enough of her fleet to make it difficult to penetrate the Red sea to India. Japan will take Singapore and the Dutch East Indies, thereby cutting off the United States from vital tin and rubber.

Meanwhile, the richest, least populated, weakest continent in the world lies just a short airplane hop across the South Atlantic, protected only by a century-old shibboleth called the Monroe Doctrine.

SITUATION NO. 3 will be local Nazi governments in Latin America.

Carlos Davila, former president of Chile and now exiled in the United States, long ago counseled the state department that if Hitler ever was victorious in Europe, South American governments would emulate him. Davila is one of the shrewdest statesmen South America has ever developed, and already the speech of Brazilian President Vargas, inferentially approving Italy's stab-in-back, clearly shows that Davila was right.

Vargas has received several millions from Roosevelt's Export-Import bank, entertained Roosevelt personally during his good-will trip to South America, sells 70 per cent of Brazil's coffee crop to the United States.

Brazil is this country's traditionally closest friend, turned over its fleet to the U. S. A. during the Spanish-American war and during the World war.

But today, 50 per cent of the Brazilian army is Nazi, and if Vargas had not approved Italy's war entry he might have been out of power.

Similar Nazi sentiment exists in Uruguay, Ecuador, Peru and Chile. For example, the state department has just received a confidential telegram that 6,000 Chilean Nazis actually are under arms.

SITUATION NO. 4 which is all-important. Latin American nations can set up local Nazi governments without violating the Monroe Doctrine. Once those governments are established, they can invite German and Italian military advisers or police forces, grant them naval and air bases. And if the United States attempts to stop this, it will have to oppose the local Latin American government as well as Nazi Germany and Fascist Italy, both of which have large groups of immigrants in South America.

If, for instance, the United States should send armed forces to Brazil to prevent a German naval base from being established there, other Latin American nations again might raise the cry of "Yankee imperialism."

The Latins are clannish, and we might easily find the entire continent up in arms against us, siding with the Nazis from whom we are defending them.

SITUATION NO. 5 is a squeeze play on trade.

The most important thing to remember about Europe economically is that Hitler today controls the biggest market in the world Not only Germany, but Austria, Czecho Slovakia, Norway, Denmark, Holland and Belgium must order goods through his barter system.

In other words, if Brazil wants to sell coffee to this area, or Argentina wants to sell meat, or Ecuador wants to sell cocoa, they must barter with Hitler.

Even on a minor scale before the war, we have seen that this leads to friction, trade reprisals, national ill-will. It plants fertile seeds for war.

Imagine the resentment of the southern states if Hitler, as conqueror of England, required all Lancashire's textile mills to buy cotton from Brazil and Peru. It would almost bankrupt the South.

SITUATION NO. 6 is the strong likelihood that all these situations will descend upon us soon. Hitler has shown that he knows time is of the essence. He has been willing to sacrifice a million men—perhaps more—on the Western front because he knows if the war lasts longer than September 1, his raw materials won't last.

Also he knows that the United States is in a preparedness race, and that within another 15 months we will be in a far stronger position to defend the Western himisphere. Today, on the other hand, he knows we are pitifully weak.

Therefore, it is more than likely that he will move fast. Nazi propaganda and undercover movements in South America already indicate this. Local Nazi uprisings are sure to take place.

And with Nazi-Fascist air lines already operating all over the country, it would be a simple matter for a bomb-laden Nazi plane to slip over the Panama canal. Army officers say it would even be difficult for them to know whether it was a friendly Pan-American plane, and they might not fire at it.

Dictators have shown that they know how to work together, and you can be sure that when and if Japan, Germany and Italy get ready to put the squeeze on the United States, they will have worked out their cooperation to the last T. We will be squeezed from both the Atlantic and the Pacific and perhaps from South America.

In other words, war for the United States depends largely upon whether or not we are going to defend or abandon the Monroe Doctrine.

DETROIT—Where Auto Plants Make Tanks—Where Ford Would Make 1,000 Planes a Day—Where Rooms Are at Premium, and Men Wear Caps, and Roads Are Plentiful, and Where the Canadian Border Makes People War Conscious.

Going Places with Cornelius Vanderbilt

INTO DETROIT where automotive plants have been turning out tanks, mechanized caissons, infantry trucks and a dozen other things for the army at top speed for some time. Back in February when I was last here some of the big factories were working on army trial orders even then. Their proving grounds were cluttered with weird objects bobbing around, rolling over and over, climbing steep banks and even fording rivers.

Four years ago out in Manchukuo I saw Japanese army tanks doing the same thing; and that summer while crossing Russia, I remember how amazed I was near Chita to see tanks "swimming" a river. I reported this to the U. S. army intelligence corps in Washington upon my return and they pooh-poohed the idea!

Yet while covering the Soviet army maneuvers near Otpor in Siberia that same year I had seen more than 4,000 men dropped out of airplanes by parachutes. Returning to Detroit in the fall I told Bill Stout about it. Stout is the father of Henry Ford's Stout-Metal-Plane, and is the grandfather of all transport ships in this country today. Stout said it could be done, but he doubted the feasibility of this maneuver. Asked me how much Vodka I had been drinking when I saw the feat!

THERE WAS an interesting article in the Saturday Evening Post recently asking if Hitler had been training troops for mechanical warfare in Russia for the past six years. The article was well worth reading. Personally I think he has. Moreover, I think during the recent winter months he has had his able technicians advising with the Soviet, and is being reinforced by the U. S. S. R. at this very moment.

Thus Henry Ford's prognostication, the end of May that his company could turn out 1,000 planes of one-design a day, if needed, is all the more interesting. Some will doubt Ford's ability to do this. During the last war Ford did, however, turn out one sub-chaser a day and one eagle-boat a day—a then almost inconceivable feat. And he has turned out as many as 10 000 of his cars daily, so seemingly nothing is impossible for the man

Last summer I noted the German infantry was riding in Ford touring cars. Five men to a car—two in the front seat, three in the rear They had their guns stacked behind the front seat. Every other car towed a field piece, and many of these field pieces, according to my notes, were stamped "made in USA."

Also in case we forget too rapidly Ford had assembly plants in the Soviet, in Holland, in Germany and in Italy I believe.

ACROSS THE RIVER from Detroit lies Windsor, a semi-sleepy Canadian city. Here are many of the assembly plants of American manufacturers with goods to sell in the Dominion. Odd that within a mile everything should be so entirely different. Some say we are not close enough to a foreign border in the United States to realize what it must be to live in some of the European countries today. If you live in Detroit you are conscious of the war, if you take an outing in Canada you are doubly so.

DETROIT IS AGAIN a busy metropolis. The streets are filled with people; shops crowded; hotel lobbies overflowing. It's as difficult to get a room overnight in Detroit as it is in Washngton, D. C., today.

Of all of our big industrial cities Detroit and Pittsburgh are the most foreign looking. Half-closing my eyes I can imagine myself in the German Ruhr, in the erstwhile Belgian Ardennes, in the Russian Ukraine, in the Polish Caucasians. The men all wear caps. They tell me there are more caps sold in these two cities than in all of the rest of the United States combined. Most of the women cover their heads with shawls or bandanas.

During the recent recession these cities were the most morbid of the nation. The largest government relief projects were in operation here. But today the scene has changed completely. Boom-times are back with a bang. And it looks as if they are here to stay for awhile.

MICHIGAN CITIES and towns along with probably a great many others throughout the nation are now forming Home Guard outfits in great haste. Gun clubs are drilling once or twice weekly at Skeet, which is a mild form of Parachutist interference. Practically every American in this region goes duck-hunting, deer-hunting once or twice a year. Therefore, there are hundreds of thousands of good shots. It is doubtful if Hitler should invade this continent; but if he does Michigan at least will not be caught unawares.

UP AT PONTIAC, Mich., where many General Motors products are produced, the rumor is that gas masks are coming off the belts. Some wiseacres will tell you we will be able to supply half the nation with masks before 1941. Yet if Hitler is really using his "Paralysis Gas" as some foreign correspondents claim he is, one wonders if our military masks will do the trick too.

THESE MICHIGAN INDUSTRIAL CITIES are connected by ribbons of cement, in a veritable hub-like fashion. On them there is a consfant flow of trucks, cars, pedestrians. Tiny lakes honeycomb the countryside and are the mecca for fishermen. Near them bait is sold by enterprising youngsters. One section up here is undergoing a "bait-war." For miles along each side of the highway, signs read "Crawlers, Hoppers, Worms and Gliders—2 bits a dozen.

TRAILERS, house-cars, land-yachts fill the Michigan camps. For awhile the vogue of the rolling-home went out of existence, but it is back again with a bang.

Many are homemade. Others are more fancy They sell all the way from $400 to $1,000, and are occupied by some of the most amazing people I have ever had the good fortune to meet.

For nine years now I have been an ardent trailerite myself. I have twice encircled the world in my own land-yacht; and some of the most interesting days I can remember have been consumed in cruising the highways and byways of the world thus. In this country my yearly mileage has been in excess of 75,000.

FIFTH COLUMN 'GUNS' IN U. S.

Attorney General Bob Jackson's plea for a federal law requiring registration of all privately owned firearms had more behind it than he disclosed. Inside fact is that this constitutes one of the most serious problems facing the government in its war against fifth columns.

Following the World war, one armament company alone disposed of 15,000 "Tommy" guns to private purchasers after trying unsuccessfully to sell them to the army About 10,000 of these deadly weapons are "unaccounted for." How many are in the hands of potential fifth columnists the government, under existing laws, has no way of knowing. Jackson's proposed statute would provide the power to find out.

Another unmentioned factor troubling officials is the tremendous increase in the sale of guns and ammunition in the last two years. Tax collections by the internal revenue bureau give the following figures on this astounding traffic in our "peaceful" country:

Total sale of taxed firearms, rifles, shotguns, pistols, revolvers, to private persons in 1938—$24,959,048; in 1939—$36,010,684.

In the past three years these sales reached the amazing total of $97,403,730—which is almost one-fourth of the army's 1937 appropriation. It is also vastly in excess of average sales for sporting purposes and law enforcement.

Note—The U. S. is far behind other powers in regulating firearms. England, France, Germany, Italy, Japan all have drastic laws on the private possession of weapons. The national firearms act of 1934 imposed a limited regulation on the sale of machine-guns and sawed-off shotguns by requiring manufacturers, dealers and pawnbrokers to register sales and transfers. But the many thousands of these lethal weapons sold before 1934 still are unaccounted for.

OIL TO ITALY

Italy's entrance into the war has at least one harmful effect upon her ally, Germany. It means the end of U. S. oil shipments to Italian ports for trans-shipment to Germany.

These shipments, especially of lubricating oils, have been heavy since the first month of the war. With Italy at war, however, U. S. ships are barred.

This will stimulate Axis efforts to open up oil resources in the Near East, and Italy is sure to make a drive for the British and French oil fields in Iraq. Or getting through the Suez canal, she will strike at the oil fields of Iran, under control of the Anglo-Iranian company.

Meanwhile British oil shipments from these sources will be diverted from the Mediterranean route, and the result probably will be a heavy increase of U. S. oil shipments to Britain and France.

APPEASING MUSSOLINI

Allied and Roosevelt diplomacy struggled behind the scenes until almost the last minute to keep Mussolini out of war.

It was on a Monday that the Italian dictator shouted his hoarse-voiced proclamation of war. And as late as the preceding Saturday, the French were still dickering with him At that time they offered him the island of Corsica, birthplace of Napoleon, as well as the important African colony of Tunisia, plus French Somaliland with its Red Sea port of Djibuti.

But Mussolini wanted more.

Real fact probably was that he could not afford to antagonize Hitler by failing to declare war. A Nazi victory looked too certain, in which case Mussolini would have been left facing the triumphant and resentful hordes of Nazi Germany just across the Brenner pass.

Note—A lot of people think Mussolini will face an aggressive Nazi army anyway

ROOSEVELT'S MOVES

President Roosevelt came to realize that nothing counted with Mussolini except (1) what he was going to get in return for keeping the peace; and (2) whether he was going to be on the winning side

Accordingly, the last week's announcements from the White House that the United States was selling army and navy planes direct to the allies, plus surplus army equipment, was calculated to have a double effect One was the actual help it would give the allies The other was the hope that Mussolini would be influenced by the fact that the United States was talking in deeds, not mere words, and that these deeds might turn an allied victory.

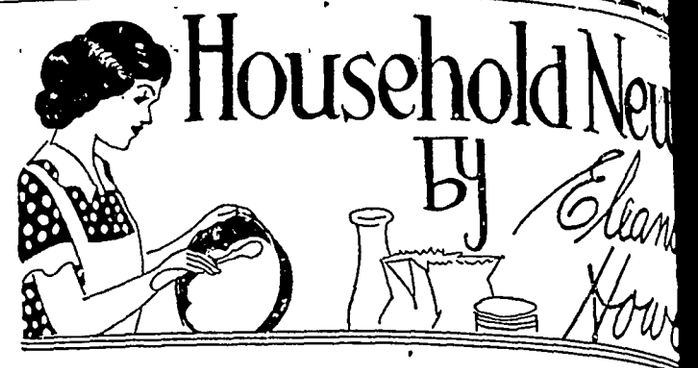
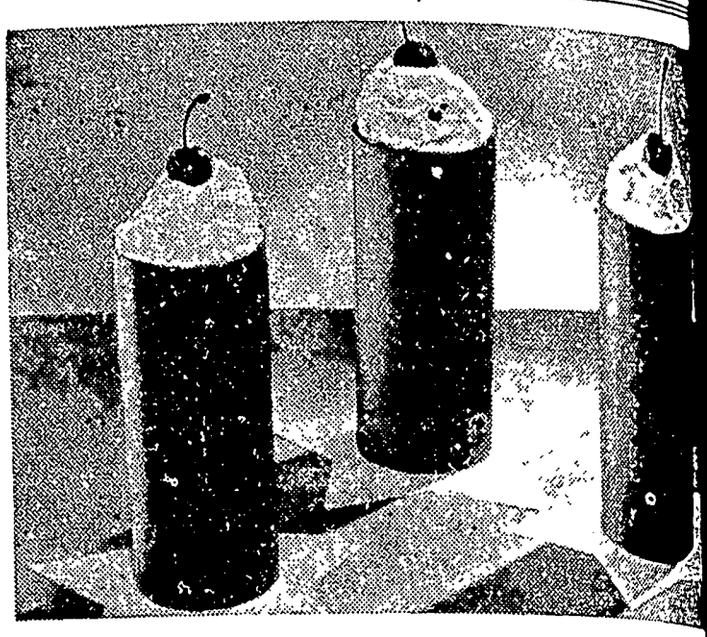
POLITICAL CHAFF

One of Alf Landon's hardest jobs is scotching booms for himself. Practically every day, by long distance phone or telegraph, he has to nip the plan of some admirer to start a drive for him.

Following reports that Communist and Nazi agents are working along the Mexican-U. S. border, Senator Josh Lee of Oklahoma proposed construction of a series of forts, each within sight of the next, to shoot any foreign agent seen sneaking into the U. S.





A 'SAFE AND SANE' PARTY
(See Recipes Below)

Why not plan a party for the Fourth of July, to keep the youngsters in the family happy and out of mischief? It might be a party on the porch or in the yard—or a picnic in the country, if you prefer it. Make it a family affair, or invite a youthful guest or two to keep your own children company.

Whatever type of party you plan, make it a festive affair—with gay table decorations (if refreshments are being served at home), very special "Party foods" and patriotic party favors, too. Gaily colored paper table cloths and napkins are a must, and they do save work! And be sure to provide balloons and snap crackers, or noisemakers of another kind.

Plan definite entertainment, with an active game or two to permit the children to use up excess energy, and a "pencil and paper" or guessing game to play when a little rest is in order. Pencil and paper games such as these two might be used—and you'll find that adults as well as young people enjoy them.

Jumbled Names.

Prepare for each player a typed or mimeographed copy of the following list of scrambled letters each of which, when unscrambled, spells the name of a famous American. To get an idea of what the game is like, why not try your own luck with the list before looking at the answers?

Parfait glasses full of Peppermint Stick ice cream, camouflaged in red paper cylinders to look like giant firecrackers, are amusing for a Fourth of July dessert. Top the ice cream with a cherry, with the stem left on to form the fire-cracker wick. And serve Pinwheel Cookies to complete the "fireworks dessert."

Caesar Rodney Had Not Made His Heroic Ride, Americans Might Not Now Be Celebrating the Fourth of July!

Rodney's Modest Story.

So it took courage of the highest kind for him to set out upon the hasty 80-mile trip to Philadelphia, because the exertions of such a journey might easily cause his death. Apparently he never thought of that—his only thought was that his presence was needed in the Continental Congress where a momentous decision was about to be made. In the letter (reproduced above) which he wrote after completing his journey, he makes little mention of the hardships of that journey. It says:

Philad.a July the 4th. 1776

Sir:

In have inclosed you a summons directed to the Sheriff to (Call) Summon the Members for our County to meet in Assembly at Newcastle on the 22d. day of this Instant which I hope you will have put into his hands as soon as possible after it comes to Yours—I arrived in Congress tho Detained by Thunder and Rain, time enough to give my Voice in the matter of Independence—It is now determined by the Thirteen United Colonies without even one dissenting Colony—We have now got through with the whole of the Declaration, and ordered it to be printed so that you will soon have the pleasure of seeing it—Hand-bills of it will be printed, and sent to the Armies, Cities, County Towns etc to be published or rather proclaimed in form.—Don't neglect to attend closely and carefully to my Harvest and You'll oblige

CAESAR RODNEY

Being "detained by Thunder and Rain" was probably the least of his difficulties, for we know by contemporary accounts that the weather was extremely hot and the necessity for haste must have taken a heavy toll of the energies of both man and beast. Where Rodney stopped for the rest and food that was absolutely necessary for both is unknown but since he did not arrive in Philadelphia until the morning of July 4, it is evident that he must have paused somewhere along the way for a brief breathing spell for his horse and a few moments of relaxation from the saddle for himself.

Caesar Rodney

Meanwhile Jefferson, John Adams and Benjamin Franklin had drafted the Declaration of Independence and the final vote on it was set for the morning of July 4. It is not difficult to imagine the anxiety of McKean as the hour for the congress to assemble drew near. Would Rodney arrive in time to support him in casting Delaware's vote for independence? He hoped that he would but he could not be sure.

According to one account, McKean was striding up and down the brick walk outside Independence hall after the other members of the congress had filed in when he saw a horseman speeding along the dusty street toward him. A moment later this rider drew up in front of the hall and, as he swung wearily down from the saddle, McKean recognized the dust-covered, grimy-faced man as Caesar Rodney.

There was a brief handclasp, then the two men entered the hall, Rodney still "booted and spurred and travel-stained." A few minutes later the roll call on the adoption of the Declaration of Independence began. It started with New Hampshire, the most northerly of the colonies, and proceeded through Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, (New York was passed for the time being, although her delegates were favorable) to Pennsylvania.

The Crucial Vote.

So far the vote of these colonies has been for adoption of the Declaration. The Pennsylvania delegation is divided but by a vote of three to two her voice speaks for independence. Then comes the crucial vote of Delaware.

As was expected McKean votes in favor of adoption of the Declaration and Read votes against. When Rodney's name is called, some of the delegates turn in surprise—it is the first intimation they have of his return. They know how important his vote is, so they hang on his words. Those words made such an indelible impression upon some of them, among them McKean, that they remembered them for years afterwards. He said:

"As I believe the voice of my constituents and of all sensible and honest men is in favor of independence, my own judgment concurs with them, I vote for independence."

So Caesar Rodney cast the deciding vote for Delaware and Delaware's vote was an all-important one. The rest was a foregone conclusion. Delegates from the remainder of the colonies also voted for the charter of liberty and thus the Declaration of Independence was adopted. So Caesar Rodney's heroic ride had not been in vain. Had he not made it, July 4 might not have been the important date that it is—in the history of the United States and of the whole world!

But his fame does not rest entirely upon this one act. Eleven years earlier he had been a member of the Stamp Act congress which met in New York to protest against the acts of parliament which were to lead eventually to the Revolution.

Rodney was among those who urged the appointment of George Washington as commander-in-chief of the Continental army and he became one of Washington's most valued friends. He entered the war as a brigadier-general of the Delaware militia, was with Washington at the Battle of Trenton and despite the ravages of cancer, served throughout the Revolution. He came out of the war a major-general and lived to see the country win the freedom for which he had cast his historic vote. He died at Poplar Grove, Delaware, June 29, 1784

By VIRGINIA VALE
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

WHEN you see Paramount's version of Joseph Conrad's "Victory" (directed by John Cromwell, co-starring Frederic March and Betty Field), you'll see some of the most-traveled film ever shown. Scenes were shot in Sourbaya, on the island of Java, in the Dutch East Indies; then the cans of film were transported by train, native boat, and finally by Chinese air line to Hong Kong. A Pan-American clipper flew it to Manila, and there it stayed; so many passengers were waiting to take the clipper home that there was no room for part of a movie.

It came along on the next scheduled flight. Meanwhile the cast was working at Baldwin lake. The scenes shot in the actual location of the story will be slipped in with the ones shot on the American location—and it won't be surprising if the Baldwin lake shots are the more convincing.

More than 100 boys are being paid for having the time of their lives; they're portraying real-life cadets in Columbia's "Military Academy," and much of the action calls for them to disport themselves on the track and football field of a local military academy. They sprint, put the shot, pole-vault—and the checks come rolling in. Tommy Kelly, Bobby Jordan, David Holt and Jackie Searl are in the cast.

Four-year-old Dickie Lyon, son of Bebe Daniels and Ben Lyon, (and don't tell me that you don't remember those two picture stars!) is worried. He's working in "The Howards of Virginia," and doesn't want his parents to find it out.

"They told me pictures was bad," he declares.

Bebe and Ben have been starring in a stage play in London, and they sent the boy back to California to live with his grandmother several months ago, because of the war. Frank Lloyd, who's directing "The Howards of Virginia," persuaded Mrs. Daniels to let Dickie take the role of the young son of Cary Grant and Martha Scott, and Dickie is doing remarkably well—except that he's worried. He's afraid of what his mother will think when she sees him on the screen.

"Maybe she won't like it," he says, ominously.

But Lloyd's not anxious. Some time ago he told Bebe that little Dickie was a good picture prospect, and she said, "I'd trust him with you."

Uncle Ezra (Pat Barrett) of radio's National Barn Dance is highly enthusiastic over making movies in Hollywood, but the most difficult thing he had to adjust himself to was the delay in starting. He recently returned to Chicago from the cinema city after making "Coming 'Round the Mountain" with Bob Burns; later he'll go back to Paramount and do two more.

ODDS AND ENDS—Gary Cooper has a photograph of his two-year-old daughter, Mary, encased in the dashboard of his car . . . Agnes Moorehead used a train and three planes in a frantic effort to get to New York from Milwaukee for a "Big Sister" broadcast, landed in Washington, and had to give up; when she found the New York plane grounded in Milwaukee because of bad weather, she flew to Cleveland, then to Pittsburgh, then to Washington, only to find that there wasn't enough time left to reach New York for the broadcast . . . Virginia Dale and Lillian Cornell, whom you've seen or perhaps will see in "Buck Benny Rides Again," will supply the feminine interest in "Touchdown," with Wayne Morris.

Frances Langford finished a broadcast, then drove 700 miles to the Navajo Indian reservation in Arizona to spend her second wedding anniversary with her husband, Jon Hall, who's starring in "Kit Carson," an Edward Small production.

There are 50,000 Navajo Indians on the reservation, but the role of Indian chief went to Al Kikumi, a full-blooded Hawaiian. After numerous tests Producer Small came to the conclusion that Kikumi looks more like an Indian chief than any of the Indians do.

"We spent one night at this place. The following day we took a special train to Matonuska and Palmer where a bus met us and showed and explained to us the colony or government farm project. In 1935, one hundred and ninety-seven (197) families were brought up here from Wisconsin, Minnesota and other states. 120 families still remain and have cleared some of the land and built homes. The entire valley which is about 30 miles long and 30 miles wide, is covered with trees and brush. Their small grain was about one to two inches high Potatoes and root crops seem to grow well. I cannot go into detail about this, it would make the letter too long."

"We reached Curry in the evening where the train stops overnight. It is just a large hotel and 8 dwellings. The following morning at 8 a. m. we were on our way to McKinley Park. The train stops at the Park Hotel for lunch (it was a feast), the price is $1 00"

"Three passengers besides myself stopped here for a trip into the park, to Camp Eibson. The park bus met us at the station and at 2 p. m. we were on our way Its a distance of 66 miles and a very beautiful drive. The road is very steep and winding. Only expert and experienced drivers drive here. Wild flowers grow in great profusion along the roadsides, almost amid the snow. We passed some snow along the road and the mountain tops are still covered with snow. We saw an abundance of wild game Great herds of Caribon, and Mountain Goats, a Moose. a silver and red fox, birds, eagles an dan eagle's nest far up on the mountain side on a large rock. A grizzley bar came into camp at night, trying to take the meat out of the cache. Food caches are built on stilts to keep the wild animals from stealing it. We saw the camp dogs, 39 huskies, valued at $100 00 and up for each dog. They are kept in kennels in the summer Some were pure white Siberien, others almost black, some black and white, all very beautiful and friendly dogs. We spent one night at Camp Eibson, it rained all night and we failed to see Mt. McKinley. We all were dissappointed, but it is only one of the many things I have not seen. We came to Fairbanks Sunday. We will spend two days and three nights here. Fairbanks lies in a valley and a rich gold mining district. This afternoon our tour company takes us out to the mines and the School of Mines."

"At the beginning of this letter I spoke of an ariel flight we planned to take. This is the following morning and we have taken the flight. The air service people called for us at 11:30 p. m. We flew for a distance of fifteen miles, towards the setting sun, to an altitude of 7,000 feet. Up there in the blue haze, we saw a huge ball of very red fire. It dipped into the horizon and then grew brighter as it began to rise again. It was the most beautiful sight I have ever seen and ever expect to see again. We reached our hotel shortly after midnight and it was still broad day-light. The sun had set at 10:48 p. m. I stayed in the hotel lobby and waited for it to rise again at 1 40 a. m. I saw it's rays coming up over the mountains, a small cloud hung over it. At two o'clock it came up over the cloud. It shimmered and danced as it grew brighter and brighter. I watched it until 2:30 a. m. when it slowly moved eastward. This morning the sky is covered with clouds and I am happy to think I have had the opportunity to see the Mid-Night Sun. A sight I may never see again."

"I shall mail this letter here at Fairbanks in order that you may know its authenic. If you should anything in it that you think may be of interest to your readers, you may publish as much or as little as you wish. Tomorrow we leave Fairbanks for Valdez, over the Richardson Highway, a two-day trip by auto bus, a beautiful drive. From Valdez we take the boat back to Seattle."

Frieda Schuldt"

BEIER-SCHLEI RE-UNION HELD AT THE KLEMME PARK, SUNDAY P. M.

These Families Among the First to Settle In Hancock County

The Beier-Schlei re-union was held m Klemme Park, Sunday, July, 7th

This was the first one of its kind to held and over fifty members of the Beier and Schlei families attended.

The Beier and Schlei families were among the first settlers in Hancock County. Both families came here from Elkport, Iowa, in Clayton County.

In 1875, Mr. Beier, Mr. Schlei, Mr. Suckow and Mr. Schwichtenberg came out to Hancock County end each contracted one-quarter section of land with Rudolph Liegenbaum, who was the land agent at that time

Then in 1877, the Beier family came and settled here on the same farm where Mr. and Mrs. Emil Beier now live In 1879, the Schlei family came and settled on the farm where Alfred Schlei now lives At that time land sold from $1 25 to $3.50 per acre.

The land was not divided by fences The sections were surveyed by the government and a wooden stake was set at each corner of the section.

The sod was broken by a wood beam walking plow and the grain was cut with a self-rake or marsh harvester and bound by hand.

Thrashing was done with horse-power machines and took from two to three months to finish.

In those days, wheat was the main crop and corn and oats were raised for feeding purposes. Wheat was milled at Ft. Dodge, Amsterdam and Porter Siding. Grain was ground at Portland. Garner was the nearest town. There were no roads but only trails on higher ground, and the farmers went to town once a week in a lumber wagon which was the most popular means of conveyance.

The only railroad at this time was the Milwaukee and it only went west as far as Algona.

Schools were built wherever the settlers lived closest. These were also used for religious services.

The Beier and Schlei families lived as neighbors in Clayton County, and when they moved to Hancock County, they again lived on adjoining farms. Mrs. Will Beier Sr. was a sister of Fred Schlei Sr.

Among those who attended are as follows: Henry C. Beier of Beltrami, Minn.; Mr. and Mrs. Ed R. Schlei and Marold of Fenton; Mrs Ida Ridder of Klemme; Mr. and Mrs. Emil Beier, Garner; Mr. and Mrs. Ben Ridder, Ruth and Elwyn, Britt; Mr. and Mrs. Harold Ridder, Nora Springs; and Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Schlei of Fenton.

Mr. and Mrs. Will Ridder and chidren of Waterloo; Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Haefner, Gloria and Margaret, Britt; Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Cook, Marian and Imogene, and Fred Beier of Kanawha; Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Josten and Marcille of Goodell; Novella and Ruth Beier and Walter Kalm of Mason City; Mr. and Mrs. Milton Wisebrod, Marlene and Maynard, Fenton; and Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Wiesbrod and Ethel of Fentno.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Ward and Chester, Klemme; Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Beier, Goodell; Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Kulphers and Gladys and Lydia Beier of Waterloo; Walter Ridder, Britt; and Kermit and Melvin Schlei of Klemme.

It was decided that this gathering was going to be held again the first Sunday after the Fourth of July next year.

FIRE DEPARTMENT CALLED TO BLAZE AT LARSON STATION

The Klemme Fire Department answered a call shortly after noon Monday when a blaze was discovered at the Larson Service Station just west of Klemme.

A storage shed adjoining the station was ablaze on the roof when discovered by Mr. Larson, father of Carol Larson the proprietor. Mr. and Mrs. Carold Larson were eating their dinner at the time. The blaze was put out with a chemical extinguisher and was under control when the fire department arrived.

The shed which was used as a storage for old tires, oil, etc., was not badly damaged.

GARNER COUPLE ENTERTAINED RELATIVES AT PICNIC SUNDAY P. M.

Mr. and Mrs. Will Barz of Garner entertained fifty-six of the Barz relatives at a picnic held Sunday in the shelter house of the State Park at Clear Lake. Mr. and Mrs. Barz provided all of the eats for the crowd and a fine time was enjoyed by all.

Besides the relatives in this immediate vicinity, those who attended from a distance included Rose Barz, of St. Paul; Dr. and Mrs. H. G. Voetberg, St Paul; Mr. and Mrs. Emil Barz and Max of Waterloo. Friends invited included Mr. and Mrs. Otto Lehman and children, and Mr. and Mrs. Eric Clark of Garner.

TENNIS COURT NEARING COMPLETION AT THE REFORMED PARK

The tennis court which is being constructed by the young people of the Klemme Reformed Church, is about completed. A number of other young men in the community also assisted in the project.

The court is being built at the west end of the Church Park and will be in the shade most of the afternoon. Netting back stops are being constructed for the double court. After the court has been leveled and packed properly and finished with crushed rock, it will also be treated against dust.

5 OUT OF 140 APPLICATIONS SELECTED TO BUY FARMS IN COUNTY

First Year Program Has Been In Operation In Hancock Co.

Five new farm owners have been added to the list of Hancock county families operating their own land, it was announced today by Mr. F. Lee Stewart, Farm Security Administration Supervisor at Mason City, Iowa.

Basis for this announcement was completion of the 1939 Bankhead-Jones Tenant Purchase Program in the county. This program prvoides for the making of 40-year, three per cent loans to a limited number of farm tenants or laborers for the purchase of family sized farms.

Hancock county families who have purchased farms this year through the Tenant Purchase Program are: Leslie E. Bentley, Garner, Iowa; Dale E. Brede, Klemme, Iowa; John W. Kester, Forest City, Iowa; Kenneth O. Olson, Garner, Iowa; and Luverne O. Thompson, Corwith, Iowa.

This is the first year that the program has been in operation in Hancock county.

Purpose of the Tenant Purchase Program is to enable a limited number of tenant or farm laborer families to purchase farms without having to advance the down payments necessarily required by normal credit agencies.

Some 140 applications were received in the county this year. On the basis of farm experience, available operating resources and similiar factors, the five loan receipients were chosen from among all those who had applied. Investigation of applicants and recommendation for approval was handled by a local Tenant Purchase Committee.

Members of this Committee, appointed by the Secretary of Agriculture are: Cornelius J. Wille, Klemme, Iowa; Clark Clement, Garner, Iowa; and William Engh, Kanawha, Iowa.

In addition to receiving money for purchase of a farm and repair of buildings, each of the approved applicants was assisted by the Farm Security Administration in laying out sound farm and home managemnet plans.

"We feel that credit alone is not sufficient to assure success," adds Mr. Stewart. "Wise soil management, accurate keeping of accounts, production and preservation of food, proper balance between crops and livestock and the many other factors involved in sound management of the farm home are necessary."

While these loans are amortized on a 40-year, three per cent basis, they may be paid off in full at any time after after the first five years.

CORN PASSED "KNEE-HIGH" STAGE HERE JULY FOURTH

If the corn is "knee-high" here in North Iowa by the Fourth, it is an indication that the crop will be past the frost danger in the fall.

Most corn fields in this vicinity had corn well over the "knee-high" mark by the Fourth. Despite cool weather, the corn is looking fine this year.

Small grain has every indication of being a bumper crop this year. Heads are well-filled out, and the numerous light rains and cool weather has been beneficial to the grain crop.

FOURTH CELEBRATED

Most of the people of this community who observed the Fourth, spent the day at either Garner, Belmond or Clear Lake, the nearby towns which celebrated. Garnew drew perhaps the majority of Klemme folks and many went to see the parade after which they went to other places to celebrate or enjoy family gatherings and picnics.

Military Training in Nation's Schools Increases Supply of Reserve Officers

By MILTON R. KENTON
(Released by Western Newspaper Union)

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.—Number of students taking R O T C. military training at U S colleges, academies, and high schools has increased 20 per cent in the last two years, and totalled 186,750 men in the academic year just ending, according to a study of the current status of military training in U. S. schools, by Northwestern National Life Insurance company.

Less than 1 out of 12 universities and colleges in the United States offer military training—136 out of approximately 1,700 schools of college grade Yet, 116,309 collegians at these schools received senior R. O. T. C. instruction during the year 1939-40. The great majority were taking the basic two-year course however, during the month of June, 9,099 men were graduated from the four-year training course, qualifying them for Reserve Officer commissions.

When the United States entered the World war, our reserve of officers numbered only 2,900; it now numbers over 103,000, thanks largely to R O T C. student military training, the study finds.

Texas A & M Is Largest.

Largest senior R. O. T C. unit is at Agricultural & Mechanical College of Texas, where the cadet corps numbers 5,701 men; Ohio State university has the second largest senior unit, with 4,395 cadets enrolled, and the University of Illinois has the third largest corps with 3,988 men on the military roster.

Meanwhile, at 138 public or private secondary schools and 42 military academies, 70,441 youths received junior R. O. T. C. training, under U. S army officers, during the school year just ended. Of these, 126 were public high schools; the remainder were private high schools and prep schools, both civilian and military, but all with junior R. O. T. C. military units.

Chicago has the largest junior R. O. T. C. unit in the United States; 7,634 regular cadets are enrolled at 27 high schools in that city. In addition, 1,516 freshman students take R. O. T. C. training at their own expense—the war department provides only for the cost of training second, third, and fourth year high school students. The Detroit high schools unit is the second largest in the country with 2,280 cadets, and the Dallas high schools unit is a close third with 2,250 junior R. O. T. C. cadets enrolled.

Compulsory Military Training?

In view of current proposals for compulsory military training in U. S. schools, certain figures given in the study are of interest. R. O. T. C. training was changed from a required subject to an elective at the University of Minnesota in 1934; enrollment in the cadet corps fell from 2,484 in the preceding school year to 497 in the 1934-35 school year; numbered 565 men in the 1939-40 academic year recently completed

ABOVE, LEFT—Here are pictured University of Minnesota R O T C. cadets marching into their stadium for annual review. At 136 U. S. colleges, 116,309 young men took military training in the school year just ended. CENTER—University of Illinois R. O. T C. cadets are shown in anti-aircraft drill. LOWER, INSET—Pretty drum majorettes like Caryl Pedersen (left) and Jane Hughey (right) add enthusiasm to Chicago junior R. O T C. ceremonies.

Approximately half of the 136 colleges and universities having R. O. T. C. training make it a required subject for the first two years and offer it as an elective for the junior and senior years; in the remainder it is on a voluntary basis. It is a required subject at all of the universities which have the larger R. O. T. C. units.

But in the World war years of 1914-18, the number of U. S. high schools offering military instruction and the number of students taking it increased many hundred per cent, the study shows, and then tobogganed rapidly again when the "war to end all wars" was finished. In 1914, only 75 public high schools in the United States giving military "drill," of a sort, with 8,702 students enrolled. By 1916, just before America's entry into war, the number of schools giving military training and the number enrolled for it had approximately trebled, to 224 schools, and 24,433 cadets. By 1918 it reached a peak, with 1,265 public high schools in the United States giving military instruction to 106,986 boys—and to 5,697 girls! The numbers began to decline immediately after peace was declared, and by 1928 only 250 public high schools offered military training, and 47,080 students were taking it.

Same in Secondary Schools.

The same general story is true of private secondary schools during the same period, the study shows. In 1914, 86 prep schools were giving military drill to 6,835 boys; by 1918, 474 boys' schools were giving military instruction to 28,893 students and 65 girls' schools were drilling 2,639 girls in military formations. By 1928, this number was back to 116 prep schools offering military instruction, with 16,528 cadets taking it.

Thus, the report points out, in 1918, at the peak of the war effort, a total of 1,739 public and private secondary schools were giving military training to 135,879 boys, and by 1928 the combined total had fallen to 366 schools giving military training to 63,608 boys. The study points out as a matter of comparative interest that today approximately 180 public and private secondary schools in the United States are giving war department-supervised military instruction to more than 70,000 cadets, compared with a combined total of 161 public and private secondary schools in 1914 which were giving military "drill," in many cases of a very sketchy nature, to 15,537 boys.

A number of private military academies were not included in the 1914 figures, and private military academies not under war department supervision are not included in the current figures, the report points out however, the comparative growth in number of military trainees would not be greatly changed, could the additional figures be obtained, the study states, because a direct checkup of comparative attendance at 41 military schools which furnished the insurance company with their 1916 and 1938 enrollment figures showed an increase of some 250 per cent in average attendance.

New Units Desired.

The war department has applications now on file from universities, colleges, high schools, and prep schools for 50 additional senior R. O. T. C. corps and 111 junior units. None have been added since the fiscal year of 1937, as no funds have been available for the purpose since then.

Annual cost of the R. O. T. C. runs about $11,500,000—a minor item in our gigantic defense budget, the study points out. Of this, $5,000,000 goes for uniforms, equipment, and general expense of operation, and 6½ million dollars for salaries of the army officers and noncoms detailed as instructors.

University and college R. O. T. C. men who elect to take the advanced course—third and fourth years—receive about $175 in pay from the government during their two years of study, plus free transportation to and from a six-weeks' training camp, plus all expenses while at the camp.

Only about one student out of six in the basic two-year course elects to continue in the advanced course, the study finds. A little over 9,000 men completed their four years' senior training, during the school year ending this month. Ordinarily, only a part of the graduates apply for commissions; due to limitations in vacancies, only a part of the applicants are actually commissioned. When effect is given to resignations and retirements from the active list, the net result has been an increase of about 1,500 per year in recent years, in total Reserve strength.

Radio for Parachute Fire-Fighters Developed by U. S. Forest Service

WASHINGTON. — A new lightweight radio for the parachuting fire fighters being used on the national forests for the first time this year has recently been announced by the forest service, U. S. department of agriculture.

Tests made by the forest service on the Chelan National forest in Washington last fall with a crew of parachute jumpers indicated the practicability of dropping fire fighters from airplanes to put out small fires in some of the inaccessible back-country areas of the national forests. The new radiophone has been developed so that the "smoke-jumper" can keep in touch with the plane pilot and with his headquarters when he reaches the ground.

The smoke jumpers use a specially designed parachute which has a rate of descent of about 12 feet per second and permits a certain amount of steering toward the landing spot. A special chute harness and protective suit and headgear were also developed to so protect the jumpers that they can land almost anywhere at any elevation—in tall trees or open spaces, or on rough ridges. Jumpers who went down into stands of young lodgepole pine last fall christened them "featherbed landings" because the young pines will catch a parachute readily and absorb most of the shock on their bending, swaying tops. In order to facilitate descent from tall trees, the jumpers carry a coil of light, strong rope.

A small number of complete units of equipment have already been purchased, the forest service reports, and these will be used to train smoke-jumpers in actual work on forest fires this summer. The work is just getting under way in national forests in the northern Rockies and northern Cascades of Montana and Washington.

Planes which deliver the parachuting fire-fighters scout the fire on their first trip over the spot, and drop a small test chute with a 10-pound sand bag to determine wind drift. They then circle back and make a second approach, at which time the parachutist descends, and by using the steering flaps on his parachute, generally manages to reach the ground close to the selected landing spot. On a third approach the pilot drops the fire-fighting kit which is carried down by a burlap parachute with a yellow streamer attached to prevent its being lost—a method used by the forest service for some years to deliver tons of equipment to back country fire-fighters. The burlap chute pack contains necessary tools, rations, first-aid kit and the like but the parachutist will carry with him the new lightweight radio so that he can contact the pilot or his headquarters immediately if necessary or can make reports later.

The small type radiophone developed by the Forest Service weighs only six pounds with dry batteries and all accessories, and is not quite as large as a loaf of sandwich bread. It measures 2 by 4½ by 12 inches, and operates on ultra-high frequencies between 30,000 and 40,000 kilocycles, having a two-way communication range covering an optical distance which with sufficient elevation may be as much as a hundred miles.

Migrant Farm Laborers Are Serious U. S. Problem

Migratory farm laborers "may prove a very real threat to our democracy" unless they are helped to achieve security, according to Philip E. Henderson, regional supervisor for the Farm Security administration.

In outlining the problem before an institute at Rutgers university, this federal farm official pointed out that migrants "are becoming hopeless, discontented and increasingly doubtful about our American way of life," adding that "they constitute the most fertile seedbed for those social ills which already are disrupting Europe."

Asserting that the impact of Europe's war falls more heavily on the farmer than any other group in the country, the FSA spokesman said effects of the war are striking with "greatest force" on migrants and the low-income farmer.

The Washington MERRY-GO-ROUND

RECRUITING SHOWS PHYSICAL DEFICIENCIES

The army campaign for new recruits is showing up all too vividly how the years of depression have left their mark on American youth.

Greatest difficulty in securing recruits is not the reluctance of young men to enlist, but their inability to pass physical examinations.

In peacetime, the armed services get most of their recruits from lower-bracket families. Because of economic conditions it is now the lower-bracket families, with the most children, which lack sufficient nourishment, fresh air and exercise.

This has been a particularly serious drawback to recruiting in the larger cities. During one recent drive to bring the marine corps up to full strength, recruiting officers left the cities and combed the smaller towns in farming communities. There they found a much huskier type of recruit, but many were rejected because of poor teeth.

In the cities, the biggest drawbacks are bad eyesight and underweight

WAR DOOMS CROP CONTROL?

Henry Wallace's program of crop curtailment and soil conservation is about to face its toughest year. Reason is the certain food shortage in Europe and the demand that American farmers use their surpluses to feed war-torn Europe.

There are two causes for the food shortage. One is the fact that many countries have been too busy fighting to plant sufficient crops, and their fields have been fought over.

Second reason is lack of sufficient merchant shipping Four countries—Norway, Holland, Denmark, and Belgium—have a total of 10,000,000 gross tons of merchant vessels which are immobilized, so far as supplying the home ports is concerned. Either they are bottled up at home, or they are in foreign ports, unable to reach home.

Vessels which a year ago were carrying U. S. fodder to Denmark, to feed Danish cattle, today are diverted to other trade or riding at anchor. Meantime, the cattle are eating up the existing supplies of fodder. When these are gone, the cattle will have to be killed.

And the killing will be done by the Germans, who will consume the cattle.

This is just one simplified illustration. No such constriction was known in the early days of the World war, because the United States, still neutral, insisted on maintaining its shipping to the neutral countries of Europe. But now its shipping is barred by the neutrality act from belligerent ports and combat zones.

All of this is sure to bring heavy demands on the U. S. farmer, also on congress to appropriate relief money to help Europe's starving populations. And this, in turn, is sure to upset crop control. For it was high food prices during the World war which increased acreage and also sent many farmers heavily into debt to buy new land.

DIPLOMATS MAKE WARS?

John Q. Public thinks the diplomats make the wars—and could stop them.

Argentine Ambassador Espil has a letter saying, "Your country should submit itself to becoming a part of the United States." (No Latin American country is prouder of its independence than Argentina, less likely to become part of the U. S. A.)

Uruguayan Minister Richling gets so many letters he is working overtime to answer them. The tenor is: "You must get rid of the dangerous Germans."

FRENCH FLEET

The White House is not advertising it, but the disposition of the French fleet was one vital point which came up in secret discussion with the French just before their capitulation.

Roosevelt wanted to make sure that the French navy would not fall into Nazi hands. For France's warships could just about tip the balance of naval power and give the Nazis a powerful striking arm in the south Atlantic against Latin America.

The French have two brand-new 26,000-ton battleships, the Strasbourg and the Dunkerque, probably the fastest in the world, also two new 35,000-ton battleships, the Richelieu and the Jean Bart, the latter not quite completed. These, added to the German fleet, would give Hitler 10 battleships against 15 for the United States, all much older and slower.

When you consider that 12 U. S. battleships are kept in the Pacific, with only three in the Atlantic, you get a rough idea of how difficult it would be for this country to defend the Monroe Doctrine if Hitler got the French fleet. Another thing he might get which would add to our Monroe Doctrine problem is the French naval base at Dakar, on the bulge of Africa jutting out toward Brazil.

Note—The United States recently has launched two new war monsters, but it will take several months to complete them.

Frog Worship

The French have eaten frogs for years, and so have we Americans. But the Chinese, who have been frog eaters for centuries, are the only nation in the world to worship frogs as well, for in their peculiar symbolism the frog stands for wealth.

In Chekiang, which is the center of the cult, special houses are devoted to the use of frogs. They are taken there from temples and allowed to hop merrily about the sunny gardens. When they are tired, devotees carry them back to the temples. The Chinese worship the green frog, and it is only the common mud-colored variety which appears as a delectable morsel on their menu.

The Old Occidental hotel in Buffalo, Wyo., said to have been the scene of the encounter between "The Virginian" and his enemy, "Trampas," in Owen Wister's novel.

The Day of the Cattleman.

After the Indian wars were over came one of the most glamorous periods in Wyoming's history—the day of the cattleman. Brief though it was, it lasted long enough to make the name of Wyoming synonymous with the word "cowboy," that picturesque American figure whose jingling spurs still echo in the American consciousness even though the era of the "open range" is long since past.

For the day of the cattleman came to a climax and an end in 1892—with the famous "Johnson County War," or the "Rustler War," a fight between the cattle barons and the small ranchmen. It not only ended the reign of the barons but it also foreshadowed the coming of sheepmen, who began to crowd upon and spoil the cattle ranges, the "nester" or small farmer, and finally the "dude rancher" of today

Such, in brief outline, is the thrilling history of the state of Wyoming. But there is another fact in her history which makes her unique among the sisterhood of states It is suggested by the central figure of a woman in the new stamp with the legend "Equal Rights" above her head. When congress, in 1868, created the Territory of Wyoming from parts of Dakota, Utah and Idaho, one of the first acts of the territorial legislature was to pass a bill granting women the right to vote.

Two years later the new territory did an even more unheard-of thing. In March, 1870, when the grand jury for the regular term of the court of the First Judicial district at Laramie was drawn, there appeared on the panel the names of the first women to be summoned to act as common law jurors anywhere in the world. Miss Eliza Stewart, a school teacher, had the distinction of heading the list of eight women whose names were drawn and who served on the jury. They were Nelly Hagen, Mary Wilcox, Retta Burnham, Mary Flynn, Mrs. I. M. Hartsough, Lizzie A. Spooner, and Jenny Ivinson. Appointed as a bailiff was another woman, Martha Boies

News of this startling innovation in the conduct of public affairs spread all over the world and King William of Prussia, who seems to have been something of a feminist, cabled President U. S. Grant his enthusiastic congratulations. Reporters and cartoonists swarmed to Laramie and pictured the women jurors as masculine creatures with bawling babies in their arms. Some unknown poet celebrated the event in a deathless couplet:

"Baby, baby, don't get in a fury;
Your mama's gone to sit on the jury."

But for all the ridicule, the women jurors proved to be a success. They not only served on a jury, but they indicted a murderer and convicted him!

If the majority of Americans think of Wyoming in terms of cowboys, bucking broncos, ridin' and ropin' and roundups, credit for that fact is due more to one man, perhaps, than to any other single factor. And, paradoxically, he wasn't a Westerner at all. He was an Easterner, a "tenderfoot."

A Tenderfoot Goes West.

Owen Wister was his name and he was born in Philadelphia just 80 years ago—on July 14, 1860 A friend of Theodore Roosevelt while a student at Harvard, he planned a career in music and was well on the way to success in it abroad when the insistence of his father resulted in his returning to Harvard to study law. His health broke before he was well started and, as Roosevelt had done, he went West to recuperate That was in the middle eighties, and he lived in Arizona and Wyoming and learned to love the West He returned to it each spring and in 1891, upon his return from a summer in Wyoming, wrote two stories about the country and its people, "Hank's Woman" and "How Lin McLean Went West," both of which appeared in Harper's Magazine.

He continued writing Western stories and in 1896 the first group of his tales were gathered in a volume called "Red Men and White." A second volume, "Lin McLean," came out two years later. Thus far Wister's work had been accepted by critics as authentic portrayals of life in the West but it had not enjoyed any particular popular success. Then in 1902 his novel "The Virginian" appeared.

The book became a best seller in a day when historical novels were especially popular and it continues to sell even today. At the time of Wister's death in 1938 it was announced that the total sales of "The Virginian" had passed the 1,500,000 mark, a distinction which few American novels have ever attained.

Soon after "The Virginian" was published it was dramatized and, with Dustin Farnum playing the role of the hero, Frank Campeau as Trampas and Guy Bates Post as Steve, it was a "best seller" for six months. Afterwards it ran "on the road" for 10 years, is still played by stock companies, has been made into a movie no less than three times and has been translated into foreign languages.

Since Wyoming was the scene of the story of "The Virginian" and its cowpuncher-hero was a glamorous, romantic figure, it is easy to understand why America thinks of that commonwealth which is celebrating its fiftieth year as a state this year, in terms of the cowboy. Another reason is indicated in the preface to one of Wister's later books—"Members of the Family," published in 1911 In it he says:

Wyoming burst upon the tenderfoot resplendent, like all the story-books, like Cooper and Irving and Parkman come true again, here, actually going on, was that something which the boy runs away from school to find, that land safe and far from Monday morning, nine o'clock, and the spelling-book, here was Saturday eternal, where you slept out-of-doors, hunted big animals, rode a horse roped steers, and wore deadly weapons Make no mistake fire-arms were at times practical and imperative, but this was not the whole reason for sporting them on your hip, you had escaped from civilization's schoolroom, an air never breathed before filled your lungs, and you were become one large shout of joy College-boy, farm-boy, street-boy, this West melted you all down to the same first principles Were you seeking fortune Perhaps, incidentally, but money was not the point, you had escaped from school This holiday was leavened by hard bodily work, manly deeds and the bright brave ripple moved the ground-swell of tragedy Something of a promise, also, was in the air, promise of a democracy which the East had missed

The truth of that quotation—with certain reservations as to "wearing deadly weapons," perhaps—is immediately apparent to anyone who has ever spent a vacation on a modern Wyoming dude ranch. And for the thousands of Americans who have driven across Wyoming the truth of this quotation from the preface of "The Virginian" is also apparent:

The mountains are there, far and shining, and the sunlight, and the infinite earth, and the air that seems forever the true fountain of youth—but where is the buffalo, and the wild antelope, and where the horseman with his pasturing thousands? So like its old self does the sage-brush seem when revisited, that you wait for the horseman to appear But he will never come again. He rides in his historic yesterday. You will no more see him gallop out of the unchanging silence than you will see Columbus on the unchanging sea come sailing from Palos with his caravels.

THE first actor in Hollywood history ever to be elected a delegate to a national political convention, Melvyn Douglas wonders if he will be able to enjoy the honor.

"Of course I can always be represented by proxy," he said the other day. "But a chance like this comes only every four years, and I'd hate to miss it."

Douglas made preparations to be in Chicago July 15 for the big conclave. But he temporarily forgot that he is also an actor, involved in the new Columbia comedy, "He Stayed for Breakfast," along with Loretta Young, Eugene Pallette, Una O'Connor and Alan Marshall

Alexander Hall, the director, is making every effort to hurry things along, and is making all the scenes with Douglas first.

If you think you'd like to be a motion picture producer, pause and consider what happened at the Paramount studio recently when Joel McCrea withdrew from the cast of "Arise My Love" because of ill health. (1) Because of McCrea's withdrawal, Ray Milland was plucked from the cast of "Virginia" to take the McCrea assignment, opposite Claudette Colbert. (2) That meant that "Virginia" wouldn't start on time. (3) That meant that Franchot Tone, who was to have costarred in "Virginia," had to withdraw from the cast, because he had another commitment, and could appear in "Virginia" only if it started on schedule. (4) That meant that Fred McMurray stepped into the role for which Milland had been scheduled, playing opposite Madeleine Carroll, but (5) She flew to England recently; at the moment of writing there's no telling when she'll be back.

Dorothy Lamour traded a $10,000,000 (according to her studio) head of hair for 30 cents' worth of calico, and it wasn't just a stunt in a movie scenario either. Seems she's been wanting to bob those 40-inch tresses, which played quite a part in establishing her as a draw at the box-office. The studio wanted her to make some more pictures in which she wore a sarong, and she was determined not to. So both sides gave in; she had her hair bobbed by Wally Westmore, head of the make-up department (and cried a little, as most girls do when they hear that first snip of the shears) and consented to do three South Seas pictures — "Moon Over Burma," "Aloma of the South Seas," with Jon Hall, and "South of Samoa," with Bing Crosby.

A custom has been initiated during the rehearsals of the Rudy Vallee show to mark the scripts with asterisks to denote the laugh allowed The reason for this is to clock for timing when the show is actually broadcast. Four asterisks are tops in laugh pauses.

The other night someone in the cast asked scriptwriter Sid Fields what it meant to see five asterisks instead of the customary four. Replied Fields, "Then you know that you have the Fred Allen script by mistake."

When you see the Bing Crosby picture, "Rhythm on the River," you may be surprised to find that Ken Carpenter, Bing's announcer and chime ringer on the air, plays a radio announcer named "Ken Carpenter." It's the result of an accident. Scenarists had given Carpenter another name in the picture, but John Scott Trotter, who's Bing's broadcast band leader and plays a band leader in the picture, made a long film take in which he called Carpenter by his real name. It was simpler to change the name than to do the scene over again.

Arthur Lake's desire for realism on the "Blondie" radio show nearly disrupted the program recently. In one scene he had to fall down, with the proper accompanying sound effects; usually that just means that the sound man makes the noises. But Arthur insisted on doing his own fall. The show was on for the eastern broadcast. Arthur fell wrong, the script flew in all directions, and Penny Singleton had to rush over with her script and let Arthur read his part from it until his script had been reassembled.

Be Spick-and-Span This Summer In Chic Wrinkle-Resist Linen

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

WANT to keep cool and look fresher and crispier than ever during the hot summer days? Then put some linen costume on your wardrobe list and on yourself. For a fresh viewpoint on warm weather apparel and an immaculate appearance, pure Irish linen is undoubtedly the perfect answer to the annual summer problem

That's what they do in the tropics, they wear linen because the construction of the flax fiber makes it naturally cool. And that's what smart women and girls are doing this summer, wearing linen during the warm months, because it is cool and imparts the well-groomed look.

There are a number of details that distinguish the better linens this year There's embroidery, for instance, it takes the lead in the newer linen trends, especially outlining scalloped hems and along closings worked with contrasting threads. Linens with a scattered allover embroidered motif are also good looking. Sawtooth edgings make for effectiveness in styling the new linens, as well as scallops. Contrasting braided effects are also employed. Jacket dresses, princess frocks and shirtwaist types are all basic styles that are making linen a "must" in every summer wardrobe.

The smartest selection you can make is a suit of black or navy linen. Very chic is the new dark linen that is enhanced with white eyeleted collar and cuff sets with a bit of white eyeleted petticoat revealed at the front open skirt. Often there is a combination in a linen jacket dress such as a black linen skirt with a maize linen jacket. Navy jacketed in dusky pink is effective or dark green linen with a red jacket.

Going to town you will be ever so smartly costumed if you wear a peacock blue wrinkle-resistant linen suit such as the model to the right in the group selects. The white blouse is safely attached to the skirt so it can't ride up. Red stitching accents the blouse and the color is repeated in the buttons that trim the wide shoulders of the jaunty bolero jacket. Other colors available in this voguish model are pickle green, brown or all black or white.

A lettuce leaf couldn't look any crisper than the perky narrow waisted topper-and-skirt costume of pure Irish linen shown to the left in the picture. The points in the sawtooth trimming emphasize simple clean-cut lines. Like the other linen costumes here illustrated this is one of those grand wrinkle-resistant linens that does not have to be pressed every day.

What a dashing little streamliner is the costume centered in the picture! It is one of those stunning figure-flattering princess silhouettes which is so popular this season. The inspiring thing about this line is, it is as becoming to the not-so-slender as it is to the sylphlike figure. The designer interprets the scallop theme with decided artistry. Thirty-two buttons march down the front on linen scalloped dresses available in a long list of colors.

Lace Redingote

To say "lace redingote" does not really let you into the real secret of this handsome costume. The big news is that this elegant appearing redingote, suitable to wear to any pretentious daytime affair and just as timely for practical town wear, is actually made of a cotton washable lace. Matching crepe outlines the front opening all the way down. Modish is this dress of "medici" cotton lace for travel, sightseeing and about-town wear and it's delightfully cool because of the open mesh flower patterning. Add to this the great advantage that lace does not wrinkle, consequently it will look fresh and well-groomed all the day long.

Sheer Black for Both Hat and Gown

Black magic still holds sway in fashion's realm. It is not only that a big play is being made on black sheers for afternoon gowns, but the latest news is that with the stunning suits of black rayon mesh and the dresses of coal-black chiffon, marquisette and so on, milliners are turning out stunning hats made of all-over shirred or finely pleated black tulle, lace or chiffon. These black transparencies frame the face most flatteringly and they are of both off-face and sunshade brim type.

You can get these ensembles up as elegantly as you please with intriguing touches of sheer black chantilly lace and cunning color accents of pink or blue or bright red or you can hold to the all-black idea, for filmy black can be made to look very young in the hands of an artist designer.

Dresses That Tub Is Style Message

No matter how formal or highbrow the occasion the new cottons and other washables are living up to the event in high style this season. The smart thing to do whether you dine, dance, go to garden parties is to wear a frock that tubs. You will find that the designers are making up cottons and linens, seersuckers, piques, organdies, handkerchief linens, fine batistes sharkskin weaves and on through the vast list, with as much finesse and swank as one usually associates with rich silks and satins and such.

Cotton Mesh Fabrics

For her casual daytime clothes the schoolgirl is particularly fond of the cotton mesh fabrics cut in shirtwaist styles.

Airlines Hold Army Air Corps Training in High Regard

Many Opportunities Open to Men With Air Corps Training, Says Captain on Mid-Continent Airlines

By O. L. PARKS,
Pres. Parks Air College

Some people swing into their careers in their 20's; some in their 30's after false starts in other fields. Robert P Harris began thinking about aviation as his destiny when he was still in knee pants.

He not only though about aviation but he made model planes, read books about flying and saw all the movies in which there were pilots and planes Bob got a solid military background at San Marcos Military Academy down in his native Texas and then went on to the University of Texas for four and one-half years.

Robt. P. Harris

Always before him was the picture of Lieut. R. P. Harris, Army Air Corps. In March 1930 he decided to bring that picture to life. He entered the United States Army Training Center at San Antonio, Texas and was graduated February 25th of the following year.

For 16 months he was stationed at Mather Field, Sacramento, Calif. Then he left the Army, retaining his reserve commission and spent three months teaching an old friend to fly a private ship.

After this instruction period he joined United Air Lines as co-pilot. He spent three and one-half years in the position of first officer and then was promoted to captain for 11 months. On May 1, 1937 he joined Mid-Continent Airlines, "The Great Plains Route" as captain, a position he has retained since that time.

In response to a question about his Army training, Harris stated; "Thank you very much for the privilege and opportunity of expressing my opinion of the Army Air Corps training that is now being offered to the young men of the United States.

"It is my opinion that there is so better flight training available in the world for a basic education in the art and science of flying. This fact is emphasized by the airlines of the United States because of the high regard in which an applicant for flight duty is held if he is a graduate of air corps training center.

"The Air Corps training offers much more than just flight training. The course of study offered in ground school, the recreational features and the associations formed are all assets that can not be found elsewhere."

But Bob has discovered that not only does the Army program thoroughly prepare a young man for an important position as pilot but also lays an important foundation for his future as an airline official or executive. Experts predict that in only 25 years aviation will be the dominant field of the entire world. And the executives of tomorrow will be the pilots of yesterday and today

Further information about this coming industry and the preparation for it that the Army offers may be obtained from the Secretary of the Army Training Center, Randolph Field, San Antonio, Texas.

EGGS NOT WASHED BEST FOR STORAGE

In the long run, Iowa poultrymen will make more money by selling washed eggs only for immediate local consumption, according to A. D. Odekirk, Iowa State College extension poultry marketing specialist.

"Washed eggs, which do not keep as well as unwashed eggs in storage, cannot be easily identified and sorted out," Oderkirk says Consequently, in attempting to avoid washed eggs, buyers of eggs for storage often shun entire production areas, thus depriving the local market of the support which storage demand gives prices.

Some local buyers are also washing eggs, Oderkirk reports. Although, in most instances these buyers are marking cases to indicate that the eggs have been washed, some buyers are not doing so Marking cases is a good practice, Oderkirk said, since the washed eggs can be immediately routed into the retail market.

OATS GOOD, NOT THICK SOME SMUT AND BLIGHT

Early oats in most instances will probably be of good weight and quality, but yields will vary considerably Some of them will be low because of bad weather early in the growing season, reports E S. Dyas, extension agronomist at Iowa State College Stands are thin because cool weather retarded stooling, and late freezes killed some of the oat plants.

There is not much stem and crown rust this year, but smut is prevalent, and also halo-blight.

Two Foreign Influences Marked Early Americas

Most of the coast lines of North and South America had been touched or sighted by European explorers before the end of the Sixteenth century and many pushed back from the shores to investigate the country beyond the horizon.

By the middle of the Seventeenth century the spheres of European influence on the two continents had been temporarily determined. The Latin races controlled the southern continent, the lower part of the northern continent, and had extended their rule far up the West coast, writes Colton Storm in "American Collector." English, Dutch and Swedish settlements dominated the eastern seaboard from Florida to Maine, and the French had plunged inland from their slight Canadian shore.

Although the fishers of Brittany had discovered the rich banks off Newfoundland as early as 1504 (and possibly earlier), there was no official attempt on the part of the French to explore the New World until 1524. Then, under the patronage of Francis I, Giovanni da Verrazano sailed west for the East Indies. His voyage was not the commercial success he and the king had expected. The earliest extant printed record of his exploits appears in Giovanni Battista Ramusio's hodge-podge compilation of early adventures, entitled Delle navigationi et viaggi, published at Venice, 1550-1559, in three folio volumes.

Like Columbus' famous letter, Verrazano's rough account was originally a letter or report addressed to his royal patron. The original letter in Verrazano's hand has been lost, but there are at least two contemporary copies, both in Italian translations.

Pitcairn Taxes

The only tax on Pitcairn island, of mutiny of the Bounty fame, is for 12 cents for a gun license. The money is used for buying the stationery needed by the chief magistrate. Tithes of about $1,000 a year are collected and used for missionary work in other parts of the Pacific. The island has a population of 200. Oranges are its chief export and goats are its only live stock.

Use for Beeswax

Beeswax is used extensively in candlemaking and in the manufacture of cosmetics.

SMALLER PIG CROP MAY BRING HIGH HOG PRICES

The 1940 pig crop probblay will be about 10 per cent smaller than in 1939, and will bring higher hog prices next year, Iowa State College economists believe.

They base their estimate on the spring pig survey recently published by the United States Department of Agriculture which they say, turned out pretty much as expected The survey showed an 8 per cent decrease in spring pigs over 1939, and an 8 per cent reduction is expected in the number of hogs which will be marketed from October, 1940, to April, 1941.

The survey indicated that 12 per cent fewer sows would farrow in the fall season of 1940. If litters are about average size, this will mean a 12 per cent smaller pig crop in the fall and a 10 per cent reduction for the whole year.

Higher prices, the economists say, will depend on whether or not demand conditions remain the same or improve under the influence of the armament program.

Broke Tradition.

Walter Anderson, guide at Bedmann's Beach near Alexandria. Minn., failed to write the traditional letter home when he wrote to his parents at Elk Horn saying, "Don't send any money, I have plenty!"

First Wedding.

Although the Pleasant Chapel church southwest of Eldora has been erected for 75 years, the wedding there of Edward Daggs and Marsha Reece was the first ever to be performed in it. The history of the church can be traced back to the Civil War days when men left trowels upon the walls, morter in the boxes, and even portions of their clothing to enlist in the union Those returning home in 1865 finished the building.

Chicken mites are active in the summer Now is the time to look for them and clean them out if they are present

In 1940 most of Iowa's grass hoppers will be confined to the area extending from Pottawattamie to Lyon County along the Missouri River, according entomologists at Iowa State College

The normal viability of soybeans is around 95 per cent. To determine the necessary rate of seeding, divide 95 by the actual viability figure and multiply it by the seeding rate.

The total enrollment of boys in 4-H crops and livestock work last year was 15,073 This was the highest figure in the history of Iowa 4-H club activities, and an increase of 1,389 over the 1938 enrollment.

Calt Holbrook, Clarinda farmer, started a trash fire with some straw. It spread and a spark blew to a hay rack full of straw. Mrs. Holbrock was driving the team and barely escaped with her life. The wagon and straw were consumed.

Survey of cattle on feed indicate that farmers will market more fed cattle in May and June than in the same months last year, but the number sold from mid-July to mid-September this year may be smaller.

IT'S SEASON FOR CHICKEN MITE WAR

Poultrymen should check their flocks now for chicken mites, says W. M. Vernon, extension poultryman at Iowa State College. Warm weather causes an increase in the mites, and unless checked early the thrift and health of the entire flock will be impaired.

If there is an indication of mites, immediate steps should be taken to destroy them, Vernon continued A recommended treatment consists of 3 parts of crankcase oil with 1 part of a creosol product such as gas-drip, crude carbolic acid or some of the wood preservers.

Paint Roosts

This solution should be painted on such contact points in the chicken house as where the roost supports are nailed to the studs and under the side of the roosts. Cracks and crevices such as these are hibernation places for mites.

If sparrows nest under the eves of the chicken house, these nests should be destroyed, since sparrows often cary mites, Vernon says

The oil-creosol solution should not be applied to the top of the roosts, because of the danger of breast burns on the roosting chickens

Entire House

If mites seem very prevalent, the entire chicken house should be treated. The first step is to thoroughly clean the floor and walls, removing all dust and litter. Then, using a 3-per cent solution of creosol and water, soak the walls and floor. It is best to keep the chickens out of the house during the spraying, and if possible for several hours afterwards.

Mites take a heavy toll on egg production during the summer months and frequently cause birds to go into molt sooner than they should.

Will Preach At Methodist Church Sunday Morning

Rev. L. J. Rhodebach, of Dialton, Iowa, will preach at the morning services at the Klemme Methodist and Liberty Churches next Sunday.

CHINCH BUG FIGHT USES CREOSOTE IN TRAINLOADS

In combating her chinch bugs, Iowa has used two trainloads of creosote oil and several thousand miles of paper fence, relates Dr. C. J Drake, state entomologist.

The most heavily infested state in the United States this year, Iowa required 4 per cent of all the creosote oil used in fighting the infestation throughout the country.

Of her 45 heavily infested counties, those most plagued were in the area from Des Moines to Audubon, southward to Red Oak. Fifteen other counties suffered lighter onslaughts.

Migration of chinch bugs now is on the decline, and the peak is past. The red nymphs now present in the fields soon will mature, and the adults will lay eggs which will hatch a second generation in the fall. There is no means of controlling the fall infestation, declares Drake, and quite a bit of damage may be done. The "second crop" will winter in dry grass and corn-stalks.

TRIED AND FOUND WANTING

A girl called on a farmer and offered her services as a shepherdess.

"No, no, lassie," said the farmer. "I advertised for a shepherd, not a shepherdess."

"I know that, but surely there's no reason why the work should not be undertaken by a woman."

"Well, a woman tried it once and made a mess of it."

"Who was she?"

"Bo-Peep."

EDSEL AND HENRY DISCUSS THE PLANE IDEA

Edsel—Well, Pop, what do you think of it?

Henry—I never imagined I'd ever be in this business. How did it happen anyhow?

Edsel—We just got up one morning and found ourselves in it.

Henry—Do you think we can turn out 1,000 a day?

Edsel—If it can be done you can do it, Pop.

Henry—All I'm afraid of is that the government will keep changing the model.

Edsel—If they do that we can't turn out one a month.

Henry—You know how the government generally does things, but I've got a promise it will stick to one set of plans.

Edsel—She's a slick looker, ain't she?

Henry—Not to me, son. I hate that kind of machine. Man's place is on the ground. He don't belong up in the air.

Edsel—Your early models kept him up in the air, Dad.

Henry—It wasn't the car's fault; it was the rough roads.

Edsel—I don't think there's much more work on this plane than on a de luxe sedan.

Henry—Not as much. There'll be no women passengers in it; that'll save us a lot of gadgets and fancy stuff. We won't have to worry where to put the vanity case and ash tray.

Edsel—We can save a lot of time there.

Henry—You're telling me!

Edsel—The upholstery won't be optional, either.

Henry—But it won't be easy sailing. We have to be careful turning out planes for war. We can't make any little mistakes. A loose nut may be okay in a flivver but it's bad stuff in an airplane. A driver who gets up a mile in the air and discovers something was left off his plane is in a tough spot.

Edsel—What colors are we going to make these war planes?

Henry—Now don't bring up that matter One color is all I'll stand for It's going to be hard enough satisfying everybody on this job without getting into any arguments over colors.

Edsel—Are you sure Washington won't insist on reds, pinks and greens?

Henry—Nobody can be sure of Washington on anything, but I've got a promise, and if some bureaucrat comes rushing in and demands that the air force works better in a light blue plane than a gray one I'm going to raise the devil.

Edsel—Have you ever thought what may be the outcome of this job, Dad? Maybe after we get into production the public will want planes instead of autos.

Henry—I'm afraid of that.

Edsel—Maybe the general public will always prefer to stay on the ground.

Henry—If you watched the average Sunday driver you wouldn't think so.

Edsel—Well, anyhow, we'll get busy and do our best.

Henry (reflectively)—Gosh, but this seems funny. And to think that in the last war my contribution was A PEACE SHIP!

But treat me like a neutral? . . . Say,
Positively, mister, never!

The President has decorated George Cohan for composing two great war songs. They are given as "Over There" and "You're a Grand Old Flag." But if Irving Berlin doesn't get a little federal recognition, it won't seem quite fair. "Oh How I Hate to Get up in the Morning" was a favorite war song, too.

JOB'S STRUGGLE TO FAITH IN LIFE AFTER DEATH

LESSON TEXT—Job 14 13-17, 17:13-16; 19 23-29
GOLDEN TEXT—For I know that my redeemer liveth.—Job 19.25.

If life ends at the grave, it has comparatively little meaning and its struggles and sorrows are hardly worth bearing. Job, living in all probability about 1,500 years before Christ, did not have our knowledge of the resurrection of Christ and the assurance that He is but the "first fruits of them that slept" and that we too shall rise (see I Cor. 15:22, 23). But in the midst of suffering, discouragement and spiritual conflict, he looked with the eye of faith all the way beyond the grave.

The background of our lesson is found in Job's experience with his three professed comforters, who speak thus "Eliphaz But who ever perish being innocent (4:7)? Be glad that you are being corrected (4·17). Job: Answer my question and I will keep still. Show me where I am wrong. What does your 'proof' prove (6·24, 25)?

"Biddad: Do you think God perverts justice (8 3)? Ask the wise men of the ages Consider what our fathers taught (8.8). Job: It is all the same; God destroys the righteous with the wicked (9:22).

"Zophar: Do you expect to understand God? Put evil away (11:7, 14). Job. I know as much as you do (13:2). Your burning remarks are cold ashes (13:12). I would like to reason it out with God (13:3). I have stated my case; I am righteous (13:8).

"The three friends have not helped him, but Job struggles on alone with the problem."—Dr Carl S. Knopf.

I. Uncertainty—"If a man die, shall he live again?" (14:13-17).

Job, while maintaining that he was righteous, felt that his sufferings must indicate that God was displeased with him. He thought he might best seek refuge in Sheol (R. V. in place of "grave" in v. 13), the abode of the dead. But suddenly he turned again to the hope which was dear to his heart; namely, that somehow there must be a blessed future life with God.

He asked the question, "If a man die, shall he live again?" The fact that he quickly lapsed into despair indicates that he was not certain that the answer to his question was "Yes." How blessed it is that we know, for have we not heard the voice of the One who, standing before a grave in Bethany, said, "I am the resurrection and the life: he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live" (John 11: 25)?

II. Hope—"Where, then, is my hope?" (Job 17:13-16).

Eliphaz had again sought to set Job right by accusing him of vanity, impatience and pride (chap. 15). Job answered (chaps. 16 and 17) that his friends were worse than useless as comforters, being so sanctimonious in their assurance of his wickedness, when in fact he was only a man who was on the verge of despair, but still holding to his faith in God.

Job cried out, "Where, then, is my hope?"—undoubtedly thus expressing his bewilderment, bordering on complete despair. Yet do we not even in the question see that he still had hope? The man who has given up says, "There is no hope"; but Job continued to hope against hope, crying out, "Where is my hope?" knowing full well that his only hope was in God.

There is a lesson here that we do well to learn. Whatever our situation may be we shall find that God is there and that we may trust Him.

"Does all the world seem against you
And you in the battle alone?
Remember, at 'Wit's End Corner'
Is where God's power is shown."

III. Faith—"I know that my redeemer liveth" (Job 19:23-29).

What blessed vision and what glorious faith! Job lived in the time of Moses or before. He had no New Testament—no old Testament—but he did have God, and by faith he believed that God was to make Himself known to man here on earth as a living Redeemer.

We say that we know because we have the record of His coming; of the Son of God incarnate; of His bearing our sins on Calvary; of His death and resurrection again; of His ascension to be with the Father, and His coming again in glory and power. Job, however, had to reach through doubt and darkness to faith in life after death. How much richer should be our faith, infinitely more precious, stirring us to loving obedience and service for Christ our Redeemer.

A Blessed Inheritance

Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, which according to his abundant mercy hath begotten us again unto a lively hope to an inheritance incorruptible, and undefiled, and that fadeth not away, reserved in heaven for you.—I Peter: 1, 3, 4.

IT WAS with a thrill of pride that Betsy's mother looked over a list of the nicest girls in Betsy's class She had said, "yes," when Betsy wanted to give a luncheon for them. Now what would she do about the shabby old dining room with its veneered oak chairs, short, faded curtains and bare buff-colored walls?

Here is the answer and it cost exactly six dollars. An inexpensive green and yellow flowered chintz was used for draperies from ceiling to floor. The trick of making the windows higher is explained in the diagram. The old window shades were painted a soft, clear green. The backs and seats of the chairs were slip-covered with the chintz with green bindings, and a set of green and yellow china was brought out to lend color to the walls and add a note of interest on green painted stands in front of the windows. The stands were made of empty spools as described in the new Sewing Book 5, which is now ready for mailing. This book also gives directions for a buckram stiffened valance of the type shown here. A Father's Plea

"Dear Driver: Today my daughter started to school as usual. She wore a dark blue dress with a white collar. She had on black shoes and wore blue socks. Her cocker-spaniel whose name is "Scoot," sat on the front porch and whined his canine belief in the folly of education as she waved "goodbye" and started off to the halls of learning.

"Tonight we talked about school. She told me about the girl who sits in front of her —the girl with yellow curls-- and the boy across the aisle who makes funny faces. She told me about her teacher who has eyes in the back of her head—and about the trees in the school yard—and about the big girl who doesn't believe in Santa Claus. We talked about a lot of things—tremendously vital, unimportant things; then we studied spelling, reading and arithmetic— and then to bed.

"She's back there now— back in the nursery—sound asleep, with "Princess Elizabeth" (that's a doll) cuddled in her right arm. You guys wouldn't hurt her, would you? You see, I'm her daddy. When her doll is broken or her finger is cut, or her head gets bumped, I can fix it—but when she starts to school, when she walks across the street, then she's in your hands.

"Shes a nice kid. She can run like a deer and darts about like a chipmunk. She likes to ride horses and swim and hike with me on Sunday afternoons. But I can't be with her all the time—I have to work to pay for her clothes and her education. So please help me look out for her. Please drive carefully. Please drive slowly past the schools and intersections—and please remember that children run from behind parked cars.

"Please don't run over my little girl!"

Some Changes Proposed In The Triple A Program

PROPOSALS SET UP FOR AAA GROUPS

It has been proposed that the AAA divert to payments for soil-building part of the money now paid for complying with soil-depleting allotments, and that "as soon as possible" allotments be based on soil management rather than on the history of the farmer

Those and other proposals were made by the State Committee on Agricultural Programs, after hearing recommendations of county committees, during a recent meeting at Iowa State College

Provide for Emergency

It was proposed that oats and soy beans cut for hay be classified as soil-depleting crops, except in an emergency due to abnormal conditions. At present both oats and soybeans are considered soil-conserving when cut for hay The committee recommended that all flax be considered as soil-depleting but that it be "given special consideration because it is on an import basis"

Recommendation was made that the AAA increase the allotments for, and payments to, farmers on small farms, "where the farm is the principal source of income"

The Iowa congressional delegation was urged to attempt to obtain repeal of the present $10,000 limitation on AAA payments. This $10,000 limitation, it was pointed out, keeps many insurance companies from being in the program with their farms, thus preventing their tenants from obtaining benefits

Boosts Farm Program

The State Committee said that "in order to insure the facilities for farmers to carry on agriculture's part of the national defense program, to provide consumers with an adequate food supply, and to obtain and maintain equitable farm income," it recommended continuation of a farm program including the ever-normal granary and strong emphasis on soil conservation.

A report of the sub-committee on taxation recommended that the farm real estate be appraised according to the relative productivity of the property.

Miss Leona Kelley, Missouri Valley telephone operator, decided to take the day off and go fishing. She went home with a broken nose, the result of being struck in the face with a fishline and sinker in the hands of a near-by fisherman. The gentleman explained that he whipped the rod back too far and hit Miss Kelley on the bridge of her nose, breaking it.

HERE AND THERE IN CONSERVATION

Pennsylvania trappers caught 703 beavers during the 15-day open season on the animals in that state during the past winter. Once nearly extinct in Pennsylvania, stocking and protection have increased their numbers to the point where control measures have become necessary. Prime pelts brought prices of $20 to $24 the past season, while one pelt sold for the top price of $30.

Three men and three boats were required in an hour and a half battle to subdue a 265 sturgeon caught in the Coosa River in Alabama recently The fish was seven feet, four inches in length and was four feet in circumference.

Four beavers on display at the Bangor, Maine, Sportsmen's Show very nearly disrupted the affair. Working overtime during the nite the animals constructed a dam that plugged up the artificial stream that was their temporary abode. The big main floor of the auditorium was flooded by this very impromtu act of the animals.

Maryland's eastern shore is reported to have yielded something new in fur this past winter. Muskrats with permanent waves in their pelts were reported trapped in that area. The Baltimore Director of the Federal Fur Animal Field Station asserted that the animals lacked the normal long guard hairs and that the short hair was wavy, rippled and soft with a silky sheen.

KLEMME YOUNG MEN ARE NOW AVIATORS

Ray Jorgenson, Jr. and Paul Schuldt, Klemme young men who are enrolled in the goverment flying course at Mason City, are now aviators in the first stage of their training. Ray made his solo flight last week on Monday and Paul took off for the first time alone Saturday morning. The Klemme boys were among the first of the thirty students enrolled to do their solo flight.

The boys will continue to do solo flying until they have put in sufficient hours to earn a private pilots license. Besides the course in actual flying, students are required to attend night school three times a week.

MANY TOURISTS VISIT IOWA STATE PARKS

STATE PARK LAWS

Visit several of Iowa's State Parks and Preserves this summer and take advantage of the many forms of recreation that are available in them. A trip to any of the State's Parks and Preserves may be made much more enjoyable by the observance of the laws that hav ebeen set up to govern the 72 areas. These laws, designed to govern conduct in the parks, are relatively simple ones and not oppressive.

So keep these rules in mind the next time you visit one of the parks. We're certain you'll get more enjoyment from your stay.

1. Speed limit for all vehicles on all state park roads is limited to 15 miles per hour. There's little occasion to go faster, in fact, you can't really appreciate a drive through one of these areas at a higher rate of speed.
2. Park only in designated areas. Observance of this simple rule will do much to eliminate congestion along the park roads.
3. Build fires in designated places only; above all, extinguish fires completely before leaving them.
4. Don't remove shrubs, trees, flowers or other plants. Don't deface or injure any of the natural attractions or structures in the area.
5. Firearms are prohibited in all parks and preserves.
6. Place refuse in the receptacles that have been provided for this purpose.
7. Keep dogs and other animals on leash.
8. Closing time in all the parks is set at 10:30 p. m. unless special arrangements have been made with the park custodian. This rule, of course, does not apply to authorized camping in the designated camp areas.
9. Campers are requested to register with the custodian and to advise him when they leave area.
10. Camping is not allowed for longer periods than designated by the State Conservation Commission for the particular work. In no event is camping allowed for a period longer than two weeks.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Everybody today has a chip in the political pot. And everybody, through news dispatches, is watching the play of political hands.

But the action is so fast and so widespread that more is needed than a running report. You want explanation of the strategy, disclosure of the forces, understanding of the personalities involved. And you'll find just that in The Washington Merry-Go-Round, by Drew Pearson and Robert S. Allen, in these columns.

Select Words Helped Hitler Vanquish Foe

His 'Wortenkrieg' Filled Enemies With Terror, Psychologist Explains.

WASHINGTON.—Typewriters are more potent than air bombers, and the armored phrase maker is mightier than heaviest tank—at least in the long run—according to Elmer Wheeler, New York psychologist. He says this despite "events in Europe" and points out that Hitler had prepared the way for his planes and tanks and motorized divisions with sharp-pointed phrases.

"Take that word blitzkrieg," he explained in a recent address before the District of Columbia Dental society. "It's enough to strike terror in any one's heart. And then the suggestion of a secret weapon—which may be three-fourths propaganda—hasn't reassured any one in the Nazis' path. He's also broadcast a new terror—'stukas,' dive bombers."

Word 'Testing' Laboratory.

Mr. Wheeler, who claims the only word laboratory in the world, addressed the dentists on "Words That Win Over Patients." He suggested various methods for them to use in inspiring confidence in their patients and in keeping them coming back instead of neglecting their teeth.

Mr. Wheeler's "word laboratory" is used by many big industrial firms to help them in overcoming sales resistance without a struggle.

"We test words as others test materials," he explained.

For instance, he said a Washington department store that wanted to sell white shoe polish was told to tell customers, "It won't wear off." After that it could hardly keep enough polish in stock.

A flat clothespin manufactured by another client sold 30,000,000 on this phrase: "It won't roll."

Soda dispensers, he illustrated, sell three or four times as many egg malted milks by holding up two eggs in front of the customer and asking: "One egg or two?" If they had said: "Do you want an egg," the chances are the customer would have declined.

Word to the Ladies.

"If the wife wants a new hat," added Mr. Wheeler, "she never should raise the question, but she should say to friend husband, "Should I get a $3 or a $5 hat?"

Slogans, however, are "dated" in the Wheeler word laboratory. The phrases that emerge from the mental test tubes are called "sizzlers."

"The steak in the restaurant," he pointed out, "sells because it sizzles appetizingly, not because it came from a certain type of steer. You can't march the steer through the restaurant."

It's Always Open Season For Corn Jitters, It Seems

The little lady is among the tall corn in a field at Long Beach, California, a city which has a reputation for being a transplanted part of Iowa. The tall corn is also midwestern, springing from Iowa seed.

By PAUL T. STURGIS
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

I don't know which is the hardest, worrying about a corn crop or picking it. If I had my choice I'd take the picking every time.

If the corn crop doesn't fail at least four times every year there is something wrong out here in the Corn Belt. Four times is the least. That's par. Although I do know fellows who can figure out a crop failure any day of the year.

I haven't any figures to prove it, but I'd make a bet there's more headaches caused from worying about the corn crop than there is about balancing the budget. And the worrying can always start early.

Starts in February.

Take February for instance. There is a good month for a failure. A bunch has dropped into the harness shop to soak up a little heat. Outside the wind is moaning around in the bleak cornstalks and the overshoe is in its prime. "Seems like this cold is hanging on," somebody says with a doleful shake of his head. "Don't believe the frost will get out of the ground in time to make a crop."

Well, the word gets around that the crop has failed. The racket store man tells his wife it is going to start doing her own washing. The bank directors scrape the frost off the window and begin to wonder if they ought to rent the room for a beauty parlor and move down into the basement.

Of course the cold breaks up in March and a few robins show up. The boys start flying kites and the drugstore puts on a one-cent sale for a feeler. They start staking out three new filling stations. Then comes a heavy snow and all is sunk again. The corn sure won't make it now. We got to get along with the old bus another year.

Ah! Things Look Better.

April shows up. Things look better. But all the time the wind keeps blowing. First it just blows tumbleweeds and garbage cans around, and then it starts moving shed roofs and the soil itself. A cloud of gloom settles down over everyone. The drugstore cuts its order for ice cream cones in half and the hardware store doubles its order for rope.

It gets drier and drier. Everybody in town is out on the street wondering where all the farmers and rain have gone to. The Wednesday evening bridge club meets and it is like a wake. Nobody brags about the oil burner or the trip to Florida.

Then the Blues.

About this time it starts to rain. Rains for about a week. The first few days there isn't room in town to park a razor blade. Everybody is buying seed and wondering where they can get a vacant lot and plant a few spuds. But as the ram keeps on, worrying starts again, and now they are wondering if it is ever going to quit raining long enough to get a crop in. Maybe they better plant water lilies and start a frog farm.

Everybody has the blues. Corn's sure to rot in the ground. A bunch gathers in the street. They talk about their operations, or they got to have their teeth pulled and they've just been putting it off, or other cheerful subjects like: What is the country coming to anyway?

The sun comes through at last and everybody starts digging dandelions and getting into arguments with their wives about wallpaper. The corn is up and the world is all right again.

But not for so long. It starts to get cold and the thermometers get down in the thirties. That means a May frost. A catastrophe. All the corn will have to be replanted and it will never mature. Dumps are ransacked for tin cans to set over the tomato plants. Something has to be saved.

More Weather Comes.

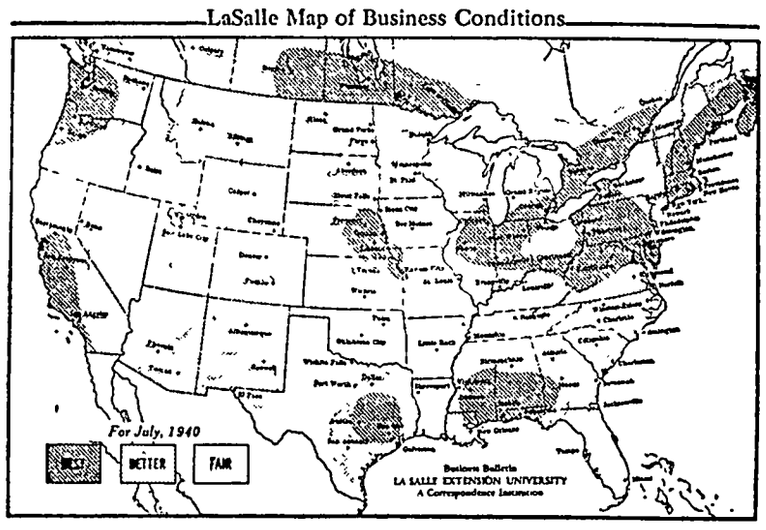
That night the sky clouds over and the frost is sidetracked. The next day turns off warm. By noon there is hardly a businessman in town. They are all out in the country looking up and down the corn rows for prospects for selling everything from washing machines to side delivery rakes. That's when the bad news leaks out.

The cutworms have sneaked up on the corn and are laying it low. Anyway that is what the farmers tell them.

After that, there is a period of cool, damp weather interspersed with warm days. Whatever kind of weather is on hand, something is suffering. If it isn't corn it is the politicians, for the June primaries are not far off. Candidates don't kow whether to let their hair grow long and wear a black hat like a statesman, or wear overalls and get the vote out on their milking records. If crops look good, the statesman pose is the best. But if it looks like the chinch bugs might be able to get in and do their dirty work. look out.

War News Dominates Business

LaSalle Map of Business Conditions



The above map, accompanying the July Bulletin of U. S. business conditions issued by La Salle Extension university, illustrates the current trade picture in the various sections of the nation. Production has been moving steadily upward, similar to last year's trend at this time and volume of trade is seven per cent higher than a year ago.

By L. G. ELLIOTT
President, La Salle Extension University.

CHICAGO.—In spite of depressing news, business has been steadily pushing ahead under the combined stimulus of three major factors. First, the orders from abroad for war materials have been greatly increased. This expansion continued even after the French breakdown. Second, the total governmental expenditures for relief and for the national defense program are rapidly becoming larger. Third, buyers are anticipating still higher expenditures in the future and are placing larger orders now.

The gains have been most striking in the heavy-goods industries, such as steel, machinery, aviation, shipbuilding, machine tools and equipment. Significant gains have also been made in other important lines, as the textile industry where operations have been speeded up in both cotton and woolen mills.

While business volume has been expanding, prices of many commodities have declined. The drop in the prices of farm products was halted at a point several per cent above a year ago. Some recovery has taken place due to the government farm program and to the increased consumer demand that has accompanied greater industrial activity. As long as these continue they should further strengthen farm prices.

The prices for industrial products, especially those of metals and manufactured goods, have held relatively stable.

Business faces the problem of adjusting itself to new factors which are constantly changing. At the same time, it must guard against the possible adverse effects of future events that cannot now be accurately predicted. The need is more urgent than ever for alert and capable management in every business enterprise in order to adapt policies and methods to current conditions.

The Washington MERRY-GO-ROUND

DREW PEARSON & ROBERT ALLEN

Washington, D. C.

BRITISH WEST INDIES

Within a two hour plane flight of the Panama canal lies the British island of Jamaica, wich is 99 per cent black and 100 per cent restive. Intelligence reports from Jamaica warn of the danger of a Negro uprising.

Jamaican Negroes have never been prosperous, but this year has been unusually bad. The cane crop was a failure, the banana crop was ruined by a hurricane, and on top of this, word is being passed around among the Negroes that their misery would disappear under German rule.

As a result, British authorities, practically deserted by the home government, are keeping a watchful eye on their arsenal.

Unrest in Jamaica would create a double problem for the United States and the other American republics. Roosevelt has already warned European dictators that he will tolerate no change of sovereignty in this hemisphere. But the situation would be embarrassing if the natives of Jamaica were to revolt against England and invite in Hitler.

Note—Jamaica's harbor, Kingston, is one of the finest in the West Indies and just 600 miles from the Panama canal. At the beginning of the war, Britain held in this harbor a convoy fleet of 70 ships.

Changing Attitude.

Confidential reports cabled back to the state department show that the French people have become bitter not only toward Great Britain but against the United States.

Sentiment has been so vitriolic that it was the subject of a conversation held by Ambassador Tony Biddle, who substituted for Bullitt in Bordeaux. Sumner Welles also mentioned it a little sadly to the French ambassador in Washington.

The French simply cannot understand why the British and Americans did not come to their aid. Only their men were killed, their country destroyed, and their prisoners are now seen marching behind German guards. This has so infuriated them that now many Frenchmen almost relish the possibility that their fleet may be used against the British.

Another effect has been a change of feeling in France toward the Germans. Frenchmen, especially in Paris, are beginning to say:

"Well, after all we are Europeans, so let's be Europeans. To . . . with the Anglo-Saxons. They can't be depended upon. Maybe the Germans are not so bad, after all."

This attitude has been helped by the excellent behavior of the Nazis in Paris. There are almost no troops on the street. Nazis have kept out of sight, and the arrests made by Herr Himmler's Gestapo have been done very quietly.

Meanwhile, some of the French newspapers, obviously coked up by Nazi subsidies, have begun a terrific attack upon the British, together with a campaign to educate the French people regarding the better qualities of the Germans.

The French are still inclined to look upon their conquerors as Germans, not as members of the National Socialist party. Few Frenchmen seem to realize that this is a revolution, not a war, and that Hitler is conquering Europe for National Socialism, which has made more far-reaching changes in the capitalistic system than Russian Communism.

Hitler's Tactics.

It has become increasingly obvious that the smartest thing Hitler did was to knock off the countries of Europe one at a time instead of permitting them to gang up on him.

When Hitler took Czecho-Slovakia, for instance, the Poles were encouraged to take a small piece of Czech territory. Then after they had taken it, Hitler took back the little piece of Czecho-Slovakia plus one-half of Poland.

One reason Hitler was able to take Poland was that he promised Russia the other half. And now Stalin, realizing his own peril, is frantically defending his Polish-Baltic border.

One year ago, talking to American diplomats in Berlin, Nazi leaders made no secret of their intention to employ the same strategy in the Western hemisphere; in other words, to isolate the United States from Britain and France, then provoke revolutions in South America and take those countries away two and three at a time. The United States itself, Nazi leaders said, would be relatively easy. Social revolution was sure to come in a year or so, at which time all Germany needed to do was to aid the revolutionary party.

Washington, he insisted that the capital was safe. "What the devil will they do here?" he asked one officer who warned him of the weakness of its defense, "No, no! Baltimore is the place, sir; that is of so much more consequence."

Apostle of Preparedness.

In contrast to his blindness was the foresight of one man, an apostle of preparedness whose clear-headedness and patriotic service amidst the blundering efforts to wage war against Great Britain, are all but forgotten by his fellow-Americans. He was Gen. William H. Winder of Maryland, who had served valorously with militia from his state on the Niagara frontier in 1812, been captured by the British at Stony Creek in Canada in 1813 and had been held a prisoner of war until the spring of 1814 when he was exchanged.

Winder had prepared a well-thought-out plan of defense against the threatened invasion. It contemplated establishing a camp of two or three thousand regulars between the eastern branch of the Potomac and the Patuxent rivers in Maryland and the concentration of 10,000 militia near Washington. Madison laid Winder's plan before his cabinet and it was at once adopted.

A new military district was formed and Winder was appointed commander of it. Next the government made a requisition upon the states for a total of 93,000 militia to be organized at home and held in readiness to act. The naval defenses were entrusted to Commodore Joshua Barney, who was in the Patuxent with a small flotilla of gunboats.

Winder would thus have an army of 15,000, the largest force of militia that had yet been put in the field. But it soon became evident that it was only a paper army. For there was almost unbelievable official stupidity and delay in carrying out the plan. Although the governor of Maryland lived within an easy day's ride from the national capital, he did not receive a copy of his requisition until six days after it was ordered and the governor of Pennsylvania did not receive his until 10 days afterward.

And it was not until July 12, when the British appeared in heavy force in the Chesapeake bay, that Eustis placed in Winder's hands a copy of the requisition and then it was accompanied by a cautious order telling him, in case of an invasion, to "be careful to avoid unnecessary calls, and to apportion the call to the exigency."

A Heartbreaking Task.

Undaunted by what must have seemed a heartbreaking task, Winder started out to make the best of a bad situation. He visited every part of the region to be defended, inspected every fortification and bombarded Eustis with urgent appeals for haste in making preparations for defense. On July 16 he wrote "The door of Washington (meaning Annapolis) is wide open and cannot be shut with the few troops under my command." Fort Madison there was defenseless and too unhealthful for troops to occupy it. He begged in vain for efforts to save that post and made stirring appeals for the people of Maryland to come forward to help defend their state.

Notwithstanding all his appeals and the imminence of the danger, the people seemed as apathetic as their federal government. By August 1 Winder reported that he had in camp only 1,000 regulars. About 4,000 militia had been enrolled but they were yet to be collected and, so far, the government had neglected to call for cavalry and riflemen, both of which were vitally needed.

The result of all this blundering was inevitable and is too well known to all Americans to need retelling at length here. Briefly, it was this: On August 16 the small British squadron in the Chesapeake was re-enforced by a fleet of 21 vessels under Admiral Cochrane who was joined by another under Commodore Malcolm. These had on board several thousand soldiers commanded by General Ross, one of Wellington's best subordinates.

This British force bottled up Commodore Barney's flotilla in the Patuxent and, when it became apparent that it was about to be captured by the invaders, he burned his boats and with his men joined the American land forces. By this time the situation was so alarming that militia and volunteers began flocking to Winder's standards to help repel the invaders. Eventually he had a force of some 7,000 men, of which, however, only 900 were regulars. It is probable that with this force, if concentrated, he might have been able to have repelled the enemy.

Civilian Interference.

But his efforts were nullified by constant interference from the President and members of his cabinet. They were totally without military experience, with the possible exception of James Monroe, secretary of state, who had served in the Revolution. But he probably did more harm than good by his interference when the American forces came to grips with the British at the Battle of Bladensburg on August 24.

As was to be expected, the hastily assembled militia and untrained volunteers broke under the onslaughts of the British regulars and Winder's forces were soon in full retreat. Among the heroic dead was Commodore Barney.

Late the next evening General Ross and Admiral Cockburn, with a guard of only 200 men, rode into the deserted capital. For the President, members of his cabinet and all other high government officials had departed immediately after the disaster at Bladensburg. The President, who had gone out to see the battle, had sent word back to his wife, Dolly Madison, to flee. But she had paused long enough to snatch up the precious parchment on which was written the Declaration of Independence and to take the portrait of Washington, painted by Stuart, out of its frame in the White House before seeking a place of safety across the river in Virginia.

In retaliation for the Americans having burned the government in York, Canada, earlier in the war, the British decided to do some burning themselves. So the torch was applied to the unfinished Capitol, the White House, the Treasury building, the arsenal, the barracks which had been occupied by 3,000 troops, the office of the National Intelligencer, a tavern and a few private homes. That night, lighted by the glare of the flames which could be seen as far away as Baltimore, the invaders marched out. They left behind the blackened walls of our Capitol and the home of our Chief Executive monuments to a fatuous belief that "it can't happen here."

Entrancing Rubber Flowers To Wear With Your Swim Suit

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

A THEME for poet and painter, and as to those whose mission it is to tell the story of fashion in columns such as this, the dictionary, quick! It's super-glamorous adjectives we must have to describe the beauty of water-sprayed flowers worn by fashion's mermaids. The happy thought about these flowers is that, being made of rubber, they come up out of watery depths looking as fresh as flowers in a summer garden.

It is indeed a pretty fashion that has been launched of wearing flowers made of rubber to wear with swim suits. There is simply no limit to the possibilities this fashion envisions in the way of picture effects. When one sees the charming bathing ensembles by Kleinert that are enhanced with flowers, one is brought to a realization of the importance of the role rubber is playing in the fashion realm.

Faithful reproduction of the color and design of real flowers has taken years of training in workmanship. It requires artistic ability-plus to successfully reproduce in rubber realistic camelias, violets, water lilies, anemones, sweet peas, forget-me-nots, gardenias, roses, cornflowers, dahlias and chrysanthemums such as fashion offers this season. We are showing below in the picture just a few types available, and if you go in quest you will be shown many more where swim suit accessories are sold. The swim suits here pictured are most as interesting as the flowers that trim them, in that they are made of a new rubber fabric that has a crepe-like knitted surface that can be softly draped to give a dressmaker touch. From the outside these attractive, practical rubber suits appear to be seamless. In reality the seams and reinforcements have been scientifically designed to prevent the possibility of ripping. Being of rubber, when you emerge from the water your suit will dry quickly, fit smoothly and feel wonderfully comfortable.

Were the accompanying illustration printed in color, as we wish it might be, one would see how amazingly realistic are the tones and tints of the flowers. The lady shown to the left is putting out to sea in a dressmaker swim suit which reflects Hawaiian influence in its wide-skirted silhouette and garland of turquoise and coral sweet peas that outlines the bodice top. Dress, flowers and matching turban are all of rubber. The striking beachbag flung over her shoulders is rubber lined. The picture centered below gives a close-up view of the flower arrangement.

The costume to the right presents an interesting study in rubber flower culture. This clever maiden selected a flower bedecked suit in deep pink. Under the flower cluster a "mad-money" pocket is hidden, which also holds locker key and lipstick, which is self explanatory as to why this suit is called "pocketeer."

And now for another revelation in rubber artistry. This time it is rubber jewelry. Note the matching halo to hold tresses in place and bracelet which the lovely lady pictured in the center at the top is wearing. Blue and yellow corn flowers form the straps of the bathing suit and the jewelry. This ensemble is called "debutante" no doubt in honor of its wearer.

(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

Red, White and Blue

"Three cheers for the red, white and blue" and it's fashion that is joining in the chorus in accents loud and clear. This stunning hat and bag ensemble sounds a patriotic note in its red, white and blue color scheme. It is woven of cord in the three colors and emphasizes the importance of matching accessories. Accessory sets simply thrill with exciting adventures such as a bag and hat made of print cotton of the old-fashioned calico type. Polka dot bags and hats are the rage. Latest is hat, bag and shoes made of print in bizarre colorings.

Field Flowers

Daisies seem to be the winning design in the flower group, with daffodils and lilies next.

Gingham Gaiety

Brightly checked gingham is a gay touch to add to a tailored summer suit.

Felt Cartwheels In for Popularity

If hat designers have their way, big-brimmed hats will be the outstanding successes of this summer. Felts as big as cartwheels are shown again and again and, to make them more interesting, their brims and crowns are intricately manipulated. Some are arranged in fan shape, others swoop back from the face and are trimmed with gay feathers. Almost all of them, even the largest, are trimmed with veils —some long enough to reach the waist.

Bag and Bracelet In Red Style Note

The fashion for bright red hats, bags, jewelry and other accessories is going strong this summer. Try this combination to enliven your navy, white or black costume—a stunning bag in red leather of fabric, together with a striking red bracelet which may be of the carved plastic type or one of the new poppy red flower effects. It is within the bounds of good taste to add a matching necklace if your enthusiasm for red carries you that far.

Trim It With Lace Is Now Sure Fire

When in doubt trim it with lace. Bolts and bolts of fine lace edging are contributing to the news in summer fashions. Hats are very smart with bows, bands, brims and crowns of lace. Accessories include matching lace bags and belts of lace—and it's chic to carry a lace parasol, too!

Summery Frock For Slim Figure

SWEET and summery as a basket of flowers, this frock (8729) is perfect for warm afternoons. In printed silk, or flower-patterned cottons like voile or batiste, it will look so cool and fresh and feminine, with its open-topped sleeves, heart-shaped neckline, and frills that put all the emphasis up at the top, an effect always becoming to slim figures. The skirt has the lilting grace of circular fullness.

And notice how little detailing is required—just a few gathers at the waistline; otherwise it's all straight, easy seams. Even beginners can make it, guided by the step-by-step sew chart included in the pattern.

Pattern No. 8729 is designed for sizes 12, 14, 16, 18 and 20. Size 14 requires 4⅛ yards of 39-inch material without nap; 2¾ yards of ruffling. Send order to:

India Leads Entire World In Irrigated Land Area

With an irrigated area totaling some 50,000,000 acres—more than twice the irrigated acreage of her nearest competitor, the United States—India affords the most emphatic illustration of the extent to which man has been able to alter natural disposition of waters in order to assist agriculture.

Of the many powerful works which have been erected for this purpose, the barrage at Sukkur on the Indus river—officially known as the Lloyd Barrage and Canals construction scheme—is the most spectacular recent development. Commanding a gross area 7,500,000 acres, of which 6,250,000 are cultivable, the entire scheme when completed represents an expenditure of some $72.000 000—an earthwork of about 279,000,000 cubic yards to supply dependable flow through a network of canals and field channels amounting to some 52,600 miles.

The barrage itself resembles a two-level bridge rather than a dam. Between the piers supporting the platforms are swung 50-ton steel gates, electrically operated, to check the flow of the Indus, raising the water level on the upstream side and thus supplying the six enormous trunk canals, three on each bank, which run on down into Sind and the Khairpur state. The barrage and head regulators consist of a low masonry dam of 66 spans of 60 feet each, making a total length of about a mile.

The floodgates of the new system were opened in 1932; prior to that time some of the canals had already been in operation and construction of further works has continued since then. This harnessing of the mighty Indus, in which as many as 60,000 men have been employed at one time, is expected to bring into use a section of northwest India a quarter the area of England, or a half million acres larger than the entire cultivated area of Egypt.

The new channels flow through a desert area in which rich soil from 40 to 90 feet in depth is covered by a thin layer of sand which in some places is blown up into hills. Gradual leveling of these hills through wind action will improve the productivity of the intervening land by increasing its lightness.

Moropus Called Stupid Animal of Miocene Age

Big, stupid fellow with a head like that of a rhinoceros, a body like that of a horse and funny feet with huge claws, resembling somewhat those which would have been needed by a bear so gigantic that none like it has ever lived, for all of this, which describes a fossil animal placed on exhibition at the Field Museum of Natural History, in Chicago, there has been derived from the language of the Greeks the name moropus.

Moropus cooki, as the creature's full scientific name reads, gets its "surname" or species name from Capt. James Cook, an Indian scout now more than 80 years old, upon whose ranch at Agate Springs, Sioux county, Neb., the skeleton was found. In addition to the skeleton which has been re-assembled at the museum by James H. Quinn, of the paleontological staff, the museum has on display a large mural painting, by Charles R Knight, in which the animal is restored as scientific research indicates it must have appeared in life.

The grotesque moropus lived in the Miocene age, about 20,000 000 years ago, according to Elmer S Riggs, curator of paleontology. Only a limited number of specimens have been found in sandstone formations of Nebraska and Wyoming.

'Merry-Go-Round' Windows

Window shoppers and pedestrians are going to see a good many lively shows on America's "main streets" in the not-too-distant future--and there'll be no admission charge Merchants will soon be displaying their wares on "merry-go-round" stages which will carry a stream of merchandise in and out of show windows, Harold M. Alexander of Toledo, industrial architect, told a meeting of the Illuminating Engineering society in Philadelphia Along with this prediction, Alexander said there would be slow but sure elimination of the "garish lights and discordant signs of America's main streets" and he forecast an era in which "harmonious blending of business-street architecture and luminous storefronts of structural glass will make window-shopping an artistic treat instead of a nightmare of confusing, loud color."

Piston Action

The bureau of standards says that the piston in an engine travels farther, and therefore faster, while the crank pin is moving over the upper half than over the lower half of the crank circle. This is because the crank pin in moving around the crank circle has a horizontal (sidewise) component as well as a vertical (up and down) component to its motion. When the crank pin is moving on the upper half of the crank circle, both of these components act to move the piston in the same direction, causing a relatively large and rapid motion When the crank pin is moving on the lower half of the crank circle, the components act to move the piston in opposite directions, producing a relatively small and slow motion.

Arkansas Pioneers Used Cabin Door for Sundial

Antique clocks are rarely included in the furnishings owned by old residents in the northern Arkansas hills. The pioneers could waste no covered wagon space on things not absolutely essential for hewing down timber, constructing cabins and tilling the land. Homemade devices for telling time have given rise to a picturesque phraseology. The true mountaineer tells time by the sun. Some of them are accurate to the minute.

A hillman will refer to time as "an hour before sun-up," an hour before sun-down," "straight-up by the sun," "moon-rise time," "an hour by th' sun." In some of the old-time cabins there were "sun-marks" on the floor. When the house was built a mark would be placed where the sun shone through the open door at noon. The housewives timed their cooking by the lengthening streak of sunshine. There was a sort of primitive satisfaction in living and working by the sun. Many men who now possess watches prefer to tell time by the sun.

Other old hill people used the puncheon boards—logs split in two and the flat side used as the floor—to tell time. In one section of Arkansas the phrase "puncheon time" still is used. Most of the puncheons were approximately the same width, and the lengthening of sunshine or shadow on them was counted by puncheons, which usually approximated one hour. Thus "a puncheon until noon" would be 1I o'clock, and "a puncheon after noon, straight up and down," would be one o'clock.

It is said that when the first sawmill was erected at Fayetteville, Ark , the customers demanded that the "timber floorin' " they purchased be the exact width of the old-time puncheons, so that they could still live by "puncheon time."

Value of Wheat Revealed In Early Biblical Times

Wheat has been the most important cereal in international commerce since Biblical times, says the National Geographic society.

"Wheat's supremacy has endured throughout history," the society reported, "since Biblical days when Hiram, king of Tyre, sent timber of cedar and fir for King Solomon's temple at Jerusalem in barter for 20,000 measures of wheat.

"Stock tickers on modern exchanges record the same transaction for which Jacob's 10 sons journeyed from Israel's famine to Egypt's ever-normal granary established by their brother, Prime Minister Joseph.

"Wheat, called King of Cereals, is simply grass gone handsomely to seed. Each flower packs all available earth's foods and sun's energy into its fruitage of golden nuggets. The ripe grains are in fact seeds, cunningly stored with food for the coming winter."

The society, in the first of a series of reports on "Commodities: Common and Uncommon," said development of American wheat resources—and the machinery to harvest vast tracts—gave the world its first inexpensive wheat. Before American mass production dropped the price of wheat, only the rich could afford wheat bread. The masses ate black bread of barley or rye.

"As American inventiveness gave large-scale planting a sudden impetus," the report said, "the winning of the western plains gave it a place. Minnesota earned the official nickname of the Wheat state."

Norway Used Dragons

China is not the only country in which dragons are used as a decorative motif. The old "stavkirker" or wooden churches, built centuries ago when Christianity was young are forming one of few links between modern Norway and the Viking past, still show dragon heads on gable ends. For centuries the dragon was one of the favorite emblems of pagan Norway, especially as a figurehead for the prows of her Viking ships. The men who built the ships and decorated them with dragon heads also built the nation's first churches. The church structure allowing them more exercise of imagination, Viking carpenters not only put dragons on the gables but also carved those emblems into the columns, the capitals and even the door frames of the buildings.

Washington's Home

George Washington wrote of Mount Vernon: "No estate in the United States is more pleasantly situated than this. It lies in a high, dry and healthy country, 300 miles by water from the sea, and on one of the finest rivers in the world. . . . I can truly say that I had rather be at Mount Vernon with a friend or two about me than to be attended at the seat of government by the officers of state and the representatives of every power in Europe."

Harnessing the Sun

More than 12,000 residents of Miami, Fla., are harnessing sunlight to get hot water. So powerful is Miami's sun that a glass tank containing coils of copper tubing on the roof of a house will heat water to 205 degrees, and in six hours enough hot water can be run off into a thermos-like reservoir to last the average family three days. The complete equipment sells for about $175.

HENS TAKING VACATION SHOULD BE "LAID OFF"

It's a matter of simple arithmetic to tell if the poultry flock needs culling, reminds W. R. Whitfield, poultry specialist at Iowa State College. Merely count the eggs, then count the hens. If there are less than half as many eggs as hens, the flock needs culling.

With the coming of hot weather, many hens go out of production—and of course continue to eat Whitfield says that during this "vacation period" a bird may eat 6 to 7 pounds of feed each month with no eggs to show for it. He suggests that such non-laying hens be sold early in the season to cut down overhead.

Another loss comes through death of many birds in summer, from overfat and other causes.

New feathers found in the poultry yard indicates that some hens are molting and have stopped laying.

On good pasture, cows producing less than a pound of fat a day do not need grain. But high-producing animals cannot eat enough grass to meet their needs.

Eggs intended for storage market should not be washed.

PRONUNCIATION

A suburban housewife entered a jeweler's shop and leaned confidingly over the counter.

"Mr. Gold," she commenced gushingly, "I want your advice. I've just bought this little ring at the sale across the street, but I don't know how to pronounce the name. Is it turkoise or turkwoise?"

The jeweler handled the ring.

"The correct pronunciation, madam," he said after a while, "is glass."

Star Dust
STAGE SCREEN RADIO

By VIRGINIA VALE
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

EVER since Cecil B. DeMille used bathtubs as an aide in making his heroines more glam- orous our screen players have showered and scrubbed before the camera, with due discretion. Remember Joan Crawford's bubble bath in "The Women"? That was one of the screen's most elegant bathing bits, in re- cent years.

But in "The Howards of Virginia" Cary Grant takes a bath that may get him into trouble with the his- torians, though if it does nobody will be to blame.

"The Howards of Virginia," you'll recall, is based on that popular book, "The Tree of Liberty." The author, Elizabeth Page, did exten- sive research for it; Producer-Direc- tor Frank Lloyd had experts at work for months before a camera turned.

But—the author wrote a scene in which the hero takes a bath in Raleigh tavern, at Williamsburg, Va. The first regulation bathtub was not brought to America until several years after the story takes place. Research failed to uncover anything in bathtub styles current for the period; in fact, the general impression seemed to be that the male gentry performed such ablu- tions in the Potomac river.

So Lloyd used his imagination, and decreed that Cary Grant should take his bath in a round wooden tub; maybe that's not according to Hoyle, historically, but it's the best he could do.

Describing his gift as "the least we can do in these troubled times," Frederic Mareh recently purchased and presented to the American Red Cross, for use in Europe, a com- pletely equipped ambulance. He and Mrs. March were asked to par- ticipate in a benefit, but he was un- able to do so because of his work in Paramount's "Victory." He said that he thought the ambulance would be more welcome than their ap- pearance.

When a radio program comes on the air with its studio audience laughing, somebody has worked hard to get just that effect. Fibber McGee has an old-fashioned watch which dangles from his vest pock- et. With 85 seconds before the broadcast he checks the time anx- iously with the control room; with one second to go, Fibber nonchalant- ly says, "Oh, shucks, we got lots of time," tosses the watch over the footlights into the audience, and they roar with laughter.

"Musical Americana," the West- inghouse radio program, has changed time—it is now heard on Tuesday nights at nine, Eastern Day- light Saving Time—and has also changed location. It is broadcast from New York, so that, if you're visiting the city and want to attend a broadcast, you can do so. You can arrange for tickets at the West- inghouse building at the New York World's fair; if you can't get over to Radio City, you can listen to it as a special rebroadcast from the 120-feet-high Singing Cascades.

CABINET MEETING

The President—Gentlemen, these are your two new cabinet associ- ates, Mr. Knox and Mr. Stimson.

Secretary Hopkins—Pinch me; I still think I'm dreaming.

Secretary Ickes—I was positive this was coming.

Mr. Hopkins—What made you pos- itive?

Mr. Ickes—The boss' statement that he wasn't even considering it.

* * *

Mr. Knox—I feel strange here, don't you, Henry?

Mr. Stimson—No; I'm equally un- comfortable anywhere.

Mr. Knox—Gosh, I never thought I'd land in a Democratic adminis- tration.

Mr. Stimson—If you're surprised, imagine my amazement!

Mr. Ickes—Why should either of you be surprised? A Republican is apt to wind up anywhere. Look at me!

* * *

Mr. Knox (still incredulous)—It seems funny here when I think I ran on the ticket in opposition to Roose- velt.

Mr. Ickes—That was no opposi- tion!

The President—Now Frank and Henry, you know all the boys. There's Mr. Morgenthau who has charge of all the money.

Mr. Morgenthau—All what money?

The President—And you all know Harold Ickes. Harold, are you sur- prised to find Frank Knox here?

Mr. Ickes—No. I always said Re- publicans make the best Democrats.

The President—You all know Miss Perkins. She is the secretary of labor.

Miss Perkins—Did he say Is or WAS?

The President—And you know Harry Hopkins, the secretary of . . . of . . . what are you secretary of, Harry?

Mr. Hopkins—I lost all track of that.

The President—And there's Mr. Hull.

Voice—I propose that the cabinet now sing "Hull, Hull, the gang's all here."

Mr. Stimson—Well, Mr. President, I am anxious to get to work as sec- retary of war. There is much to be done. I assume I am to have full authority there.

The President—You'll find out.

Mr. Knox—I think I'll go over to the navy department at once and get things going.

The President—I'll be right with you.

Mr. Knox—That's what I'm afraid of.

TELEVISION OPERA

TELEVISION is making headway. More and more homes are now getting their radio noises illustrated.

It is possible not only for the fam- ily to argue over the radio words, but over the radio pictures.

Grand opera got its first tele- vision broadcast the other night. It proved that it is entirely possi- ble to throw a fat tenor's voice into your living room, and the tenor with it.

Elmer Twitchell is so sensitive to the conventions and such a slave to form that he dresses for television opera.

"It is a nuisance to dress for a radio program," said Elmer today, "but I never can get used to opera in any form unless I am all dolled up for it. I climbed into my dress clothes as soon as I found that Pagli- acci was coming over the radio. I just couldn't help it."

But what made Elmer sore was the way Mrs. Twitchell reacted to opera by television. She went out and bought a new ermine wrap for it.

"Believe it or not," declared El- mer today, "that woman has me run ragged. Do you know what she proposed when it was announced that the Metropolitan Opera com- pany would broadcast an opera by television, right into our living room?"

"No."

"She put on all her jewelry, had a facial, spent four hours having her hair done and then insisted that we go over to the corner garage, hire a sedan with chauffeur and be driven right up to our radio set in style!"

JOB'S REPENTANCE AND RESTORATION

LESSON TEXT—Job 42:1-13.
GOLDEN TEXT—And the Lord turned the captivity of Job, when he prayed for his friends.—Job 42:10.

The problem of suffering, like every other question arising in man's inquiring heart, finds its true solution in a right view of God. Job found it to be so. As long as he and his friends concentrated their attention on his person and his troubles, they only became more deeply involved in confusion and doubt. Much of their discussion was on a high moral and philosophical plane, and they were all doubtless earnest and capable men, but in the end Job learned, and they learned through him, that the real difficulty was that they did not know God.

Then God Himself appeared and brought before Job a panorama of the glorious works of God and His bless- ings upon mankind (chaps. 38-41). Where was Job when the world was created (38:4)? Who holds the world together (38:6)? What is the origin of light (38:19)? What about the glory of the snowflake (38:22)? Job is told to consider the hand of God in the animal kingdom (chap. 39) and upon those that dwell in the sea (chap. 41). It dawned upon Job that he had been arguing against the providences of the all-knowing and all-powerful One—the eternal God. In that conviction and the repent- ance which it brought forth, he ex- perienced—

I. Renewed Fellowship (vv. 1-6).

Job came to the realization that he had not really known God Him- self until now. His religious experi- ences and convictions hitherto, pre- cious and important as they were, had been by "the hearing of the ear," but now he had met God and all was changed. Fellowship with the Lord was renewed, but on an infinitely higher plane. Job had a real revival in his life which caused him to "abhor" everything that he had said and done; yes, even to set himself aside and to take God to be all and in all.

Our churches are full of people who only know God by hearsay. They have heard about Jesus Christ since their childhood, but they have never met Him. They have read of the Holy Spirit, but they have never known His power. We need a God- sent revival, one like those of the past which "have broken out like fire . . . consuming dead and out- worn systems, burning sin like a roaring flame, and casting a new light across men's pathways" (E. L. Douglass).

II. Restored Usefulness (vv. 7-10a).

God's rebuke of Job's friends is significant, for it centers, not in their failure to deal rightly with Job, but their failure properly to represent God. It is a tremendous- ly serious matter to attempt to tell others about God, for in doing so we must not in any way misrepre- sent Him. To stand before men as religious teachers and leaders and not to know Him so well that we rep- resent Him rightly, is to invite His judgment and condemnation.

Job, on the other hand, was re- stored to a place of honor and use- fulness. His friends, who thought they knew so much more than he about God, are told to ask Job to pray for them. He thus was af- forded the opportunity of returning good for evil and was again enabled to serve God in serving his fellow men. Salvation is by faith (Eph. 2:8, 9); but being saved, we are re- stored to the place of usefulness to God.

III. Returned Prosperity (vv. 10b-13).

The abundant blessing of God upon Job is described in oriental terms of money, herds of cattle, and of a large family. These are the tangible evidences of God's bless- ing, and even to us today they speak of a liberal and loving God. God can and does prosper His own obedi- ent children even in material things.

Such outward mercies, however, only feebly represent the blessings of the soul, the ultimate and eternal joys of the spirit. They point us, it is true, to the assurance that as we yield ourselves in uncondition- al obedience to God's will, we may confidently trust Him with the dark days of sorrow and affliction, as well as the days of sunshine and pros- perity. No matter how tangled may seem the threads on this side of the loom, we know that the heavenly Father behind the scenes is weav- ing the pattern of beauty which shall one day be revealed as we stand complete in Christ.

Death of Saul

So Saul died for his transgression which he transmitted against the Lord, even against the word of the Lord, which he kept not, and also for asking counsel of one that had a familiar spirit, to enquire of it.—I Chronicles 10:13.

Temptation

To resist temptation once is not a sufficient proof of honesty.

GOD BLESS

AMERICA!

And He has blessed our country . . . but His benediction imposes upon each and every one of us the sacred duty of defending every priceless heritage that .we .have been granted. With so great a portion of humanity inured to alamity and injustice, let each American silently consecrate himself and his conscience to the preservation of every American ideal . . . ideals that are more precious today than ever before.

Yes, we still can have faith in man's higher destiny even though nations, once the homes of great cultures, crash back into abject slavery. There can still be hope though elsewhere fearful death-dealing machines are thrust into the hands of children, though churches are barricaded, books destroyed, though millions of families are scattered to the four winds.

These things have not happened here and with His continued aid and guidance, we will see that they shall not happen here.

Among his many graces showered on us in the chapter of American liberty. We are proud to be a part of that first line of defense of American liberties . . . to always stand militantly at the side of every true American against the inroads of doctrines seeking to destroy freedom of speech, freedom of peace assembly, freedom of religious worship and freedom of the press.

UNCLE SAM'S POCKETBOOK

The official Daily Treasury Statement of July 11 showed the financial condition of the Treasury since July 1, 1939, to be:

Expenditures . .	$373,601,375.03
Receipts	$142,428,849 78
In the hole . . .	$231,172,525.25

The gross Federal debt on that date was $43,058,340,481.20.

Your per capita share of that debt is $331.22.

OATS CHEAP FEED FOR YOUNG SWINE

Because of the difference in price between sealed corn and new oats, it is obvious that considerable oats soon will be fed to hogs, says E. L. Quaife, extension animal husbandry man at Iowa State College

He gives a few pointers on some good methods of feeding:

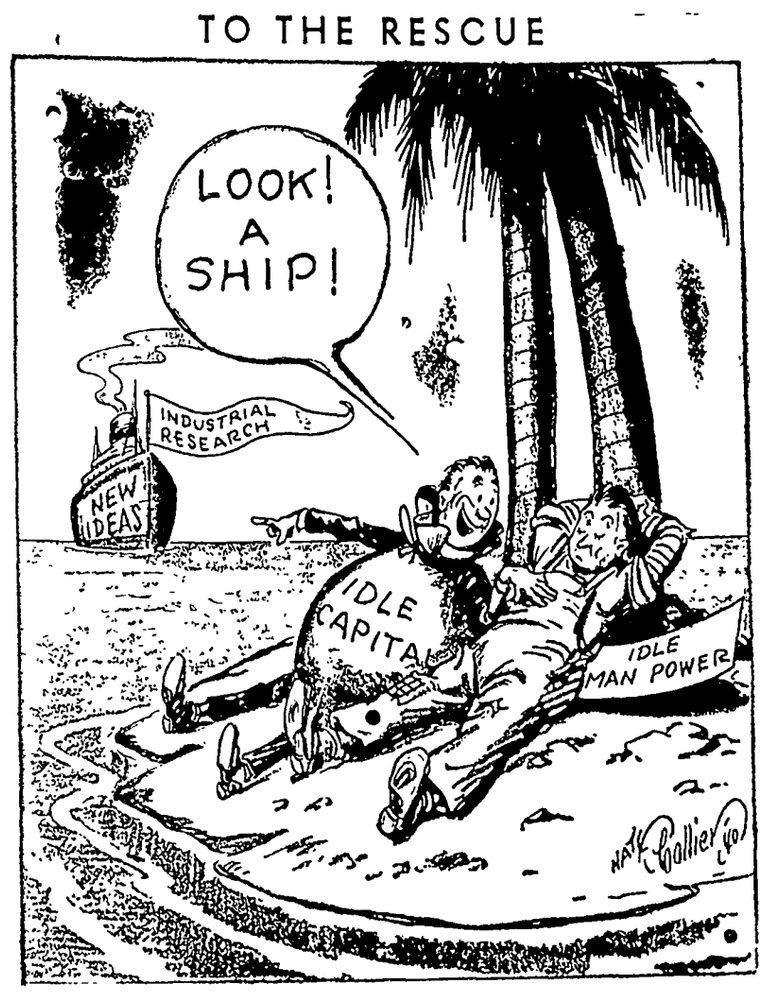
Hulled Oats Good

Because hulled oats are low in fiber and are well balanced in protein and carbohydrate content, they are excellent for little pigs Hulled oats may be fed either in groat form, or as rolled or ground hulled oats. If fed alone it may be better to grind them, but if they are mixed with other ground grain they may fed in whole form.

After pigs weigh 50 or 60 pounds, hulled oats become too costly to displace much corn. These pigs should be fed oats ground to a medium degree or fineness and soaked overnight to make a thick slop. They will not eat enough dry whole oats or dry ground oats to make satisfactory gains.

Use Other Grains Too

Even though oats are reasonably cheap compared to corn, it might not pay to feed only oats, probably two-thirds ground oats and one-third shorts, or two-thirds ground oats and one-third ground corn, or two-thirds oats and one-third ground rye, or two-thirds groats and one-third ground barley. Soaking these from morning until evening and feeding as a thick slop would make for faster gains and be just as economical. If fed dry, the water supply should be near at hand.



Iowa Not Adapted To Growing Good Alfalfa Seed Says Ames

CHANCE OF GETTING OWN ALFALFA SEED NOT GOOD

On farms where more alfalfa is grown than is needed for hay, it is better to put the surplus in the silo than to attempt harvesting it for seed, advises H. D Hughes, farms crops head at Iowa State College.

Unless the weather has been dry and other conditions are favorable seed does not set satisfactorily in this region But for farmers who do wish to harvest their own seed, Hughes gives these suggestions

Common alfalfa will never set a good seed crop in Iowa, even in the driest summer. Grimn or Cossack is suggested.

Only in seasons of extreme drought, and then on high and dry fields, will these varieties set seed satisfactorily And if dry weather is anticipated and alfalfa is left for seed, and then there is a rainy spell, there will be no seed and the qualtiy of the hay will be poor.

When seed does set, it should be taken only from parts of the field which are high and dry, leaving the more fertile areas for hay.

Farmers who plan to seed alfalfa in August should do so by the middle of the month or as soon after as possible In central Iowa it is unsafe to seed it after Sept. 1.

G. O. P. GRANTED RIGHTS TO "GOD BLESS AMERICA"

Irving Berlin, writer of the song "God Bless America," has advised Joseph W. Martin, Jr, campaign manager for Wendell Willke and chairman of the Republican National Committee, that performance rights on the song could be waived for the 1940 Republican campaign.

In a letter to Samuel F. Pryor, Jr., national committeeman from Connecticut and vice chairman of the Republican National Committee, Berlin said "nothing would please me more than to have you use my song in your campaign for Wendell Willke." The song was sung at the Republican Convention in Philadephia by Margaret Speaks, the opera star.

Threshing Just Getting Started In This Community

As this item is being written, most of the small grain is in the shock, and a few fields still remain to be cut. However, we saw the first threshing machine at work Monday morning at one of the Quintus farms just south of Garner.

More farmers each year are also taking to combining their oats and other crops in this part of the state. Driving around one sees a combined field occasionally.

MIXING SPRAY IN HOME NO LONGER PROFITABLE

Home-made fly sprays for household use no longer are recommended, because commercial products are so efficient and convenient, according to C. H. Richardson, extension entomologist at the Iowa State College.

Good Formula

Commercial cattle sprays also are more economical for the small dairyman, but many large scale dairyman mix their own. One good spray is made as follows: Mix by stirring together thoroughly 1 pint of kerosene base pyrethrum extract (a commercial product known as 20 to 1 extract) with 19 pints of a refined petroleum oil having a viscosity between 40 and 50 second Saybolt at 100 degrees F. Add 1 pint of steam-distilled pine oil.

Spray Lightly

Apply enough to make a mist on the hair of the cow, but do not wet the skin. Pay special attention to the shoulders, legs, belly and tail. Avoid spraying the udder.

Best time to spray is in the morning after milking, though often it may be necessary to use the spray before milking to quiet the cows. It should not be used during the milking process, as it will taint milk in open and accessible containers.

Use Caution

Too much spray may cause skin injury, sickness and even death. It causes a fever-like condition, especially in hot weather, and should be used cautiously during such periods. Light-colored breeds often are more susceptible than dark-skinned breeds.

Flies will be present wherever there is breeding material, such as manure. Manure should be gathered daily from the lots and spread on a field during July, August and September. Three times a week will help if the daily cleaning cannot be managed.

ABOUT SEALED CORN

The Hancock County Agricultural Conservation Office has received a number of inquiries in regard to the release of 1938 sealed corn in storage on the farms.

The Committee wishes to state that a borrower may redeem his loan on 1938 corn for either feed or sale. If he has received the 7c per bushel storage allowance in advance, the price will be 58c per bushel for the bushels sealed. If he has not received the 7c per bushel storage allowance, the price will be 51c per bushel.

TOO MUCH CLOVER FOR STOCK TO EAT

Combine Best for Taking Seed Through Binder Can Be Used

Livestock has been unable to keep sweet clover pastures down this summer, and it will be profitable to take sced from some of these areas, says H. D. Hughes, head of farm crops at Iowa State College.

Where the growth of sweet clover is not to great to handle satisfactorily with a grain binder, this is the best method of harvesting.

Early Morning Best

When using the binder, it is important to get into the field in the very early morning while the plants are tough with dew. This greatly reduces the loss of seed from scattering. If the acreage is large the harvesting had better be done through a period of several days, harvesting only in the morning.

The best machine for harvesting sweet clover seed is the combine, cutting the crop with a windrow attachment and picking it up from the windrow with the combine. When the growth is not too great it may be combined directly from the standing plants.

Let Seed Dry

If the windrow method is used the clover should be cut in the early morning, just as with regular binder equipment.

It is necessary to allow some of the earlier ripening seed to shatter before harvesting the clover, as otherwise most of the seed will be too immature to have any value.

Where the sweet clover is combined from standing plants, it may be necessary to spread the seed on a floor or canvas until the danger of heating is passed.

IOWA PRICE INDEX LOW AT MID-YEAR

Hog Prices Given "Blame" For 1-Point Decrease In May And June

The Iowa farm price index dropped 7 points from May 15 to June 15, largely because of lower hog prices, report Iowa State College agricultural economists. By June 15 it was 86 per cent of the 1910-14 average.

After rising sharply during the war boom of April and May, prices were about at winter level, and were the lowest for any June since 1934, the economists said in a report released by the Iowa Farm Economist, monthly economics publication.

Buying Power Down

Prices paid by farmers remained unchanged at an index of 123, compared with 120 a year earlier, and the index of Iowa farm buying power dropped from 76 to 70.

Though corn futures prices fluctuated during June, the changes were mild compared with those in April and May. Corn prices between now and harvest will be influenced by three main factors: The development of the new crop, changes in the war situation and what the government does about sealed corn on farms.

Fed Steer Prices

Better grade cattle prices usually rise in the late summer and fall. If farmers hold to their earlier intentions to cut down marketings of fed steers in August, prices probably will follow the customary up trend, or even exceed it, especially if demand continues to improve. The price situation might be altered at any time, however, by changes in the war.

Unless a severe drouth occurs in the range states in the next 60 days, feeder and stocker cattle prices may not incline from July to November, as usual.

$1,500 BLAZE ON FARM NORTHWEST OF BELMOND

Fire of unknown origin caused damaged estimated at $1,500 on the farm tenanted by Ralph Carolus two and three-quarters miles northwest of Belmond, Sunday afternoon.

The blaze destroyed a hog house, corn crib, barn, well house, 700 bushels of corn, hay, harness, machinery and part of a field of shocked oats.

Members of the family saw the flames shoot from the roof of the barn at about 12:30 Sunday noon. The Belmond Fire Department was called but were unable to prevent the spread of the fire due to a shortage of water.

Ralph Carolus is a former resident of the Klemme community.

CROPS GOOD IN SOUTHERN IOWA, MISSOURI AND KANSAS

On jaunt a few days the past week through southern Iowa, Northern Missouri and part of Kansas, this writer oberved that crops look much better there this year than they have for several years. In fact, it is drier up here in north Iowa than the territory we visited.

The wheat being comined in Kansas, Missouri and Nebraska is running from 25 to 40 bushels to the acre and is of fine quality. Most corn fields are well tasseled out and many fields we saw in Missouri had ears forming.

Hay, which is a major crop in parts of southern Iowa, appears abundant and excellent.

European War Reduces Farm Export Market

Federal Government Plans To Cushion Effect on Agriculture.

WASHINGTON.—Plans to overcome the unfavorable effect of the war upon American agriculture are being drawn up by the federal government through the office of foreign agricultural relations.

While the war has been hurting the farmers, agricultural department experts believe that when peace is resumed, the after-effects will be far worse. They are convinced that farm prices will continue to suffer unless the war lasts more than three years, when increased foreign buying will begin to bolster the market.

Complete governmental control of the economies of belligerents has marked the present conflict. The wars in Europe and in the Orient have assumed an economic character through the widespread use of blockade and counter-blockade.

Blockade Closes Markets.

Allied naval blockade closed central Europe's markets to American goods. German occupation of Poland, Norway, Denmark, Holland, Belgium and France, and the entrance of Italy into the war barred American products from almost the whole of Europe. Some of these nations had been among this country's best farm markets.

Agricultural exports were also seriously affected when the allies pooled their economic and financial resources and centralized purchases through a government commission. This effect was increased when England shifted as much of her food purchases to her dominions as was possible. She took this step to save her foreign exchange for the purchase of war necessities.

British imports of cotton and wheat—this country's two principal export crops—has dwindled greatly.

Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace estimates that exports of American agricultural products in the fiscal year which began July 1 will be at least 30 per cent below last year. This will mark an 80 per cent decrease below the level attained in the first World war.

England's Market.

Continuation of the war through 1942 may force Great Britain to purchase a larger proportion of her agricultural supplies from the United States. The agricultural department warns, however, that by this time the belligerents would be approaching financial exhaustion. American agricultural products would be needed, but nobody could pay for them.

"It appears likely that both belligerents and neutrals will find it advisable or necessary to continue many of the economic controls established during the war," the department added.

American trade can be reconstructed after the war only so far as a way is found to finance the transactions. Foreign countries can purchase American products only by exchange of goods or through the shipment of gold to this country.

The department points out that use of gold will be difficult because the United States has most of the world's supply.

Australia to Speed Plane Production, Training of Pilots

CANBERRA, AUSTRALIA. — A program for making Australia one of the front rank world air powers by March, 1943, has been announced by Prime Minister Robert G. Menzies.

It involves an increase of 11 times the present program for training pilots, observers, gunners and aircraftsmen and an increase of seven times in the present program for the production of aircraft.

This would give Australia by the time the program is in full operation in March, 1943, a total aviation personnel of 57,473 and an air force of about 2,000 planes. With the program and production then in full operation, Prime Minister Menzies believes that Australia can increase the air force each year until it ranks with the most powerful air nations in the world.

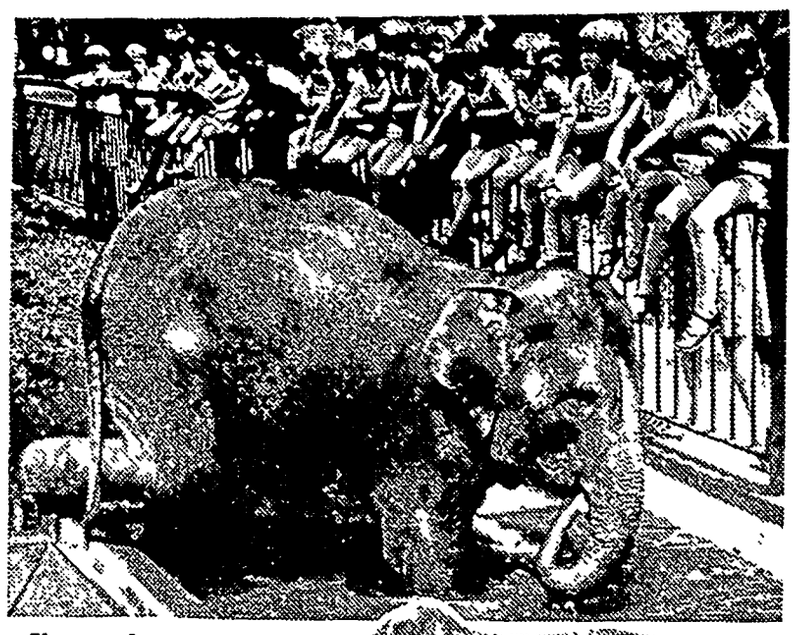
Large Gain This Year.

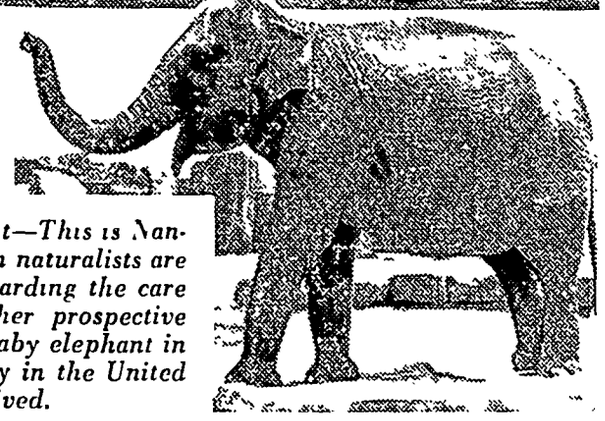
Under the program as launched, Australia will have 28,500 trained men, consisting of crews, pilots and ground personnel by June, 1941. By June, 1942, an additional 18,012 will have been trained and by March, 1943, when the entire program will be in full operation, an additional 10,961 will have been trained, giving Australia an aviation personnel of 57,473, which will be maintained thereafter.

For carrying out the program there will be installed as rapidly as possible three initial ground training schools; 10 elementary flying training schools; four air observers' schools; four bombing and gunnery schools; four wireless operators' schools; and two air navigation schools.

Menzies announced that this rapid increase in aviation, coupled with the rapid growth that is taking place in the military and naval program, is intended to make Australia capable of defending itself.

Can Baby Elephant Survive? Asks Science as Birth Nears





Upper photo shows a group of children enjoying a visit with their favorite zoo friend—the elephant. Right—This is Nancy, about whom naturalists are speculating regarding the care she will give her prospective offspring. No baby elephant in previous history in the United States has survived.

By RICHARD A. KELLY
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

CHICAGO, ILL.—Naturalists have their eyes turned toward Brookfield zoo, near Chicago. For there some time during August or September, a baby elephant is expected to be born.

This is a big event, not only because of the principals involved, but because it may provide the answer to a riddle that has puzzled scientists for generations. Will the baby pachyderm thus born in captivity live and be successfully reared to adulthood?

Never before in the United States has a baby elephant survived infancy. So, as the keepers at the zoo are preparing the colossal obstetrical ward for Nancy, a buxom, five-ton Ceylonese elephant, scientists are asking each other what are the chances of her offspring growing up into a fine, strapping pachyderm.

Based on experience tables, these chances seem rather dim. Four times before in history in this country a female elephant has labored and brought forth young. Four times did she attempt to murder her calf and then savagely refuse to nurse it. Four times did the baby jumbos die after a short and pathetic existence. The mother in each of these cases was Princess Alice, an elephantine trouper with the Sells-Floto circus of a generation ago.

Tragic Jinx?

But will the tragic jinx that followed Princess Alice also pursue Nancy?

Not necessarily, says Robert Bean, curator of mammals at the Brookfield zoo.

"In the case of the previous four births," he said, "because the same mother bore all four calves, it is possible that she was an exception which might not occur again. She evidently had some idiosyncrasy that made motherhood murderously distasteful to her. Her experience does not necessarily mean that all female elephants would behave the same way. It is a matter of record that one elephant calf was born and successfully reared in a Berlin, Germany, zoo. The same thing might occur at the Brookfield zoo.

"It is well known, however, that some species of elephants do not reproduce in captivity. Because of the extreme rarity of elephant births their reaction cannot be predicted.

Nancy Is Docile.

"Nancy, unlike her predecessor, Princess Alice, is a docile animal. She is only 24 years old, or much younger than Alice. We are preparing to take every precaution to prevent accidents from marring a successful birth. Nancy will be given every encouragement possible to be a normal mother. She will not be separated from the other elephants unless it becomes absolutely necessary.

"We hope that accustomed surroundings will have a calming effect and induce Nancy to assume her motherly duties toward her baby at once.

"If she refuses, however, the little calf will be fed cows' milk. We believe this will be a successful dietary procedure if the young elephant is closely watched for adverse effects."

So, in the weeks to come, the answer will be found to the question whether a baby elephant can survive infancy in America. If the answer is yes, then a new trend will begin.

But if the answer is no, then the story of Princess Alice may be repeated. That story made newspaper headlines before and during the World war. It was immortalized in a chapter in Bene Fowler's book, "Timberline."

First in United States.

It was on a spring afternoon in 1912, near the close of the matinee that Princess Alice delivered the first baby elephant ever born in America. Fred Ailspaw, the circus elephant trainer and his aides, were midwives. As a precaution during labor, they pulled a burlap sack over her eyes. But once the infant was born, things began to happen.

"The nearness of humans enraged the mother," writes Fowler. "She lowered her great head, flexed her wrinkled knees and then rolled upon her baby, with intent to kill. Alispaw tried to reassure her, to implore Alice to rise of her own free will. Her answer was a lashing blow of the trunk, knocking the trainer a full 20 feet across the sawdust floor.

"She had shaken off the burlap blinder, glimpsing her 180-pound son afresh and renewing the murderous attack. Attendants used wooden bars as levers to pry her heaving belly from the squealing newcomer. They applied elephant hooks to her defiant trunk and brought other persuasive instruments into play. Finally the hysterical mother reared to fight off the men, and now they dragged the bewildered, half-suffocated calf to safety. He stood as though puzzled by a world which greeted strangers with such sudden, ugly brutality."

Description of Calf.

The calf, relates Mr. Fowler, looked like a "fatigued ant-eater, was pink all over and had a trunk six inches long. Black hairs bristled from his blushing hide. He was 24 inches high and 36 from tip to tail."

Zoologists everywhere were concerned with the youngster's future. The mother refused to nurse it. She attempted to kill it when it approached The baby was fed a mixture of Jersey milk and condensed milk from a bottle. Two months after birth it fell ill and died. An autopsy revealed a putty-like substance in the calf's large intestines, indicating digestive faults.

Three times more within six years was this tragic story repeated. Each time Princess Alice tried to crush her infant to death and each time attendants were able to save the calf after a tremendous battle. All of the baby elephants died within a few weeks from the same cause: digestive disturbances.

Event Attracts Attention.

Twenty-two years have passed since the birth and death of the last baby elephant in America. Thus interest inevitably centers on Nancy's approaching accouchement at the Brookfield zoo.

Whether it lives or not, Nancy's baby will be the hugest ever born at the zoo. Although a hippopotamus weighs 4,000 pounds, its offspring weigh less than 50. An elephant calf tips the scales close to 200 pounds and stands about three feet high.

U. S. Ignition Invention Supercharges Bombers

A new aircraft ignition distribution system which will give military planes enough added power to make them supercharged ships at any altitude has been announced by one of the large airline companies in the United States.

The government has approved the plans following flight experiments, according to one of the officers of the company. Carl E. Swanson, a former faculty member of the University of Minnesota Institute of Technology, is the inventor.

Aircraft ignition steps up through this new system by the complete elimination of contaminations. This is accomplished by pumping the chemically treated air through the shielding cables. This air goes through a number of different processes before it is ready.

NAZIS IN SOUTH AMERICA

WASHINGTON.—How vigorously Nazi Germany is trying to undermine the United States in Latin America is illustrated by a secret arms offer Hitler has just made to sell $60,000,000 worth of the latest military weapons to Brazil.

This would include tanks, artillery, flame-throwers, bombing planes and other modern devices with which Germany prostrated France—all transported to a hemisphere where Pan-American nations have been relatively at peace for half a century.

Furthermore, Germany guarantees to deliver the goods almost immediately—via Italian ships.

It now looks very much as if Brazil would accept the offer.

State department officials, together with Gen. George Marshall, dynamic U. S. chief of staff, are pulling every possible wire to prevent the purchase, but they are having a hard time. They are offering to sell American military equipment instead. However, the Brazilians point out that because of cheap Nazi wages it would take $200,000,000 to buy the same material here where costs are much higher. Furthermore, Hitler is willing to accept coffee and other Brazilian surplus products in a barter deal. No real cash is involved.

Finally, the Brazilians say they bought some artillery from the United States recently, but it was World war stuff, and they had to spend $8,000 for repairs on each gun. The German munitions, on the other hand, are virtually new.

General Marshall made a special flight to Brazil last year to get acquainted with the Brazilian army, and later piloted General Goes Monteiro, Brazilian chief of staff, all over the United States. However, all this goodwilling doesn't seem to count today. At least 40 per cent of the Brazilian army is reported to be pro-Nazi.

Note—Meanwhile the state department moves with tragic slowness to counteract Nazi activity in South America. Three years ago it set up a Cultural Relations bureau to cultivate Latin America, but its activity to date is minus zero.

Mining Panama Waters.

The navy may not admit it, but the secret reason for suddenly mining the waters around the Panama canal was the sighting of two submarines off the Pacific side of the canal.

They were sighted by an army aviator, who was not able to distinguish their nationality. Since no U. S. submarines were in that vicinity, the army and navy both were convinced they must be Japanese. Obviously it would be difficult for German submarines to get into Pacific waters.

Another factor which has our navy command worried was that last week, while part of the Japanese fleet left for French Indo-China, another part left for an unnamed destination off into the Pacific.

It is suspected that the Japanese may be paying a visit to Chile, perhaps stopping en route at the Galapagos islands, which the United States is now trying to lease for a naval base to protect the Panama canal.

Another reason is the fear that Hitler, having secured part of the French fleet, might pool forces with the Italians (after the end of the British campaign) and make a foray into American Atlantic waters. With part of the Japanese fleet simultaneously in Chilean waters, the problem of defense would be difficult.

Mechanical Sleuths.

Uniformed guards make nightly inspection rounds in the big government buildings, but the real sentinels of the multi-million dollar structures are electrical machines. Elaborate automatic signal systems, equipped with buzzers, bells and lights instantly detect trouble and flash the alarm.

Most modern of the automatic watchdogs is the system in the stately Greco-Roman Federal Reserve building on Constitution avenue. Its electrical controls make a written record of everything that goes on, with a special feature known as the "operator's delinquent system."

If the operator falls asleep or meets with an accident, red lights flash all over the building. The device also tattles on guards who fail to punch patrol boxes on time.

Note—All the guards and elevator operators in the Federal Reserve building are college students. They are the handsomest crew in Washington.

Political Chaff.

Latest aspirant to enter the congressional arena is squat Louis B. Ward, editor of Father Coughlin's Social Justice. This is Ward's second try. In 1936 he ran for a Democratic senatorial nomination without success.

When pretty Janelle Johnson, five-year-old daughter of Rep. Jed Johnson of Oklahoma, was told that little brother Jed Jr. had sat on the President's knee, she shrugged her shoulders and replied airily, "Hmm, that's nothing. I kissed him."

'thday' Celebration in Baltimore Recalls an Important Chapter in the History of American Transportation

LTIMORE, MD., was recently the scene of a birthday celebration which had more than local significance because it recalled the early days of an important r in the history of American transportation. For it d the 100th anniversary of the founding of the oldest boat line in the United States—the Baltimore Steam t company, better known as the Old Bay Line because entury of activity in the peake bay.

is celebration was a dramat- reminder of the fact that m-driven vehicles, on both and water, once co-operated peeding the restless race of ericans on the way to their inations. The Old Bay Line founded at a time when rail- ds had passed the experimen- stage and were rapidly be- ing an important factor in erican transportation. Mary- ers who wished to visit friends or relatives in Virginia or the Carolinas could take a boat from Baltimore to Portsmouth and then continue their journey over the old Portsmouth and Weldon railroad southward.

Steamboat's Early History.

As a background for the significance of the anniversary which was celebrated in Baltimore it is necessary to go back to the beginning of the Nineteenth century in America. Whether James Rumsey, John Fitch, Samuel Morey, Henry Miller Shreve or Robert Fulton was the "inventor" of the steamboat is still a matter of dispute among the historians. But the fact remains that Fulton's successful voyage on the Clermont up the Hudson in August, 1807, gave the first real impetus to this form of transportation.

The next year a regular line of steamers between Albany and New York was established; within the next year John Stevens had made the first coast-wise steamboat voyage in America when he took his Phoenix from New York to Delaware Bay; within the next five years a line was running on the Delaware, a steamboat had been built at Pittsburgh for service on the Ohio and another, bearing the picturesque name of Walk-in-the-Water, had been built near Buffalo to ply between that city and Detroit.

In 1819 an American ship, the Savannah, became the first steam craft to cross the Atlantic, but this new form of water travel was a long time in coming into its own on the high seas. The Americans still clung to their fast-sailing packets and clipper ships.

Steam Navigation Expands.

However, when the English sent the Great Western and the Sirius across the Atlantic to America in 1838, the Americans began to wake up. The result was the rapid expansion of steam navigation during the forties and fifties with the Baltimore Steam Packet company as one of the pioneers along the Atlantic coast.

In 1845 the Old Bay Line was operating three steamboats—the Georgia, the Jewess and the Herald. It continued to add ships during the next decade and to enjoy great prosperity. Then came the outbreak of the War Between the States in which this line played an interesting and unusual role, its boats operating, as they did, between ports in hostile territory.

Those ports were chiefly Confederate ones. Norfolk was, of course, pro-Southern, as was Baltimore, in sentiment, even though Maryland remained in the Union. The Old Bay Line was operating the Louisiana and the Adelaide on regular runs between these two points when the war started and the Union forces seized the latter boat at Fortress Monroe, forcing Cap'n Cannon to disembark his passengers and the mail. Later the Adelaide was used as a transport attached to the joint Atlantic blockading squadron and, as such, she took part in the bombardment of Forts Hatteras and Clark on August 28 and 29, 1861.

Some time before that the Federals captured Norfolk and notified the company that it could not sail its vessels farther south than Old Point Comfort. However, it maintained a daily service with the Louisiana and the Georgeanna, the line's first iron-clad vessel, between Baltimore and Old Point throughout the war.

The Union navy yard at Portsmouth, being close to territory held by the Confederates, was in constant danger of being captured so the Federal government decided to give it up. All of the vessels in this important naval depot were burned or scuttled. One of them was destined to have a thrilling history. She was the Merrimac which was sunk. Later she was raised by the Confederates, rebuilt as an ironclad, renamed the Virginia and sent out to attack the Northern ships in Hampton Roads.

Historic Naval Battle.

The result was the engagement between the Monitor and the Virginia (or Merrimac) on March 9, 1862, which changed the course of naval history. Among the shipping which was at Old Point Comfort on that day and which saw that engagement was a new boat which the Old Bay Line had recently purchased, the Thomas A. Morgan, an iron sidewheeler, 192 feet long, which had been used as an official mail boat between Fortress Monroe and Yorktown.

Later, when the Union forces evacuated Norfolk and Portsmouth, one of the Old Bay Line's ships, the William Selden, was captured and burned by the Confederates. Other losses suffered during the war seriously handicapped the line's operations but it managed to survive.

It resumed its regular runs and ordered new boats, such as the Thomas Kelso and the Eolus. Incidentally, the first time the name "Old Bay Line" was applied to this company was just after the close of the war, on July 24, 1865, when an advertisement in the Baltimore Sun stated that "the old established Bay Line is operating daily the steamers Louisiana, Georgeanna, Adelaide and Thomas Kelso from Baltimore to Norfolk with connection at Fort Monroe for James River landings and Richmond." By 1870 the company was again prosperous and had placed in service its first screw steamer, the Transit, which was used only for freight.

Since that time, the Old Bay, like the steamboat lines in other parts of the country, has played an important part in building up sparsely settled regions and fostering the economic and social development there But to this line belongs the distinction of 100 years of continued operation and service, a notable accomplishment in any enterprise in a nation which itself is only 164 years old.

JOE E. BROWN'S first week before the cameras in the Columbia picture, "So You Won't Talk," marking his return to the screen after a serious automobile accident that put him in the hospital for four months, left no doubt that he was fully recovered.

In the first three days Joe fell off beds, crawled under them, jumped out of a second-story window, and swung a haymaker to Charles Wilson's jaw that connected accidentally and knocked the actor senseless for two minutes.

"So You Won't Talk" is a comedy in which Brown plays the dual role of a timid book reviewer and a gang baron for whom he is mistaken; Frances Robinson plays opposite him.

Ace Director Clarence Brown recalls that in the days of the silent pictures the saying was that the worst pictures had the most titles, and a really great picture such as "The Last Laugh" had no titles at all. Now it seems likely that one of the great talking pictures has proved that the bigger they are, the less the actors say.

"Edison, the Man," Mr. Brown's latest directorial effort, goes a long way toward proving that fact. There is perhaps half a reel during the climatic sequence in which hardly a word is spoken. "The suspense during the 40-hour test of Edison's first electric bulb, I tried to relate entirely in pictorial terms," said the director. "And that is the stretch during which the audience is most acutely attentive."

Wayne Morris can't escape the Lane sisters. If he isn't acting with Priscilla, he's acting with Rosemary. Priscilla's one up on her sister; she teamed with him in "Love, Honor and Behave," "Brother Rat," and "Brother Rat and a Baby." Rosemary won him in "An Angel From Texas," and she's his romance again in "Ladies Must Live," their current picture at Warner Brothers'. Meanwhile the romance of his personal life seems to have hit the rocks.

Betty Brewer, Paramount's 13-year-old discovery who is making her film debut opposite Fred MacMurray in "Rangers of Fortune," has a suggestion for anyone who wants to learn a foreign language.

She suggests that the would-be student live next door to a family which speaks no English, be broke and hungry, and have to ask the foreigners for food, in their native tongue.

"That's how I learned to speak Spanish," she explained.

If you're one of the vast army of fans who've enjoyed the pictures made by Osa Johnson and her late husband, Martin, you'll want to see "I Married Adventure," which Columbia is releasing the last of this month.

It is based on Mrs. Johnson's autobiography, and is the first pictorial dramatic thriller of a famous woman explorer. It tells the story of 27 years of adventure, shared by the Johnsons.

The Court of Missing Heirs, a half-hour radio program which has been taking only 25 minutes because of Elmer Davis' news broadcasts, has moved from its customary spot on CBS to one-half an hour earlier, which will give it a full half hour. Even in its 25 minute weekly broadcasts it has not done so badly at digging up missing legatees; in 28 weeks under its present sponsorship the program has found claimants to more than $120,000—more than $8,000 a week.

RUBBER, TIN 'HOKUM'

It would be worth a good many billions, not to mention a great re-employment, strengthening of our defense and reduction of our danger, to debunk the hokum about our being so dependent on the British and Dutch East Indies for rubber and tin.

That bunk plus gross exaggeration of our tiny commercial stake in China, projects the sphere of our naval strength far west of any line of defensive necessity in the Pacific. On every occasion we build Japanese enmity. That, in turn, requires even greater naval strength in the Pacific. We maintain the whole fleet equipped for this great distance, which is a far greater radius of action than Western hemisphere defense requires.

We are truly told that we have not nearly the naval strength we need for that defense. Yet, here we are frittering away much of that strength chiefly on this rubber and tin argument.

Every time somebody mentions the fact that Bolivia is a prolific potential source of tin, we get a dose of clever propaganda—that the ore has to be sent to England to be smelted—that Bolivian reserves of ore aren't great enough and that they require a mixture of other tin ores.

We have no tin smelters. But why haven't we? Because a British cartel controls tin. It doesn't want us to smelt tin or buy in Bolivia. That isn't good enough now. There is no mystery about the tin smelter. To build the necessary smelters and use Bolivian tin at once fits with every sound American policy, and not to do so collides with all. It employs American rather than British labor. It builds up Western hemisphere trade and ties us closer to South America. It strengthens our defense and reduces our danger and dependence on distant sources. Why isn't such a move number one in our new national defense effort?

I can't say on the basis of known facts and recent surveys that Bolivian tin would be enough. But neither has it been demonstrated by any such means that it wouldn't be enough. Certainly, nobody has taken any steps to make it enough. I am told by metallurgists that they can easily lick the few bugs in the use of Bolivian tin.

There is a very wide field for the conservation of tin. It is largely used for attractiveness where black sheets would serve as well. There is a vast field for substitutes—particularly glass. Finally, tin can be reclaimed after original use. We throw it on the garbage dump. Any truly alert defense policy would act immediately here.

The case of rubber is similar. It may be true—although it seems incredible—that we can't now rely on getting rubber from its native home in South America, but it is no longer true that we have to go half way round the world to get it. We have no less than six all-American rubber substitutes. Two of them are far better than rubber.

Yes, they cost more, but if we relied on them entirely and so went into mass production, they would cost very little more—maybe not as much—as the process is perfected in use. As matters stand at this moment, due to their longer life and better quality, the true cost would be no more. If you consider this great new field for employment of American labor to replace Asiatic coolie labor, our economic advantage would be much greater. If to that advantage we add, as in the case of tin, the avoided cost and danger of maintaining an American naval threat in Asia then all considerations of both economics and defense simply shriek for immediate action here. What is a council of national defense for anyway?

Temptations.

Now that the course and leadership of the Republican party is settled, there are only two major uncertainties to fertilize with worry more gray hairs—the war in its relation to us and the November elections.

Superficially there is a temptation to write a third—the convention course and leadership of the Democratic party. But, we know that there is no uncertainty. Mr. Roosevelt will be nominated by acclamation. He will write his own platform.

There is no more reason for a Democratic convention than there would be of a meeting of the Reichstag to decide whether Mr Hitler shall continue.

In the proposal for a western hemisphere cartel, we see a colossal attempt to imitate Hitler. It is assumed that if he is victorious, all European industries will be operated as one, their products pooled and bartered to Latin America at a sweated price so low we can't compete. Therefore, we shall buy all the products of Latin America Our high cost industrial products are also to be subsidized and pooled for sale south to under-price low-cost European industrial production—at a loss to our whole people of perhaps a billion a year

Tumblers that have been used with milk should always be washed in cold water before they are washed in hot. When this is done the milk will not stick to the glass and they will not have a cloudy appearance.

LIVESTOCK, GRAIN JUDGING TRIALS PLANNED FOR AUG.

Livestock and grain judging workouts for boys will be held at Iowa State College, Aug. 10 and 17. They are conducted annually by the Animal Husbandry and Farm Crops departments preliminary to the State Fair judging contests.

The college provides livestock and judging material, and county and club agents use the workouts to decide which of their contestants to use in the state fair work. The groups specify in advance which day they prefer to work.

PEARS, APPLES SUFFER ATTACK OF FIRE BLIGHT

Fire blight in pear and apple trees is prevalent all over Iowa this year, more so than last year, reports L. C Grove, extension horticulturist at Iowa State College

The disease, of bacterial origin, attacks rapid-growing trees. Leaves turn brown, and young shoots "fire back,' becoming brownish-black.

This late in the season there is no spray control, but diseased twigs should be clipped off 6 to 8 inches behind the blighted area. Pruning shears should be dipped in a bichloride of mercury solution each time to avoid spreading the disease.

Bees may carry the blight, and a spray of 1 to 350 bordeaux mixture when trees are full bloom is recommended to check the disease

Pear trees should be planted in sod to check their growth, and should be planted as far away from the apple trees as possible.

The total value of Iowa's dairy products in 1939 was $99,349,719.87. Over half of this amount was accounted for by creamery butter, with market milk totalling one-fourth of the remainder.

Air Corps Training Gave Veteran Pilot Start In Aviation

Former Barnstormer Learned Science of Aviation in the Army Air Corps

By O. L. PARKS,
Pres. Parks Air College

Eugene R. Brown is one of the real veterans of aviation. Nineteen years ago he took off on his first solo flight in a fluttering "Jenny" of World War vintage. He took it up and he brought it down and in the easy standards of the day he was considered an accomplished pilot.

He went on in aviation, saved his money, bought his own plane and began making the rounds of county and state fairs, taking old men and young men for their first trip in the air. For four years he went barnstorming over the United States, pioneering in the air

But it was not until 1925 that he began studying the science of aviation. He entered the Army Air Corps training center at San Antonio, Texas, for intensive study of tho new subject. He learned to fly the Army way, the use of instruments instead of flying by landmarks of familiar barn tops and cow pastures.

Equipped with this invaluable preparation he quickly found a position in 1927 as pilot on an airmail route from Atlanta to New York with the old Pitcairn Aviation Co., later absorbed by Eastern Air Transport which in turn became Eastern Airlines. He joined the company as captain because of his expert training with the Army and continues to hold that position.

Gene is grateful to the Army for the start in transport flying that it gave him. "In my opinion the flight training offered at Randolph and Kelly Fields is the finest basic training that is obtainable for pilots today," he said when asked for his opinion.

The story of the barnstormer who pioneered in aviation is one of the thousands from files of the United States Army Corps. Information about a center such as the one from which Gene graduated and which he recommends to young men 20 to 27 years of age can be obtained from the Secretary of the Army Training Center, San Antonio, Texas.

Although Gene long ago graduated from guiding his flights by watching the unfolding countryside he knows every hill and dale from New York to Atlanta. Twelve years of flying this and other routes as a captain of "The Great Silver Fleet have impressed the geography of the Atlantic seaboard indelibly on his mind.

And he agrees that learning geography that way was easier than in the old days at school in Atlanta. True to the South he still lives in the "Gone With The Wind" country made famous by book and movie. Once in a while he flies over or drives past one of the fairgrounds where he used to land 100 times a day when the fair was on and business was good. But the playboy days of a flying trouper are gone forever—like the days of the horse and buggy—and Gene is an important cog in a vital industry serving America.

Harvesting the Sun

A sun-operated machine which makes household gas out of water has recently been perfected, says the Country Home magazine. It concentrates the sun's rays by means of an oil-filled glass globe, and uses them to heat one end of a welded, two-metal rod and to cool the other end. The cooling device operates like a gas refrigerator. A gentle electric current is produced which, on being passed through sun-generated steam, breaks it up into hydrogen and oxygen gases. The hydrogen can be used like ordinary gas for cooking, heating and lighting. Three gallons of water are said to yield enough gas for one day's household needs.

A Doctor's Belief

SELF-DISCIPLINE is good for body and soul, in the opinion of Dr. William Brady, widely recognized medical columnist, who wrote recently:

"When I was a boy my mother was an active, perhaps a militant member of the W. C. T. U. and naturally I gave her a solemn pledge to abstain from alcohol and tobacco until I grew up. Naturally, too, I kept that pledge. This country today needs more mothers who ask their children to give that pledge

"Aside from the unquestioned harm either tobacco or alcohol does to children, and we are all children until we attain mature development . . . the exercise in self-discipline a child gets from keeping such a pledge is good for the character and good for the soul.

"I hope the Woman's Christian Temperance Union will continue to inspire mothers and other women who have charge of children, as long as booze is available to youth."

Relief, or Beer, Money?

Ranking close to the laboring man as one of beer's best customers is the relief client, yet in the face of this the government has paid out over 10 billions of dollars for relief—which to John Q. Public sometimes looks like pump priming of the brewers' financial wells.

When beer taxes show an increase they represent an actual increased waste of public wealth, as they are of no constructive gain to industrial income.

For every one million dollars paid in beer taxes, the brewing industry gets five million dollars from the customer. Beer's so-called benefits are offset by the physical, mental and moral havoc that the 65 million gallons of pure alcohol in the total annual beer output creates or is capable of creating in the lives of beer patrons.

Prohibition

THIRTY-FOUR per cent of all United States voters now favor repeal of repeal and a return to prohibition, according to the January, 1940, Gallup poll.

Despite the efforts of the liquor-subsidized propaganda groups which brought repeal and which for six and one-half years have tried to convince Americans that personal license is to be preferred to personal discipline there still are 34 out of every 100 voters who today believe prohibition to be the only, the final solution to the liquor problem.

In 1933 less than one-fourth of the nation's electorate went to the polls. Less than one-fifth of the voters voted "yes" for repeal.

It is granted that opponents of prohibition are more vocal than those who favor prohibition and granted that this vocal strength has served to hide the benefits of national prohibition from the eyes of the general electorate.

Facts are facts and John Q. Public is beginning to wonder if he hasn't been misled in his judgment of repeal vs prohibition.

Without arguing the merits of repeal and of prohibition, there are certain facts which the general public is entitled to know about what prohibition actually did for the United States.

There now are millions of voters who have come of age since 1933. Their only basis for discussing the prohibition period has been one-sided propaganda which usually claimed that prohibition did nothing but nurture gangsters (despite the fact, for instance, that a writer in Collier's Weekly in January, 1940, said that Chicago's gangsters were developed in the mad subscription wars of Chicago newspapers in the pre-prohibition years.) There are other millions who never have had the correct facts, free from sentimental or propagandized treatment, on which to evaluate prohibition.

As a starter, just consider this:

During the whole 13½ years of prohibition the 250,000 pre-prohibition saloons and hotel bars were closed.

In scores and hundreds of cases, the places formerly used as saloons were occupied by banks, groceries, and many retail establishments.

All advertising of liquors in newspapers and magazines and by radio or the mails completely disappeared.

There was marked decrease in the use of liquors at many public social functions and all state dinners.

Saving deposits increased amazingly, rising from $144 per capita in 1920 to $233 per capita in 1929. Members of these associations rose from 41 per 1000 of population in 1921 to 100 per 1000 in 1928.

Life insurance in force more than doubled, increasing from $342 per capita in 1921 to $858 per capita in 1929.

Automobile registrations increased from 64 per 1000 of population in 1921 to 191 per 1000 in 1929.

Pupils in high schools, public and private, rose from 2,413,000 in 1920 to 4,252,000 in 1929. Students in colleges, university, and professional schools increased from 597,000 in 1921 to 1,143,000 in 1928.

A steadily rising standard of living which, it is believed, was due at least in part to diversion of money from uneconomic liquor to necessities and home luxuries.

The Experts Say

THE opinions of unbiased experts, without a private ax to grind, frequently help Mr. Average Citizen to make up his mind on important matters.

Not that Mr. Average Citizen needs any expert help to evaluate the liquor traffic. Almost anyone when off to himself without joshing friends around will admit that this country and its people would be a lot better off without legal liquor.

But, let's see what the experts write about alcohol.

The Psychiatrist's View.

"The depressant effect of alcohol on the brain is the cause of the too numerous automobile accidents of the present time," writes Dr. Robert V. Seliger, Johns Hopkins University Medical School.

"Since 1928 . . . the actual number of women alcoholics admitted to mental hospitals (in Maryland) has increased from 18 in 1928 to 57 in 1938 . . . the percentage of women among all alcoholics admitted for the first time has approximately doubled . . .

"To summarize: Alcohol is an important and widely used poison. The action of alcohol is that of a narcotic, paralyzing control and restraint. The real treatment of alcoholics is embodied in society's attitude toward drinking; persistent and constant education of the effect of alcohol on the individual and society is indicated with a teaching to parents that a 'practice-what-you-preach' attitude is most important. Total abstinence is the goal of all treatment."

Police Departments.

Police, District of Columbia, concerning arrests for intoxication: Females arrested for drunkenness in 1932 totaled 104, in 1935 totaled 1601, in 1938 totaled 1465.

Police Chief Hohmann and Highway Patrol Chief Cato agree, according to the Los Angeles Times, that 30 per cent of the fatal auto accidents are due to drunk drivers and drunk pedestrians. Chief Hohmann says further that "60 per cent of the police department personnel was engaged in disposition of intoxicated persons during 1939."

Doctor of Medicine.

Dr. Harold Aaron of Manhattan in his new book "Good Health and Bad Medicine," as reviewed in Time Magazine, March 18, 1940:

"Although alcohol is frequently used as a stimulant, its real effect is to depress the nervous system . . . like ether or chloroform."

Scrub It Out!

IT'S time for the women of America to roll up their sleeves and start scrubbing the dirty spots out of the nation's social fabric!

Many leaders in women's work believe that women as a group have been delinquent the last two decades and now will have to pay with real hard work if they are to restore social conditions favorable to the Christian way of living.

Throughout history the women have been the guardians of spiritual and moral life. The great social movements of the Nineteenth Century were nearly all originated and fought for by women. These women worked under severe hardships, without finances, without the right to vote, and under the handicaps of social ostracism and the fact that they then were living in a man's world.

Today all that is changed. Now it is in many ways a woman's world, women control the purse-strings of the nation. They have more potential power today than ever before in history. In many ways, they are doing less with their power than did the handicapped women of yesterday.

Achievement of many social reforms and of the right to vote may have caused women to think that the good fight had been won and that they could retire to placid contentment in an arm-chair.

Women sought and achieved equality with men. Flushed with their new-found freedom they pushed on to achieve equality in the unworthy ways of living. They climbed up on the bar stools alongside the men.

But all that is changing. Women may prattle of "freedom"—when they really mean "personal license"—but let that freedom hurt those they love—husband or child—and women soon demand a return to the absolute code of Christian living.

Social disease, juvenile crime, alcoholism, polluted politics, all of these enemies of American home life could be routed within the decade if all women would unite behind effective leadership to use their powers of finances, of the ballot, and of spiritual conviction.

Let's Face Facts!

Alabama state government figures when analyzed show that the state is "losing millions through its ignoble experiment of business partnership with the liquor traffic," according to a recent report.

"Glowing promises of the wet propagandists in 1937 have not been fulfilled. Bootleggers still ply their traffic. Liquor store profits have not reduced taxes. Drunkenness and disorderly conduct are notorious. Criminal activities flourish.

MUDDLE

A doctor at a deaf and dumb institution invited a friend to its annual dance. He explained that when the guest wished to dance with one of the inmates he should smile and make a circle with his hand.

The guest picked out a pretty girl, and went through the necessary formula. She responded, and they had several dances.

Then the doctor arrived, and, to the guest's surprise, asked his partner whether she would give him a dance. She said, "Yes, when I can get rid of this deaf and dumb fellow!"

WEIGHING CONSEQUENCES
A Principle of Temperate Living

LESSON TEXT—Proverbs 1.7-10; Isaiah 5 11, 12 18-23, Galatians 6 7-9.
GOLDEN TEXT—Godliness is profitable unto all things, having promise of the life that now is, and of that which is to come.—I Timothy 4 8.

An intelligent approach to life calls for an understanding of principles governing thought and action. Our lesson for today recognizes that every act and thought of man brings consequences, either good or bad Man himself must make the decisions of life, and what he sows he must also reap.

Matters of crucial importance to modern young people are involved in our lesson They are asking these days, "Shall I listen to God's voice, or is that just old-fashioned nonsense? What about obeying parents? Should I drink intoxicants? 'Everybody' does—why should I be different? Of course, I don't want to be a drunkard or ruin my future life, but I'd like to have 'my fling'—can't I have it and still avoid disastrous consequences?"

The answers to these questions are in our lesson. May God help young people to find the right answers, and enable every teacher to present the truth clearly and effectively.

I. Safe Counsel (Prov. 1:7-10).

No sane person wants to make a fool of himself. He is looking for the right way and will lend his ear to good counsel. Here it is—"The fear of the Lord is the beginning of knowledge" (R. V., "wisdom"). Fear of God is not a cringing terror, but a sincere appreciation of His wisdom and a desire to do His will.

The best counselors a boy or girl has are father and mother. Only a fool will pass up the golden opportunity of profiting by their experiences and avoiding their mistakes, and will miss the opportunity of carrying forward their high hopes. Those who fear God and honor their parents will not be misled by the enticement of sinners (v. 10). They just will not "consent," and that settles it.

II. Steps to Ruin (Isa. 5:11, 12, 18-23).

Isaiah lived and ministered in a time of prosperity, which led to drunkenness and immorality. This in time led, as it always does, to the decay and destruction of the nation. We face similar moral conditions today. Let us not shut our eyes to the lesson so oft-repeated in history and in false security go on to national ruin.

We need outspoken and determined opposition in civic, social and religious circles to the liquor traffic and to all the vices that follow inevitably in its train. The portion of our lesson from Isaiah vividly portrays the downward path of the drinker of intoxicants. Ponder it well, young man and young woman.

III. Seedtime and Harvest (Gal. 6:7-9).

Everywhere about him man sees the inexorable operation of the law of cause and effect, of sowing and reaping, and yet he listens to the lies of Satan and of his own lustful heart and tries to convince himself that the law may be suspended in the realm of the moral and spiritual.

Sowing to the flesh always brings corruption. No matter how well educated, no matter what his position in life, or his family connection, the man who takes his first drink has started on the road to a drunkard's grave. Statistics reveal that the victims of drink come from every strata of society and every circumstance of life. Young people, the sure way to avoid the consequences is to not take the first drink.

Sowing to the Spirit brings "life everlasting." That, too, is always true. There is also another precious truth: namely, that by turning to Christ the one who has begun on the downward path may stay the ruinous hand of sin upon his life. Taking Christ as his Saviour, he finds regeneration and renewal of life.

The Works of the Lord

Praise ye the Lord. I will praise the Lord with my whole heart, in the assembly of the upright, and in the congregation. The works of the Lord are great, sought out of all them that have pleasure therein.—Psalm 111: 1, 2.

As Lambs Among Wolves

Go your ways: behold, I send you forth as lambs among wolves. Carry neither purse, nor scrip, nor shoes; and salute no man by the way. And into whatsoever house ye enter, first say, Peace be unto this house.—Luke 10: 3-5.

One Point of View

If we can not hope that life will be all happiness we may, at least, secure a heavy balance on the right side.

The God Within

"God worketh in you." This implies the actual presence of God at the center of our being.

IT'S smart for mother and daughter to dress alike—and here's a dashing sports ensemble suggested by the garb in which two popular movie stars — one grown-up and one little—romped through a recent comedy. Design No. 1977-B is an identical copy of 1978-B—pleated shorts, convertible neckline, pockets and all. Each includes a separate, tailored skirt, which transforms the play suit into a spectator sports frock with shirtwaist top.

Sharkskin, gabardine, gingham and denim are good fabric choices for mother and daughter alike.

Barbara Bell Pattern No. 1977-B is designed for sizes 2, 4, 6, 8 and 10 years. Size 4 requires 3 yards of 35-inch material without nap.

Barbara Bell Pattern No. 1978-B is designed for sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, 20 and 40. Corresponding bust measurements 30, 32, 34, 36, 38 and 40. Size 14 (32) requires 5⅝ yards of 35-inch material without nap. Price of patterns, 15 cents each. Send order to:

Strange Facts

Off-Color Whites
Adopt a Skunk?
Low Oil Production

¶ At least 40 per cent of the Caucasian race, which is generally supposed to comprise the white branches of the human species, is composed of people such as the Hindus and Arabs, whose skin is dark brown, and others such as the Ethiopians, whose color is nearly black.

¶ As the London zoo is low in funds, several hundred people have come to its rescue by adopting an animal. They pay for its food and, in return, have their generosity acknowledged on a sign attached to the animal's cage. Three lions, two giraffes, a gorilla and a skunk are still awaiting adoption.

¶ The blind people of the United States are engaged in about 425 different regular occupations.

¶ Although there are oil wells in this country capable of producing up to as much as 185,000 barrels a day, the average daily production per well is less than 10 barrels. In Pennsylvania, it is less than half a barrel.—Collier's.

Know Your Age?

Persons not certain of their ages may apply for this information to the bureau of the census and it will be given to them, if available, provided a definite address can be furnished at any census period. If the facts are required from censuses taken before 1880, anyone may search the records as they are not confidential.—Collier's.

Valueless Minerals

Fortunes are now being made from minerals which a few years ago where considered almost valueless. In a large gold mine in Colorado a bright blue copper ore accumulated for years. It was too low-grade to be marketed. Then a chemist discovered that it could be made into pigment, and now is worth almost as much to the owner as the gold.

In another mine in California jets of steam, heavily impregnated with sulphur, issued from fissures in the rock. One day some copper plates were accidentally hung near them, and soon they were covered with beads of mercury. Today the sulphur-steam makes good money for the owners.

WHAT NOT TO USE IN AUGUST SOWING

Alfalfa and Sweet Clover Grow Well, But Not Red Clover and Alsike

Alfalfa and sweet clover may be planted in August under certain conditions, but seeding red clover, alsike and white clover during the summer is not recommended at all because of hot weather and insufficient moisture.

That warning was voiced this week by Dr. C. P. Wilsie, research agronomist at Iowa State College

"Lack of sufficient moisture for rapid germination may result in thin, uneven stands," Wilsie said "And poor growth during the late summer and early fall may be followed by considerable winter injury due to lack of strong, deep root systems."

Red clover, alsike and white clover do poorly in hot weather, Wilsie said. Early spring seedings are much more likely to succeed.

Time To Plant

Alfalfa and sweet clover, however, may be established in late summer, the best time to plant being from August 1 to 15 in northern Iowa, and August 1 to 25 in southern Iowa, Wilsie said The recommended seeding rate for sweet clover is 10 pounds per acre, for alfalfa, 12 to 15 pounds.

Nurse crops with these summer seeding are not advisable, since they will only rob the young seedlings of much needed moisture, he added.

"On weedy land there may be some advantage in late summer seedings of alfalfa or sweet clover, since the fields can be worked 2 or 3 months before seeding and surface weeds eliminated. On hilly land, however, the ground should not be left uncovered for such a long period or erosion will take place."

Moisture is the Key

Another advantage of summer seeding is that lime and fertilizer can often be applied more directly to the alfalfa crop and worked into the soil adequately before planting, he said.

"The moisture condition is the key to the success or failure of summer alfalfa and clover seedings," the agronomist emphasized "Rains usually come in August so that fields sown during the first half of the month have a reasonably good chance of establishment At present, however, there is a deficiency of reserve moisture in most parts of the state."

LARGE DRAFT HORSES GOING OUT OF STYLE

The day of the ton-sized gelding for farm work is passing. The horse in greatest demand today is the medium-sized animal that is active, alert, smart and quiet, says A. B. Caine, animal husbandryman at Iowa State College.

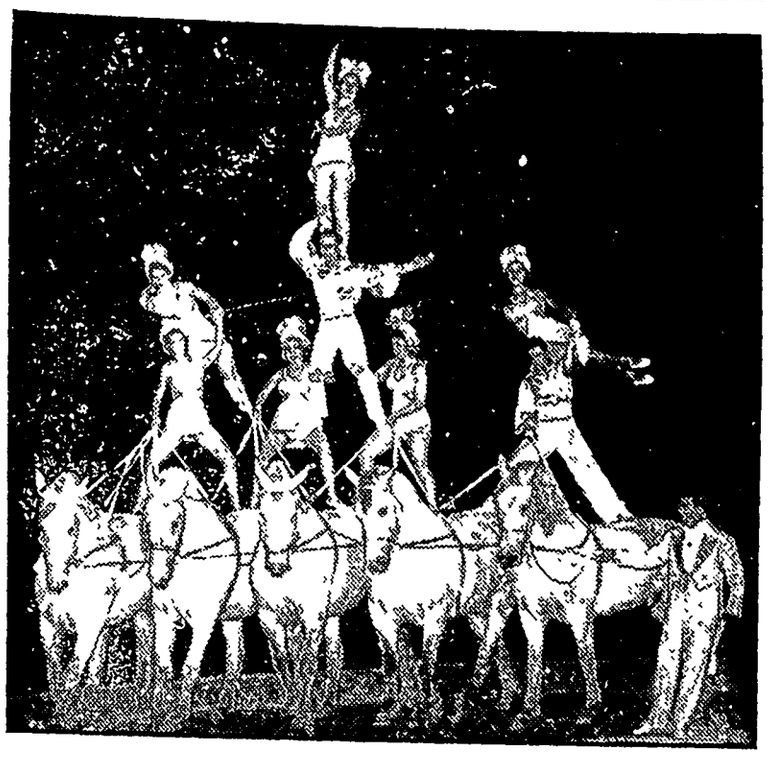
Farmers now want a smaller horse that is big enough to do economically any job the farmer requires him to do, Caine believes These middle-sized horses should have an intelligent head, good neck and well-shaped shoulders, short back, deep middle, and feet and legs that are correct and durable.

Caine says this type of horse will give years of service and can stand heat and humid weather. They not only are preferred by the farmers but sell best to shippers.

Since the trend toward smaller horses, stallions that are in greatest demand weigh about a ton—showing quality. feeding capacity, constitution, style and correct conformation.

It is not recommended that Iowa farmers attempt to raise their own alfalfa seed. Under normal growing conditions the seed does not set satisfactorily on the average Iowa farm.

War Brings Circus Stars to Iowa, Says State Fair



Des Moines, Ia., Special: The European war has helped the entertainment program at this year's Iowa State Fair, exposition officials reported today. Many of Europe's star circus attractions, driven out by the war, are touring America this summer—and at least a half dozen of them have been booked for the augmented outdoor circus which headlines the State Fair's grandstand programs each afternoon and night from Aug 23 through Aug. 30. Above is the Loyal Repensky Troupe, most famous bareback riders on the continent, who are among the stellar attractions at this year's fair. In addition to the circus, daily events at the state fair include auto races, horse races, two "thrill days", world's fair fireworks, and a huge open-air musical show.

NOW PROFITABLE TO USE PROTEIN SUPPLEMENTS

At present prices of protein supplements, Iowa beef cattle feeders can well afford to feed around 1½ pounds of oilmeal per head daily, with "reasonable assurance of at least breaking even on the deal," says Rex Beresford, Iowa State College extension animal husbandryman.

Steers which get a protein supplement make faster and bigger gains from their corn ration, and oilmeal prices are unusually low now to relation to corn.

Prices of principal oilseed meals have declined more than usual since January Linseed meal averaged around $25.50 in Mid-July as compared with a 10-year July average of $36.75. Soybean meal was quoted at $23.50 as compared with a 5-year average of $34.60 Cottonseed meal averaged around $28 as compared with a 10-year Soybean meal and linseed meal July average of $32.

are "especially good buys," Beresford indicated.

Many Iowa cattlemen are taking their steers off pasture because of the heat and poor condition of the grass and are bringing them to a full feed of corn in shaded barnlots. This, Beresford said, is a "good idea" since pastures won't recover soon enough, even with sufficient rain, to help much before steers should be on full feed anyway.

Funeral Services Held Saturday For C. D. Smock, 81, Klemme Man

TRAINING OF THE SHOW CALF SHOULD BEGIN

Daily Care of Club Animal Important As The Season Approaches

Proper fitting of dairy calves for 4-H club shows cannot be accomplished in a few days but depends upon the feeding and care given from time of birth, says Floyd Johnston, extension dairy husbandryman at Iowa State College.

It is a good plan to put a halter on the calf and lead her around for a few minutes each day, teaching her to stand properly.

The calf's feet may be overgrown and long so that she cannot stand in a normal position. Johnston says the toes can be pinched off with a pair of pinchers, then the wall and sole can be trimmed with a knife and rasped.

Use The Clippers

The form of the calf can be improved by the judicious use of clippers. It may be necessary to clip the entire body of the calf if the hair is long and inclined to be coarse. This should be done a week or two before the show and again shortly before the show.

After being clipped the calf should be thoroughly washed with soap and warm water, especially a Holstein, Brown Swiss or Aryshire. Jerseys and Guernseys are not washed unless very dirty. Vigorous use of a brush will help remove dandruff and excess dirt.

Polish Horns

Horns should be polished by rasping, then smoothed with steel wool or an emery cloth, then a mixture of sweet oil and pumice stone

The currycomb should be used--on flanks, legs and belly only—at least once a day. The rest of the body should be cleaned with a soft brush and flannel rag. A blanket made of burlap sacks with a flannel blanket underneath helps keep the animal clean and quickens the arrival of desired handling qualities.

Oil The Hair

Just before showing, an oiled cloth should be rubbed over the hair to give it a silky appearance. A mixture of equal parts sweet oil and alcohol is good when applied with flannel and then massaged until the desired gloss is acquired.

The switch should be washed several times before show day. The day before showing it should be washed and, if yellow. bleached with bluing and combed out.

IOWA'S HEAT WAVE WAS BROKEN BY DOWNPOUR OF RAIN

Iowa's heat wave came to a sudden halt last Thursday night when cooler air moved in from the northwest and was accompanied by heavy rains.

This section of Iowa, received two or three inches of rain, and since then has also enjoyed a number of good showers.

Threshing. which was well under way in this section of the state came to a stop with the coming of wet weather.

The heat wave of the past week damaged the corn to some extent and the rains were welcomed by all.

U. S. Army's 'Blitzkrieg' Maneuvers Will Train Biggest Peace-Time Force

By MILTON R. KENTON
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

AMERICA will be struck by a "blitzkrieg" in August as troops mobilize throughout the country for the biggest war maneuvers in peacetime history.

Army experts are determined that no invading armies shall sweep across this country as they swept through many European nations. To meet this challenge more than 310,000 members of the regular army, National Guard, and Reserve corps are being called to the colors for intensive training under actual conditions of warfare.

New methods of war will be tried out in four sections of the country. More than 100,000 troops from 12 states will gather near Plattsburg, N. Y., from August 5 to 25 to prepare for an invasion coming up the St. Lawrence river valley.

Biggest 'War Area.'

Other large armies will mobilize in Louisiana, Minnesota and Washington from August 4 to 24. At Camp McCoy, Wisconsin, 65,000 troops will put into practice all the new methods of modern warfare from "panzer" divisions to foot infantry for three weeks beginning August 11 on a 1,000 square mile battlefield. This will be the biggest of the "war" areas.

American military authorities do not believe that the great success of the German army resulted solely from the use of dive bombers and massed tanks. They point out that while these are important, the human machine of flesh and blood is still the ultimate factor in battle. They refuse to put sole reliance on mechanized divisions, but believe that soldiers armed with rifles and machine guns are still indispensable.

Lieut. Gen. Stanley H. Ford, who will be in charge at Camp McCoy, declared that "despite talk of streamlined tactics and the large number of trucks and passenger cars available during these concentrations, doughboys will still fight on foot and must be able to march Annihilation ensues when a motor convoy of troops is caught under artillery fire and air bombs. Areas of from 6 to 10 miles from the front line are within artillery range and must be covered on foot in approach march formations."

Mechanization Vital.

Motorized and mechanized divisions are not being neglected, however. More than 7,500 motorized units will participate in the Wisconsin maneuvers. Equally large numbers of mechanized units will participate in the other camps. Even this large number of motor vehicles does not mean that horses have been entirely replaced, because about two thousand animals are used in the Fifty-third and Fifty-fourth National Guard Cavalry brigades. The artillery and supply units are entirely motorized; some of the units changed over from horses and mules within the past few months.

Nationwide U. S. army maneuvers testing the latest developments in "blitzkrieg" warfare will call 310,000 men to the colors during August. Above are shown Brig. Gen. Adna R. Chaffee, recently appointed commander of the army's first big scale Panzer corps.

No army can succeed unless it is directed intelligently by well-trained officers. The movement of troops has been a problem of tremendous importance to commanders of all ranks throughout military history. Valuable experience in directing this movement will be given officers in charge of maneuvers in all parts of the country. Officers in charge of these maneuvers have been thoroughly schooled in solving logistical problems dealing with movement of troops, supply and evacuation.

Every method of transportation except hiking will be used in effecting the concentration at the various camps. Units will arrive by air, motor and rail at the rate of 75 detachments each 24 hours during the three days the army will be concentrating at Camp McCoy.

One of the more spectacular movements will be the march of the mechanized Seventh Cavalry brigade for 560 miles over the highways from Fort Knox, Ky., to Camp McCoy. The brigade will form a column of more than 1,000 vehicles approximately 60 miles long Brig. Gen. Adna R. Chaffee, commander of the brigade, was recently named commander of the army's first big scale panzer corps.

The column will be composed of almost every kind of vehicle used in a modern army. There will be 400 combat cars similar to the light infantry tank, mobile machine shops, half track prime movers to tow 75 mm. howitzers, gasoline tank trucks, 40 scout cars and a large number of infantry tanks.

Problems Involved.

An army officer explained that transporting large numbers of troops to a point of concentration presented just a few more problems than finding cars for a Sunday School picnic. A total of 30,000 troops will move to Wisconsin maneuvers by 150 motor convoys. They will bivouac overnight where necessary. The troops moving by rail will be carried on 78 regular and special trains. No stops will be made for meals, but the men will be served from field kitchens set up in the baggage cars. In addition to this, about 1,200 tons of National Guard equipment, including tanks, combat cars and ambulances, will be transported by rail from more than 300 different stations.

It is estimated that by the time the maneuvers have ended, each vehicle will have traveled 1,250 miles. More than a million gallons of gasoline will have been burned. If this fuel were concentrated at one point, 135 railroad tank cars would be required to hold it.

Even though modern troops are carried in transport trucks, military experts still believe that an army marches on its stomach. American soldiers, long known as the best-fed in the world, still receive three square meals a day, every day during the maneuvers.

But chefs working in 766 separate kitchens at Camp McCoy will be allowed to spend only 38½ cents daily for supplies to feed each soldier. The small allowance is "stretched" a long way through the purchase of such small quantities of food as 1,250,000 eggs, 273,500 pounds of sugar, 37,900 pounds of salt, 190,000 lemons and 16 tons of corned beef. During the three week period, the army in Wisconsin will also eat 85 tons of fresh beef, a carload of hot dogs, 12 tons of macaroni and a carload of roasting chickens.

'Real Operations.'

Plans have been carefully laid to provide for efficient handling of the food supply. "The entire supply system will function exactly as in real operations," General Ford stated. "This phase of the training will be extremely important. The ration is ample, menus are balanced and well diversified."

The war maneuvers will provide the best opportunity the army has had to try out its newly motorized equipment on a large scale. While individual units have received considerable experience, this will be the first time that all the units attending the maneuvers have operated together under battle conditions.

"Operating a military motor convoy of hundreds of vehicles at night without lights requires special training," General Ford explained. "It is possible that during the Wisconsin maneuvers the state of this special training may prove to be a vital factor in the success of tactical motor movements.

"The 1,000 square mile maneuver area will permit mechanized units to operate in wide encircling raids exactly as they do in real operations."

Commanding generals in the field often become lost in the "fog of war" without constant communication with other units engaging in the battle. To prevent this situation, special attention is being given to rapid communications. Approximately 2,000 miles of wire will be laid in the Wisconsin battlefield alone, connecting 3,000 telephones during the grand concluding maneuver. This equipment will mark a new development in telephony because the wires are used for simultaneous transmission of telephone and code telegraphy messages.

Rickenbacker's Prediction In 1930 Almost True Today

"I'm no prophet!" That's what World War Ace Eddie Rickenbacker would probably say if he were asked what's going to happen 10 years from now. Nevertheless, 10 years ago he made an amazing prediction

In 1930, there was no commercial passenger aircraft from coast to coast in the U S. None at all. On April 27, 1930, nevertheless, Captain Rickenbacker made this prediction. "We will make coast-to-coast airplane trips in 1940 in 10 hours Cruising speeds of 250 miles an hour will be common."

And he almost hit the nail on the head. And unlike most predictions, it came true.

"Stratosphere" flying between the coasts on a schedule of 13 hours and 40 minutes began on regular schedule during July of this year

Actually only 11 hours and 45 minutes were required by the new "stratoliner" on its maiden flight, July 9. The pilot disregarded the schedule that had been so carefully planned and "let the ponies run." By forcing the plane and missing two of the scheduled three stops, he cut more than an hour off the previous coast-to-coast record. Before the new service was started, normal commercial flying time was 15 hours and 42 minutes.

15 Passengers Aboard.

The stratoliner fought headwinds part of the way to cruise 248 miles an hour on the inaugural flight. One stop was made in Kansas City where the plane took on 1,500 gallons of gasoline. The trip was made with a full commercial load of 15 passengers, including some movie stars (of course!) and a crew of three.

Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker, whose prediction in 1930 of a 10-hour coast-to-coast air service in 1940 is almost true.

Captain Rickenbacker's statement forecasting this great advance in aviation was printed in the Washington (D. C.) Sunday Star on April 27, 1930.

Though Rickenbacker had made his prediction when there was no coast-to-coast air passenger service, six months later the first of such commercial flights took place. These flights were still a far cry from his prediction. The then newly organized Transcontinental and Western Air Line proudly announced that their planes would fly passengers across the continent in only 36 hours.

The prediction was based upon sound reasoning, and not upon "super-optimism" or a desire for notoriety.

SPANKED WIVES

Sioux City, S. D., has the distinction (perhaps dubious) of a new organization called the Spanked Wives club. According to Mrs. Lora Lane, the club's leader, the aims of the organization are based on a happier home life. The club is made up of wives who got spanked by their husbands when they needed it, Mrs. Lane says. "Our husbands don't beat us, they just spank us," she says.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By DREW PEARSON & ROBERT ALLEN

Washington, D. C.

SPHINX ROOSEVELT

Franklin Roosevelt will go down in history as the greatest keeper of a secret in American politics.

For more than two years scores of friends, Democratic leaders, newsmen and others tried their hand at worming from him some hint on the third term question. None succeeded until the Democratic convention was only a week away—and this one, Jim Farley, in turn sealed his own lips.

Except for Farley, there wasn't a person on earth who could say he had heard from Roosevelt himself what he planned to do.

There were many to whom he said that he did not want to run. There were some to whom he voiced a preference for Secretary of State Cordell Hull as his successor. But there was no one, including members of his family, to whom the President gave the slightest clue whether he would run again.

Illustrative of the complete mystery even within the inner council was the fact that Secretary Morgenthau did not believe the President would be a candidate, while Secretary Hopkins was confident that he would. Both had to admit that Roosevelt had said nothing and that their opinions were based wholly on "deductions."

Last week Sen. Sherman Minton, New Deal whip, and State Chairman Bays of Indiana, tried to penetrate the silence. Both are members of the Hoosier convention delegation and strong third-termers. As they were leaving after a White House call they said: "We hope we'll have the privilege, Mr. President, of voting for you at Chicago."

Roosevelt smiled broadly and replied, "I'm sure we'll have a ticket that will win."

Possibly the secret of how Roosevelt kept his secret so well and so long was that he didn't know himself what he was going to do.

Significant was a remark he made to a Midwesterner following the nomination of Wendell Willkie. The visitor expressed the view that Willkie's candidacy made it necessary for the President to run again.

"There isn't anyone who can lick him but you, Mr. President," the caller said. "I think what happened in Philadelphia makes it imperative that you run. I am sure you don't want to; no man who has undergone the ordeal you have for eight years would want any more of it. But it's not a case any more of your preference. In my opinion, the choice is no longer yours."

The President paused as if thinking, then said quietly, as if to himself, "This decision will be the most momentous in my life."

FOREIGN AFFAIRS PLANK

For the Democratic platform makers, like the Republicans, the biggest headache was the foreign affairs plank.

The same bellicose forces, isolationist and anti, which made life miserable for the Philadelphia platform writers, gave the deep blues to the Democrats. In fact, the rival camps among the Democrats were even more troublesome.

The Republicans, while they squabbled hotly among themselves behind closed doors, were too conscious of party interest to kick up an open ruckus. On the final showdown, the boys worked out a compromise that gave each side a sop. The result was rather ambiguous, but it left the door open for the Republican candidate to move whichever way he wanted.

But the prima donna Democratic factions were insisting on the whole hog or nothing. Senator Burt Wheeler, backed by the glowering John L. Lewis, is demanding an unequivocal, isolationist, no-war declaration; and threatens to head a third-party ticket if he doesn't get his way.

Anti-isolationists, foremost among them Roosevelt himself, are flatly against such a plank. At the same time, they were acutely aware of the powerful "peace" sentiment in the country and they know they've got to watch their step.

CONVENTION NOTES

The Chicago convention literally dripped with vice presidential candidates. With more than a score already in the field, Iowa's genial, bald-domed Senator Herring tossed his hat in the ring . . . One Washington correspondent at Chicago attended the convention in a dual capacity. Tall, mellow-tempered Bascom Timmons covered the convention as a newsman and also acted as the national committeeman proxy of his close friend and fellow Texan, Vice President Jack Garner.

HITLER AND NAPOLEON

("Hitler Visits Tomb of Napoleon."—headline)

Napoleon—Stop staring at me!

Hitler—I'm not staring at you; I'm looking at what I thought was a reflection.

Napoleon—Go away. I'm tired of tourists.

Hitler—I'm no tourist.

Napoleon—Who are you?

Hitler—I'm the new landlord.

Napoleon—You are joking.

Hitler — That's what a lot of people thought. Listen, Nappie, it's time you and I met. We have everything in common. We are two of a type.

Napoleon—Do you realize you are talking to the most famous conqueror in history?

Hitler—That's the very question I was going to ask you. You were good for your time, but you're outclassed.

Napoleon—By whom, may I ask?

Hitler—Even if you didn't ask, I'd still tell you. By me!

Napoleon—Who are you?

Hitler—I am Adolf Hitler.

Napoleon—Hitler? Hitler? I once knew a sausage maker named Hitler . . .

Hitler—I am the conqueror of most of Europe. In two years I have taken nine nations.

Napoleon (bored)—I wish I knew what you smoked.

Hitler—In two months I took Denmark, Norway, Belgium, Holland and France.

Napoleon — Nobody ever takes France. It's purely an illusion.

Hitler—Believe it or not, I have captured France.

Napoleon (derisively)—You and who else?

Hitler—Paris is mine. This tomb is mine. I even own you. Think of it, Napoleon the Great now under the ownership of Adolf Hitler!

Napoleon (wincing) — As if I hadn't suffered enough during those years at St. Helena! Bah, the world must be softening up. You don't look like a conqueror.

Hitler—You don't look any too hot yourself.

Napoleon—Go on with your story. You say you have conquered nine nations?

Hitler—I have the world at my feet.

Napoleon — That's what I was crazy enough to think once! Remember it's only a short trip from your feet to your throat.

Hitler—And do you know what I am going to do next? I am going to capture England!

Napoleon—Take a tip from me and forget it. I once had that idea.

Hitler—I shall capture the British isles and destroy the British empire.

Napoleon—Would you mind repeating that?

Hitler—I shall capture the British isles and destroy the British empire. I shall be boss of Europe and of the world, the greatest conqueror of all time!

Napoleon (beckoning)—Come on in! I'll move over!

m its beginnings, the United s has been a peace-loving n and has figuratively leaned backwards to avoid any lance of militarism. The ling fathers, seeing in Europe esults of despotic power sup- d by a strong military estab- ent, resolved that there d be no such thing here to r their efforts to establish a rnment whose power would erived "from the consent of overned."

First National Defense Bill.

n July 1, 1790, Elias Boudinot New Jersey introduced a na- al defense bill which proposed the organization and training ur peacetime army consist of uping all the younger men in cial "light infantry" com- ies" in each regiment of the eral militia. If war came, e companies could be assem- into battalions and regi- nts and thus form a new Con- ntal army. Similar com- ies were to be formed in the er branches of the service and of them were to have a "sound tem of discipline" and be ined under federal supervision.

he first congress failed to act the Boudinot bill and in the session of the second con- ss a similar measure was in- duced by Jeremiah Wadsworth Connecticut. But before it was lly passed it was so amended emasculated that Wadsworth self voted "no" on it.

Washington, though greatly dis- pointed in this new militia law, ertheless signed it with the hope that it might be amended later. How worthless was this law was proved two decades later when the nation tried to assemble an army to repel the invasion of the British in the War of 1812. It failed miserably with the result that the enemy easily defeated the defenders of Washington, captured that city and burned the Capitol and the White House.

Meanwhile events on the frontier already had proved that our regular army was inadequate to perform the tasks expected of it. In 1790 it suffered a severe reverse under the leadership of Gen. Josiah Harmar who was sent to subdue the hostile tribes in the Old Northwest. The next year occurred the defeat and rout of the army led by Gen. Arthur St. Clair, the worst military disaster in America since the days of Braddock. These two fiascoes not only resulted in the Indians renewing their attacks on the western settlements with even greater fury but they indicated to an alarmed country how impotent was the new federal government.

More than that, France and England were on the verge of renewing their ancient feud and there was danger of the United States being drawn into it. All of these factors pointed to the urgent necessity of our strengthening our forces for national defense. So Secretary Knox launched his recruiting campaign to obtain a regular army that would be equal to the task of defeating the confederation of tribes which had been formed by Chief Little Turtle of the Miamis.

In the light of the present drive to increase our army, the instructions to recruiting officers sent out by Secretary Knox in 1792 make interesting reading today. Indicative of the difficulties which the federal government was having in those days is the secretary's statement that "The recruiting service is sometimes abused, both as it respects the individuals recruited and the public at large—that is, recruits are unwarily and unworthily entangled, contrary to their intentions; such men generally desert the service, at some critical moment, or serve grudgingly, and set bad examples to others; or, unsuitable persons are engaged, who are constitutionally defective and unfit for the hardships incident to a military life . . . In order therefore to avoid the errors of this business, the following instructions are to serve as the general rules and principles of your conduct."

Knox's Recruiting Instructions.

He then goes on to list the regulations governing recruiting. Some of them were as follows:

The recruits are to be inlisted for three years, unless sooner discharged.

Each recruit is to receive a bounty of Eight Dollars, but no part of this sum is to be advanced until the recruit shall have been fairly inlisted and sworn before a Magistrate, according to the form herein prescribed, and then only the said sum is to be advanced in such proportions as the judgment of the recruiting officer shall dictate, until experience shall in some degree have ascertained the fidelity of the recruit.

Every recruiting officer shall be allowed the sum of Two Dollars, for the trouble and expence of inlisting each recruit;—provided however that such allowance will not be made for any recruit who shall desert before he shall march from the rendezvous of the troops in the State where he shall have been recruited

The utmost fairness is to be used by the recruiting officers, in engaging their recruits, no individual therefore is to be inlisted in a state of intoxication, or to be sworn until after he shall have been inlisted for the space of twenty-four hours

Each recruit (musicians excepted) must be five feet and five inches in heighth, without shoes he must also be healthy, robust and sound in his limbs and body, in all respects, and to ascertain which he must be thoroughly examined, previously to inlistment, by a Physician or Surgeon,—but if notwithstanding this direction a recruit should have any secret disease at the time of his inlistment, the expence of his cure, if retained in service shall be deducted from his pay

Each recruit, before he is sworn is to have distinctly read to him the rules and articles of war against mutiny and desertion, and relative to the administration of justice, and also the Act of Congress of the 30th of April 1790, establishing the rations, clothing, and compensation in cases of disability; and the Act of the 5th of March 1792, establishing the pay; after which he is to take the following Oath, before a Magistrate, to wit:

"I A B do solemnly swear (or affirm, as the case may be) to bear true allegiance to the United States of America, and to serve them honestly and faithfully against all their enemies or opposers whomsoever, and to observe and to obey the orders of the President of the United States of America, and the orders of the officers appointed over me according to the articles of war"

Each recruit (musicians excepted) must be above eighteen and under forty five years of age

No negro, mulatto, or indian, to be recruited

All the recruits, if possible, to be natives of fair conduct, or foreigners of good character for sobriety and fidelity, and who have been some years in the country Any recruiting officer inlisting a vagrant, or transient person, who shall desert before marching from the place of rendezvous, shall reimburse out of his pay the loss sustained by such desertion—It is therefore important that the officers be attentive on this point, as a compliance with this order will be rigidly exacted The public interests will be better served by a small army of brave, robust, and faithful soldiers, than by a multitude of vagabonds

As soon as the recruits shall be assembled at the rendezvous, they are to be taught, by gentle methods, regularity of conduct, as it shall respect cleanliness of their persons, diet and rooms, and also due subordination, and they are to be exercised at least four hours in every day, in the attitudes and other first principles of a soldier

Qualifications Today.

Compare with those specifications laid down by Henry Knox, the qualifications for enlistment in the regular army today:

Applicants must be between the ages of 18 and 35 for original enlistment, unmarried, without other dependents, and those under 21 must have the written consent of parents or guardians; they must be at least five feet four inches in height, and weigh not less than 115 pounds; they must be of good moral character as evidenced by written testimonials from reputable citizens of their respective communities; they must be in good health and free from incapacitating or disfiguring deformities; they must be citizens of the United States by birth or naturalization at the time of enlistment; and they must be able to pass certain intelligence and literacy tests prescribed for the regular army.

Monthly rates of pay for the several grades as prescribed by law at present are as follows:

Master sergeant, $126 to $157 50; technical sergeant, $84 to $105; staff sergeant, $72 to $90; sergeant, $54 to $67.50; corporal, $42 to $52.50; private, first class, $30 to $37.50; private, $21 to $26.25.

The first figure given in each instance is the pay of the grade during the first four years of service. This amount is increased by 5 per cent every four years, until a total of 25 per cent has been added. In addition to the foregoing, numerous specialists ratings are provided for privates and privates, first class, whereby their pay is materially increased.

In addition to these monthly wages, Uncle Sam furnishes clothing, food, housing and free medical and dental treatment.

In view of all these facts it is easy to understand why he is having a greater and readier response to his "I want YOU for the United States Army" than he would likely have had if it had been uttered back in 1792!

Gen. Henry Knox, secretary of war, was sending these instructions to his recruiting officers back in 1792.

GENERAL HUGH S. JOHNSON Says:

United Features WNU Service

Washington, D. C.

MANPOWER PROBLEM

A group of 240 distinguished educators, clergymen, writers and business leaders have just declared against any "peacetime" conscription. They say it is un-American, totalitarian, un-democratic and that it would disrupt business and industry.

They say that highly skilled men needed for any new mechanized, motorized war can be had by voluntary enlistment "under pay schedules sufficiently attractive." This protest springs from incomplete understanding of the principle of selective service.

There are three steps in the selective process—registration, classification and induction. Only the last is in any sense conscription. Registration is universal enrollment of the manpower of the nation. Classification is an examination of them all to see what are the special education, skills and aptitudes of each man, and which can be classified for military or other service with the least possible inconvenience to himself, the greatest consideration for his own wishes, the slightest disturbance to our economic system—industry, commerce, agriculture education—and, above all, domestic relations and the dependency of others.

Class 1-A, at the beginning at least, should comprise all men who could serve with none or the very slightest impairment of any of these standards. When that class is determined, the order of their going or "induction," is determined by a national lottery or "drawing" already conducted in Washington covering all men registered. At this point, and especially during peace, or before the drain of war has created any real manpower problem, a provision used during the latter part of the 1917-18 draft preserves all the virtues of the volunteer system, with none of its disruptive and sometimes hateful consequences. We called it "volunteering within call A-1."

Class A-1, in our present situation would contain many times the number we need. It would be made up of the most available men of this nation—men who are best fitted for service and who, in the balance of responsibilities between national and private obligations have the least of the latter. Regardless of the ultimate compulsion of their "order-number," those who want to go first should be permitted to volunteer.

The inducement of topping high current civilian competitive rates of pay for voluntary enlistment, won't work. It carries a hint of the stigma of the old mercenary armies—which is worse than that of the old "press-gang" conscript armies—and it would make defensive costs prohibitive. Major Eliot's recent suggestion of a few extra dollars added to $21 monthly base pay, wouldn't induce the kind of men we need to quit their jobs.

A principal deterrent to voluntary enlistment is that the term is long and rigid. It should be one year or for duration of the emergency.

Few men want to mortgage away three years of their lives in this rapidly changing world on any ground except patriotism.

We seem to be galloping in all directions on this manpower problem. Under the federal bureau of education and WPA we have begun training men as mechanics who have assumed no obligation to serve. Under the volunteer plan, we are enlisting men regardless of their mechanical training. The whole effort is hit-or-miss and haywire. If the true principles of selective service could be expertly applied on the basis of experience, we would have the most fair, flexible, efficient manpower system in the world.

RUBBER AND TIN

Some of its esteemed contemporaries do not agree with this column's rebuttal of the constant claims that we are dependent on the British and Dutch East Indies for rubber and tin and that it was only the concurrence of England that has enabled us to maintain the Monroe Doctrine.

Nobody has contested the facts that we could make better rubber than we buy or, that by using conservation, substitution and Bolivian tin, we could get by without East Indian tin. But it is said that it would be inconvenient, take a long time and cost too much.

I challenge all of this. As to rubber, the fact is that if we, who use 55 per cent of all the world's rubber, turned to mass production on that vast tonnage, it would cost no more than the present price—which is low.

Quite apart from all this, long ago it was reported by the President's own national resources committee that for less than the price of two battleships, we could lay in enough East Indian tin and rubber to make us independent of foreign sources for the reasonably expected duration of any war. This administration didn't do it. It seems to have some strange reluctance to take Uncle Sam's whiskers out of that revolving wringer in the Far East. Instead of buying vital tin and rubber, it bought billions of dollars worth of useless silver and unnecessary gold

It is poor economy to save ice by wrapping it in heavy paper or cloth. Such covering insulates the ice from the rest of the refrigerator.

To prevent cauliflower from turning dark while cooking, put a slice of lemon in the water in which it is cooked.

Never use water that has been boiled before or has been standing in the kettle to make tea. Draw fresh cold water and let it boil for the first time. Water that has boiled before tastes flat, because the air has gone out of it.

Broiled tomato slices not only decorate but also improve the flavor of steak or chops.

What should we eat?

If you're lucky enough to have a mechanical refrigerator, try, for dessert:

Frozen Fruit Salad

1 c. heavy cream
½ c. sugar
¼ c. orange juice
1 c. pineapple cut fine
1 c. white cherries (cut up)
½ c. diced orange (membrane removed)
½ c. diced peaches (canned)
1 c. diced bananas
1 c. boiled salad dressing

Drain all the fruit well. Other fruits on hand may be substituted Whip the cream until stiff, add the sugar the salad dressing and the orange juice and fruit. Put in trays and freeze in electric refrigerator or into molds and freeze in ice and salt. Will serve 18 to 20.

A delightful drink for summer is:

Frappe

Juice of 6 lemons
Juice of 4 oranges
1 c grape juice (or raspberry or loganberry)
Enough water to make 1 gallon
1 lb. (2 c.) sugar
2 drops mint extract

To get the proper blend of flavors, this mixture should be held at a low temperature in a glass container for a few hours before serving It may be served in either a fluid or a semi-frozen state

START WEEDING OUT UNPRODUCTIVE EWES

This is the right time of year for farmers with sheep to check up on the past productivity of their ewes and consider if they are worth saving for another breeding season, says W. F. LaGrange, animal husbandry specialist at Iowa State College

Ewes which produced lambs that did not nurse well or grow properly may need replacing by younger stock. Daughters of good producing ewes, from quality farms are the ones which should be kept for replacement, LaGrang says. They should replace the "indifferent" ewes which have kept down the total production of the flock.

Unless lambs still are too small to do without milk, they should be weaned now so that the ewes may be put back in condition before breeding time The ewes should run on ordinary pasture after the weaning to maintain their weight and perhaps gain a bit. Early in September they should be put on better pasture and should be gaining weight at the time of breeding.

LaGrange urges more of Iowa sheepmen to produce early lambs which may be marketed not later than June 14 There has been a sharp incline in native lamb prices after June 15 in recent years. To produce early lambs, ewes should be bred between the middle and last of September.

Fogs Are a Real Problem

Fog, that thick pea-soup kind for which England is noted, interferes so much with the operation of railways that special means have to be taken to cope with it. Fog signalmen are placed at important points They live near their work, and on their own initiative go to their posts when fog descends. Or they may be called from signal boxes. They use 300,000 detonators—or "torpedoes," as they are known in America. The noisemakers tell the engineers the position of the signal hidden from view by the fog As an additional safeguard, the Great Western railway has its own system of automatic train control. If the line is clear a bell rings by the engineer's side. If not, a siren blows and brakes are automatically applied. The device is operated by signalmen through an electric ramp at each caution signal on 2,855 miles of track and 3,250 engines.

Iceland Splitting

Indications that Iceland is splitting in two have been found in fissures or cracks stretching from northeast to southeast of the island, all lying in the same direction Reykjavik has received reports that near these cracks, which reach far down into the earth, is a row of volcanoes from which erupt fields of lava larger than any other of similar type in the world. Scientists will take measures of the distance between mountain peaks on each side of the crack to determine if they are moving apart. If they are it will be evidence of Alfred Wegener's theory of continental drift, that America has been slipping away from Europe for millions of years and that the Atlantic was thus formed between them.

MEN ALOFT

Teachers Are Born, Aviators Are Made... By the Army

That Is Conclusion That Murl Estes Has Reached and He Should Know

By O. L. PARKS,
Pres. Parks Air College

It was after 2½ years of his course at Southwestern Missouri Teachers' College in Springfield that he swerved from education as a vocation to aviation as a career. "The teaching profession is honorable and noble," Estes figured, "but the sky is calling and I just can't keep my feet on the ground."

It all started when Estes saw his first squadron of Army airplanes and talked to some of the tall, weather-tanned and trim officers. He was so thrilled with aviation that he couldn't keep his mind on such earth-bound subjects as algebra and zoology when he went back to school.

And so between semesters he made a momentous decision and enrolled in the United States Army Air Corps Training Center in 1928. Then followed flight instruction in rugged primary training planes and then in more advanced ships.

After a year he had the biggest thrill of his life; graduation and the winning of his wings. Then a brief trip to his home town of Logan, Mo., in his handsome new uniform as a second lieutenant in the Army Air Corps.

In two years at Selfridge Field, Michigan, he acquired on active duty with the Air Corps hours in the air that qualified him for a transport pilot's license. And he was off to new horizons; 10 months as co-pilot with TWA; pilot with Pennsylvania Central Airlines in June, 1932 and a long record of excellent service along the skyways.

The years have made a roster of his passengers read like pages from "Who's Who." The ships he flew have carried movie stars, orchestra leaders, statesmen, financiers and famous professional men. His passengers have included specialists speeding on missions of mercy, to perform vital operations in some far-off hospital; honeymoon couples and businessmen to whom time saved is money earned.

In speeding his passengers to important operations, conferences and on other missions, Murl has played a silent role as hero. To the organization that made possible his post in aviation, the United States Army Air Corps Training Center, he is quick with his praise: "It's the world's best school. 'Mr Chips' had a grand life as a teacher but I wouldn't trade places with him My job's in the sky."

The Secretary of the Army Air Corps Training Center at Randolph Field, Texas, is glad to explain by mail to young men the program that prepared Estes for the place in aviation he likes so well. The program reads like a wonderful dream but it is as true as Murl has found his epigram to be: "Teachers are born, aviators are made . . . By the Army"

Simpson Sand Dunes

The Simpson sand dunes, in Australia are from 50 to 100 miles in length, are peculiar in that they run parallel to the prevailing wind instead of at right angles as in most deserts. The burning waste is notable chiefly, says the Washington Post, for the fact that a few feet below its surface lies the world's greatest underground reservoir of water. The water is held in sand and imprisoned below the surface by a layer of clay. When a well is drilled, the water rushes out with a roar. Billions of gallons underlie the desert and may some day be utilized to turn it into a blooming garden.

Elihu Yale

Elihu Yale, English colonial official, was born at or near Boston, Mass, in 1648. When four years old he was taken to England by his father and he never returned to America. From 1687 to 1692 he was governor of Fort Saint George, Madras, and in 1699 became governor of the East India company. Yale college received his name in the charter of 1745. Previously the building, and, before that, the school at Saybrook, had been called by his name. He bequeathed gifts of money and books to the institution. He died in 1721 and was buried at Wrexham, Wales.

Garfield's Inauguration

When James A. Garfield was inaugurated president in 1881, he was one of six Ohioans who had prominent places in the ceremony. On the platform with Garfield were Rutherford B. Hayes, retiring president; William T. Sherman, commander of the United States Army; Philip Sheridan, lieutenant general of the United States Army; John Sherman, secretary of the treasury, all of whom were native-born Ohioans, and Morrison R. Waite, chief justice of the Supreme Court, who administered the oath. Although not a native Ohioan, Waite was a lifelong resident of the state.

Grease Paints

Grease paints may fairly claim to be the oldest kind of paint. It is only reasonable to suppose—and this is borne out by the practice of savage tribes — that the earliest paints may have been pigments mixed with grease or fat. Such a paint adheres to the human skin with considerable persistence, yet it may be removed by thorough washing. Of this nature are the greasepaints used by actors.

Old Timers.

F. H. Goecher of Clarinda had a birthday party recently—his 82nd. Five other octogenarians helped him celebrate.

Pilots.

Four Oakland men—D. J. Spencer, M. A. Wehrle, Fred Clark and Coy Lindsey—bought an airplane in partnership recently. They have been taking flying lessons for several months.

Too much fly spray on cattle, especially in very hot weather, will cause injury, sickness and even death. A fine mist sprayed on the hair is sufficient.

Lemon juice added to cooking water (2 tablespoons juice to 1 quart of water) will keep cauliflower, corn, rice and potatoes white.

ALLOW MILK COWS TO GRAZE AT NIGHT

When temperatures mount to 90 or 100 degrees, dairy cows are better off in almost any shady spot than in the open pasture. They won't eat when they're overheated anyway says, A. R. Porter, Iowa State College extension dairyman.

Many dairymen keep their cows in a shaded yard, feed them a little silage and grain, and turn them out to pasture at night.

"Heat is really more detrimental than flies to mid-summer milk production," Porter says. "Cows are not well equipped with sweat glands, and when they get too warm the only way they can cool off is to breathe faster. And this burns up food materials that would otherwise go into milk production.

Convinced that comfort is just as important to the milker as the cow. a number of resourceful farmers have installed "cooling systems" in their barns Usually this consists of an electric fan, blowing directly on the cows or through an old radiator over which water is dripping.

Another good idea is to cover the windows with washable blue paint. This darkens the room and keeps the flies down

1910 DRIEST YEAR IN IOWA!

The driest calender year in Iowa was during 1910 and not during the years such as 1886, 1894, 1901, 1930, 1934, nor 1936, states Charles D. Reed, Director of the Weather Division of the Iowa Department of Agriculture.

Reed gives the average precipitation for the state as a whole in 1910 as only 19 87 inches, with the state average below normal in every month with the exception of January At many north central and west central Iowa stations during 1910, from 100 to 120 days passed with one inch or less of precipitation, and even during the year's crop season, some northeast and east central stations such as Decorah, with only 07 inch of rain in 49 days (May 29 to July 16) had an inch or less of precipitation in 66 to 78 days, thus establishing records. In this abnormally dry year, however, the average crop yield per acre of all the principal crops was above normal.

City Slicker

THE city slicker of American folklore again has his eyes on the pretty milkmaid.

In other words, the liquor industry is out to woo the population of the small city and farm.

In mid-1939 the director of public relations of the National Distillers told the liquor industry:

"Instead of dumping more hundreds of thousands of dollars into the coffers of big-town newspapers, I have advocated for two years and will continue to advocate the diversion of distiller advertising to the smaller towns, even the county seats."

The reason for such attempts to mislead the small city and rural population is easy to find. The liquor industry fears the reaction of the intelligent, individualistic, thinking rural resident to the social evils which have followed repeal. The industry will spend much money to try to woo public opinion in the small cities and on the farms, long the centers of temperance sentiment.

Despite this campaign, 59 per cent of more than 10,000 weekly newspapers still refuse to accept advertisements of distilled spirits; 50 per cent (one per cent more than in 1938) refuse even to accept beer advertising.

A large number of metropolitan newspapers and periodicals also refuse such advertising. The Ladies' Home Journal makes a definite, forthright statement of refusal to advertise liquor. Its editors say that its readers and its advertisers are the guests of the magazine but that there are some paying guests it does not welcome, such as those who influence others to their own detriment.

Mental Cases Increase.

The first six years of repeal showed a 55.5 per cent increase in new cases due to alcoholic intemperance at Illinois mental hospitals, as compared with the 1923-1928 period.

The survey covered the 1923 to 1939 years, 1923 being the earliest year tabulated by the Department of Public Welfare.

The total for the six years, 1923 to 1928, was 5,113, as against 7,951 for the first six years of repeal.

The tabulation showed a steady increase (only 1935 showing a temporary drop) beginning in 1932 of "first admissions due to intemperance."

In the last year tabulated, 1938, it was shown that 29 per cent of all first admissions to Illinois mental hospitals were patients described as "intemperate," the largest percentage officially reported in the 16-year period.

THE TWO WAYS

LESSON TEXT — Psalm 1: Matthew 7 24-27

GOLDEN TEXT—For the Lord knoweth the way of the righteous, but the way of the ungodly shall perish —Psalm 1 6.

The most important thing in life is living. That is not an attempt to make a striking statement, but a sincere effort to present a fact which too often escapes our attention. We are so concentrated upon making a living, or making money, or making a name for ourselves, that we often fail to make a life. God is more concerned about what we are than what we do.

There are only two ways—the right way and the wrong way. We build our life either on the true foundation or the false. There is no middle way, no half-good foundation. We must choose, and it is either one or the other.

I. Two Roads (Ps. 1).

Scripture is not at all concerned about mixing figures of speech, so long as the truth is graphically expressed and fully understood. Here it speaks of a man walking in the way, a tree planted by a river, the chaff of the threshing floor; and then returns to the figure of walking in the way. All of these present the same truth, for essentially the idea is that of the two ways in which men walk.

1. Choosing the Way (vv. 1, 4, 6). Even the choice of his way of life marks a man as either blessed or wicked. Some seem to think that they can choose or just drift into the wrong way and still have hope that all will be well. Their choice, or their failure to choose, has put them in the one class or the other.

Making a choice is a vital and serious matter. Let us do it carefully. Walking in the counsel or philosophy of the wicked soon results in a man lingering in the way of sinners, and before he is aware of it he will find himself so at home, that he will sit among them and scoff.

2. Continuing in the Way (vv. 2-4). The man who will permit the law of God to control every detail of life night and day will never go astray, but will prosper in everything he does. Observe that to prosper does not necessarily mean to have money, position or recognition in this world. It means to be a success in the thing which God has given one to do.

Much that this world calls prosperity is nothing but an empty show, while at the same time some lives which the world says have been wasted are prosperous in the sight of God because His will has been done.

3. At the End of the Way (vv. 5, 6). Every road of life comes to an end. "It is appointed unto men once to die, but after this the judgment" (Heb. 9.27). Ah yes—the judgment —what will it be in your life and in mme?

The wicked cannot stand in the presence of the divine Judge. All the bold front and boastful talk which went over so well before men, loses its flavor and the wicked man can only expect judgment. It is a dark and dreadful scene, but man need not go in the way which ends there, but may turn to God in faith and repentance.

II. Two Houses (Matt. 7:24-27).

Two men build houses evidently much alike, but we find that there is a great difference between them.

1. The Builders (vv. 24, 26). "Wise" and "foolish" are the builders, and what made them so was their choice of a foundation. No matter how brilliant a man may seem to be in the learning of this world, if he rejects God's Word he is foolish and bound to suffer the loss of everything.

2. The Foundations (vv. 24, 26). The foundation of life is really everything. Built on the sands of human philosophy or personal desire and in the rejection of God's will, man prepares only for disaster. But—and here is a glorious thought —the Son of God says that if a man will hear His sayings and build on them, no storm can destroy his building. Blessed assurance!

3. The Testing (vv. 25, 27). The time of testing always comes. It may come early in life, or it may be delayed, but be certain that it will come. To the believer in Christ it is only that—a testing, to prove that his house will stand. But to the one who has rejected Christ the testing time brings dreadful destruction.

Shining in the Heart

God, who commanded the light to shine out of darkness, hath shined in our hearts, to give the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ.—II Corinthians 4:6.

There's the Danger

If men make their plan of service and then ask God to help them, they may, by that very assertion of self, quench the Holy Spirit.

PATTERN DEPARTMENT SEWING CIRCLE

IF YOU have weight to consider, you couldn't choose a more attractive and becoming fashion than this gracious, softly detailed dress (8679) with high-cut front panel that diminishes the waistline and flattens the diaphragm. It fits beautifully over the bust, thanks to gathers at the waistline and beneath the cleverly shaped yoke. The bow at the deep neckline adds a soft, dressy touch, without fussiness.

The skirt is classically plain and slim-hipped, with moderate fullness at the hem. Make this for bridge parties, luncheons and club affairs, choosing chiffon, georgette or voile, with frills of lace or ruffling. And for all its expensive, distinguished appearance, this dress is easy to make.

Pattern No. 8679 is designed for sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48, 50 and 52. Size 38 requires, with short sleeves, 5⅞ yards of 39-inch material without nap; 1⅜ yards ruffling. Send order to:

Air Corps Training Makes Successful Airline Pilots

Captain "Bill" Fry Says Army Air Corps Training Is as Fine as Any Available

By O. L. PARKS,
Pres. Parks Air College

Gayest, happiest city in the world—that's what William J. "Bill" Fry calls New Orleans, when people from his native Virginia are not around. Bill, who flies the Chicago-New Orleans run for Chicago and Southern Air Lines, looks forward to his days off, to turtle soup and pompano at Antoine's and the Oysters Rockefeller that you can get at so many places in the Vieux Carriere.

To a World War veteran of Army aviation Bill owes his present enviable position as a captain with the air line. He ran into the officer when he was a student at the University of Richmond in his native state of Virginia.

The officer painted a bright picture of aviation, the Army training and the future either in the service or in air transportation, that was beginning to blossom The picture was so bright that Bill threw his books out of the window and left for Army Air Corps training at San Antonio, Texas.

But down in Texas he had to pick up other books for ground school classes in addition to his flight instruction. He kept up a smart pace and in a year he had his wings, his commission, and was off for a flight to new horizons

Since then he has occasionally wished he had finished the course at the University and taken a degree before beginning the Army training But, as a young Virginian, he was impulsive and knew that he had found the career he was intended for.

Between flights to Chicago and tours of New Orleans' beautiful and charming old French quarter, Bill took time out to say a word or two of appreciation for the Army training.

"In my opinion the training given in the Air Corps is as fine as any training available in this country," he declared "In view of the present-day requirements for flight personnel I strongly recommend a young man complete at least four years of college work, majoring in aviation subjects or aeronautical engineering and then, with the training given by the Army Air Corps, a career at the top is assured"

After his own graduation from the Army school of instruction, Bill went down among the Georgia peaches for his active duty He still has pleasant memories of Atlanta and is looking forward to seeing its historical scenes pictured in the epic "Gone With The Wind."

From Atlanta Bill went to American Airlines (at that time, American Airways), immediately obtained a position as co-pilot. Later he was promoted to pilot, a post he also held with Western Air Express. In 1934 he joined Chicago and Southern as first officer and was quickly promoted to captain in the same year.

The Secretary of the Army Training Center at San Antonio will be glad to send information about the program that made possible Bill's successful career, available to young men 20 to 26 years of age who have had two years or more of college education.

Costs of Repeal

THE average American citizen is a canny individual. He may believe for a little while what he's told by the propagandists, but pretty soon he gets to thinking things over.

That's just about what is happening to the alcohol question. John Q. Public has heard from every propaganda source about what repeal has done to boost America out of the depression. But when he starts realizing that he has spent more for liquor (which is money thrown down the sink as far as any net economic benefit is concerned) than he has for government relief, he gets to wondering about it.

On Jan. 1, 1940, John Q. Public's tippling had cost him $25,364,509,062, exceeding the total spent for relief by 10 billion dollars and far exceeding the $20,000,000,000 increase in the national debt since 1932.

When the indirect costs of drinking alcohol are figured, John Q. Public's schnapps have just about equalled the national debt. All told these costs reached $33,064,509,062 on Jan. 1, 1939.

With all this money paid out it dismayed John Q. to find out there wasn't much consolation on the credit side of the ledger.

Included in the gross costs of bottled spirits and beer from 1933-39 were public revenues totaling $4,408,765,589, less than 18 per cent of the total drink bill. The liquor industry paid John Q. an estimated five billion dollars in wages, $1,700,000,000 for raw materials, and half a billion for transportation costs and miscellaneous, a total return of $12,200,000,000.

In addition to swelling the liquor industry's coffers, John Q. Public when he drinks is contributing heavily to the 15 billion dollar annual crime bill each time he buys a drink.

His contribution to crime cost is based on the estimate that liquor is responsible for 16 per cent of the annual crime bill. To avoid overstatement, this 16 per cent has been charged against liquor only for 1936-38 with an average of less than half that total figure for 1933-35.

Looking at these colossal totals, John Q. has started scratching his head and wondering if maybe he isn't paying too big a price for his liquor in alcohol-bred hospitalization, in broken homes, in disease, in poverty, in highway deaths, in many social evils, lowered efficiency, and in actual cash.

CHINCH BUGS' CHILDREN WILL "INHERIT" FIELDS

Few, in any, Iowa cornfields will suffer more than 10 per cent damage from second generation chinch bugs—the offspring of the bugs against which barriers were built during June and July, according to State Entomologist Carl J Drake.

"Here and there, however, large numbers of bugs will establish themselves in the corn and cause rather serious damage," he said "The infestation will not be uniform and the damage will be spotted

"You may hear a great deal about damage from second generation chinch bugs when the corn crop is harvested this fall." he said.

POULTRYMEN ALSO NEED TO BATTLE THE HEAT

Hot weather is always "tough" on poultry, but a few summer practices will help keep it from seriously cutting egg production or reducing the growth rate of young birds, says W. M. Vernon, Iowa State College extension poultryman.

"Chickens don't have any sweat glands and can keep cool only by breathing unusually fast," he explains.

"If hens stay out of production for 2 or 3 weeks because of hot weather, they will molt and may not resume production for several months. Young birds may lose from ½ to 1 pound as a result of a prolonged hot summer period."

Watch Water

One of the most important practices is to provide hens and chicks with an abundance of cool, clean drinking water, Vernon said. On a hot day, 100 large hens or springs will drink from 5 to 7 gallons of water or milk The same number of turkeys will require from 10 to 20 gallons of drink.

Other practices that will help keep egg production up and maintain growth of young birds are

1. Open all windows in brooder or laying houses to obtain cross-ventilation.

2. Maintain normal feed consumption by giving chicks and hens a cool wet mash at noon and and again in the evening until cool weather returns

Shade Essential

3. Set nests out from the wall to improve air circulation and keep hens from dying in the nests. If two or three hens try to crowd into each nest, additional nests should be provided.

4. Provide shade for young stock on the range by constructing a sun shelter or allowing them to run into a corn field. A shelter can be made by covering a lightweight frame with burlap, making sure the posts are driven well into the ground. Feeders and waterers can be placed in the shade.

5. Construct temporary roosts in the brooder house or laying house if the birds are crowded at night. Allow 12 inches of roost space for hens and well grown springs, and be sure that there are sufficient perches for all of the birds to roost.

TOMATOES MAY DEVELOP FIRM, BLACK DEAD SPOT

When tomatoes ripening on the vine develop a firm, black dead spot on the bottom, they're suffering from "blossom end rot," a condition which occurs when plants do not receive an adequate or uniform supply of moisture.

W. H. Collins, Iowa State College extension horticulturist, says the problem can be partially solved by watering at regular intervals, if this can be conveniently done, and by allowing late tomatoes to develop normally on the ground instead of on a stake or trellis.

Building up the water-holding capacity of the soil by adding organic matter in the spring, and mulching the plants with a 4-inch layer of straw just when they are starting to branch, will also keep and prevent dry rot losses.

When tomatoes sunscald on top, the only remedy is provide shade, Collins says. By growing corn between tomato rows, some growers completely control this problem.

W. C. T. U. Leaders See Tippling Decrease As State Liquor Regulation Gains Ground

By MILTON FORREST
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

THERE is less tippling in America today than there was a year ago. The pendulum of public opinion is swinging steadily toward temperance.

That is what leaders of the Women's Christian Temperance Union will tell you. While they do not claim that prohibition is just around the corner, they point out that support for regulatory legislation on liquor is continually gaining ground.

The White Ribboners are preparing for the most enthusiastic convention this year since the days of prohibition. Three thousand of them, representing hundreds of thousands more of their fellow workers throughout the United States, will rally for their sixty-sixth annual convention in Chicago, August 9 to 14.

Methods for intensifying the war against alcohol in the coming year will be studied by the delegates.

In a rallying cry to women everywhere, Mrs. Ida B. Wise Smith, national president of the W. C. T. U., declared:

"We again call upon America's women to enroll for true home defense—to roll up their sleeves and scrub the dirty spots out of the nation's social and moral fabric."

Sociologists will tell you that the liquor problem is as old as history itself. In America there always was a strong trend toward strong licensing and regulatory systems. Men who believed prohibition of the traffic to be the best answer sponsored such a movement in the early days. By 1856 there were 13 states with prohibition laws.

The ebb came and by 1874 there was no state prohibition.

The same post-Civil war period saw stirrings of the feminist movement. Women were throwing off their bonds. In 1873 praying bands of women began sporadic efforts to pray saloons out of their towns—and were amazingly successful. In 1874 a number of these women were at Chautauqua for a religious gathering and conceived the idea of a united temperance party for women. In Cleveland in November of that year, the W. C. T. U. was organized.

'Protect the Home.'

Their platform was "protection of the American home." They neglected no phase of that program, advocating a single standard for the sexes both in morals and in law; labor reform, such as the eight-hour day and a living wage; international peace; woman's suffrage; personal abstinence from harmful things. They sought legal prohibition of alcoholic beverages and other narcotics, of white slavery, of gambling, of obscene literature, of war as a means of settling international wrongs the country over.

They believed then, and their successors still believe, that the liquor traffic and liquor itself are the most insidious and powerful enemies of the American home. So, underlying all their social welfare activities was the struggle against liquor.

Frances E. Willard, their founder, and her fellow workers laid down the broad strategies of this still-continuing war in 1874

Their lines of attack then, and now, were education and legislation. Mothers made up the Union and their attitude was motherly: First, try to educate your child away from wrong thoughts and practices; second, if he persists, stop him with a firm "no" with the safeguard of removing the temptation from his reach.

The odds against their success were overwhelming. They won, but it required 46 years.

The years of 1920-1925 marked the zenith of W. C. T. U. aspirations. Every legal goal had been achieved. But it seemed too good to last.

Comes Repeal.

If 1925 was the zenith, then 1933 was the nadir. For that year brought an end to prohibition and most of the enforcement or regulatory laws put on the statute books during 59 years.

Those who were at national W. C. T. U. headquarters in Evanston, Ill., the night of Nov. 7, 1933, when Utah, the thirty-sixth state, ratified the repeal amendment say that quite a few tears were shed. But, the next day they began reforming their lines for a continuing struggle.

Law enforcement had been the prime necessity of prohibition days. Now the W. C. T. U. turned to education. Never sensational in its methods, it had never stressed the emotional side of the alcohol story. Now it stressed scientific research into the effects of alcohol on the human body—and on the social body.

Always adapting its tactics to the use of current modern weapons, the research laboratory and medical science now furnished the ammunition for its educational campaign. It added the weapons of motion pictures, radio, the press, road signs, printed material, and other tools which had served its enemy so well during the repeal fight.

Some Bright Spots.

One of the few bright spots in the 1933 picture was the fact that 47 states still had laws requiring education in temperance to be taught in public schools. Much of its educational program was centered in this field, with such effect that now the liquor trade is pushing campaigns in many states to hamstring these laws or to put administration in the hands of state liquor control boards.

A five-year program was begun in 1934 to strengthen the Union's resources and push its educational work in the effects of alcohol and other narcotics. A sum close to $1,000,000 was raised and today $750,000 has been spent strictly for temperance education. This program culminated in international observance during 1939 of the centenary of Frances E. Willard.

Seemingly routed in 1933, the forces of temperance have made such a comeback, that the Chicago convention in 1940 will be told that:

Dry areas have been created by vote in 29 states since 1933. It is estimated that at least 6,000 such elections have been held in individual communities with the drys winning far more than one-half.

The new dry sections, plus the prohibition areas of Kansas, Mississippi and Oklahoma, represent one-sixth of the nation's population.

That an estimated one-fourth of the 40,000 incorporated U. S. communities have prohibition.

Churches Are Active.

That the strong temperance forces of the Protestant churches and of other dry groups again had become active in the fight.

That in the January, 1940, Gallup poll 34 per cent of the electorate had committed itself as favoring prohibition.

Particularly significant will be the release of membership figures, showing that W. C. T. U. added 32,000 members in 1938 and 36,000 in 1939 enrollment periods. More important perhaps was the addition of 985 new W. C. T. U. units in 1939.

These additions make a total of approximately 500,000 members in more than 10,000 local units.

There are five principal divisions of the organization, that is the city, county, state, national, and world's Unions. Administration is strictly democratic with each group having autonomy within its area. The World's W. C. T. U. is organized in 52 nations but its work has been stopped in some nations by current conditions of world affairs.

The national leaders are women long active in church and social welfare work. The national officers are: Mrs. Ida B. Wise Smith, Des Moines, Iowa, president; Mrs. D. Leigh Colvin, New York city, vice president; Mrs. Anna Marden DeYo, San Francisco, Calif., corresponding secretary; Mrs. Nelle G. Burger, Springfield, Mo., recording secretary; and Mrs. Margaret C. Munns, Seattle, Wash., treasurer. Headquarters are in Evanston, Ill., at the rear of the former home of Miss Willard, now maintained as a shrine.

American Red Cross Answers Pleas From War-Torn Europe

A FILING cabinet in a handsome white office building on Washington's Seventeenth street holds stories of misery and suffering endured by millions of civilians who since September, 1939, have found themselves in the path of mechanized invading armies.

This file, in the American Red Cross national headquarters building, contains eye-witness reports from Red Cross workers in Europe. Although the cries for help from masses of tortured souls are condensed into the terse language of the cable, the chronological file reflects only too accurately the swiftly moving catastrophe of the past year.

Another file tells a more encouraging story. It contains America's answer to the despairing pleas for aid.

Aid for Victims.

Each country which has felt the crushing blows of lightning attacks has been aided by the American Red Cross, beginning immediately with the invasion of Poland. A commission of Red Cross officials was dispatched in October to make a survey of the most urgent wants in every country. Using the reports made by this commission, and its successors, as a basis, national officers of the society kept a steady flow of supplies, valued at millions of dollars, moving from this country first to Poland, then Finland and later Norway, Belgium, Holland, England and France.

Until the "Black Friday" of May 10, when hostilities entered the "total war" phase with the invasion of the Lowland Countries, the American Red Cross expended a total of $1,600,000 in purchasing war-relief requirements. No organized "drive" was staged, but the public voluntarily contributed $800,000. The remaining $800,000 came out of reserve funds of the national Red Cross. This money was sufficient to take care of the most urgent relief requirements of the stricken nations, supplemented by the half million garments and more than 2,000,000 surgical dressings.

Within 10 hours after headlines screamed the news of Germany's entrance into Belgium and Holland, however, the Red Cross launched a public appeal for $20,000,000. "Total War Calls for Total Mercy" became the slogan, and the American people responded with traditional promptness and generosity. As the campaign moved into high gear, contributions poured in from all sections of the country.

Support for Work.

Prominent leaders in every field of American life endorsed the public appeal, including leading churchmen, jurists, journalists, mayors and governors, civic leaders and heads of fraternal organizations.

Even before the dollars of mercy began to roll in the Red Cross speeded up its overseas operations to help take care of the 5,000,000 Belgian, Dutch and French refugees who crowded into the already heavy populated districts of southern France.

Headquarters were hastily set up in Paris in charge of Wayne Chatfield-Taylor, European delegate. A number of trained disaster relief experts flew by clipper plane to complete the staff in Paris and set up sub-headquarters in Bordeaux to receive American relief supplies.

Purchasing began immediately for a million-dollar cargo to be shipped on the S. S. McKeesport, a freighter chartered by the U. S. maritime commission for the job of carrying desperately needed supplies to the helpless sufferers.

Organized Mercy

Because of its long years of experience in relieving distress caused by all manner of catastrophes, the organization of the Red Cross is so flexible that it can change its course overnight.

This was illustrated recently when the capitulation of Paris and its evacuation threw the refugee situation into utter chaos. The Red Cross laid plans to be ready for all kinds of emergencies.

The Washington MERRY-GO-ROUND

DREW PEARSON & ROBERT ALLEN

Washington, D. C.

ROOSEVELT KEPT HIS POKER FACE

CHICAGO.—There was only one other person present when the President heard the first speech at the convention nominating him for a third term.

The visitor was Mrs. Hattie Caraway, Arkansas' witty, motherly U. S. senator, who entered his White House office for a conference just as Mayor Ed Kelly was starting his address of welcome. In this, Kelly declared that he knew Roosevelt did not want to run, but that he should be drafted anyway.

The President was getting the speech from a small portable radio on his desk. As Mrs. Caraway entered he greeted her with a smile, motioned to a chair and toned down the radio.

From then on he listened in grave silence. When Kelly declared that Roosevelt had to be drafted to "save the heart of humanity," the President's face became solemn. Then as Kelly continued, Roosevelt seemed to sink deeper and deeper into himself.

Once or twice he glanced at Mrs. Caraway, but his face was inscrutable. It was impossible to tell what he was thinking.

But as Kelly drew to a close, the President's mood lifted and when the Chicago mayor finished, Roosevelt smiled, threw back his head and said, "Well, the mayor is getting to be quite an orator."

That was all. Mrs. Caraway asked no questions about the convention and the President volunteered nothing.

Note—The day the convention opened, Mrs. Roosevelt told an old friend that she was reconciled to the President running again. "If he has to do it," she said, "then there is nothing else to do. I know he doesn't want to run, but there seems to be no alternative."

WHITE HOUSE PIPE-LINE

From the moment Harry Hopkins landed here last week and that open wire was set up between his suite 308-10 in the Blackstone hotel and the White House, the President has been minutely informed of everything that has happened. From early morning until late at night the wire has buzzed with reports from Washington.

Roosevelt leaders have kept him informed of what was being said and rumored in the hotel lobbies.

And some of the politicos are in for a shock when they learn that certain cracks they thought they were making in private are tucked away in Roosevelt's retentive memory. Whatever else the third-term organization may have lacked, it was good on "intelligence." Every delegation and headquarters was "covered" by a friendly contact who kept Hopkins and his lieutenants advised of inside developments.

STAGNANT CONVENTION

It was a good thing that they were, too. For with time dragging on their hands, delegates seized every rumor and promptly spilled it to the press.

If administration leaders could have had their way, they would have condensed the convention into three days and wound it up by Wednesday They even discussed doing this, but when it got to Jim Farley he promptly put down his foot. Bent on forcing a roll-call in order to have himself placed in nomination, Jim warned that he would fight any attempt to short-circuit the convention.

The administrationites couldn't risk an open row, so they had to absorb the opposition's brickbats and make the best of it But it burned them up, and there are a lot of private scores to be settled later.

Note—One Roosevelt leader, urging Farley to forget his grievances and remain as national chairman, said: "Jim, if you quit, the public will forget all about you in six months."

"That's okay with me," shot back Farley. "When I quit as chairman, I want to be forgotten." In addition to heading the Yankee ball club, Farley also will take an executive position with a nationally known advertising firm.

MERRY GO ROUND

Chinese Ambassador Hu Shih says blitzkrieg methods won't work in China, "because our spaces are broad and our peoples too many."

While Washington warmly debates the question, "Will we or won't we?" the old war-time song, "Mademoiselle From Armentieres," is coming back.

A group of 35 Latin American ladies of the diplomatic circle put on white costumes and gather at the Red Cross building to make bandages.

Beautiful Mrs. Harry Woodring, who has spent all her life in Massachusetts and Washington, is being kidded about going out to live on the prairies of Kansas. But Helen says she loves Kansas, intends to have a swell time and do a lot of painting there.

Washington irony: When the cabinet group met to plan for disposal of surpluses of the Western hemisphere, the plan's author, Dudley Wood, prepared to leave government service because congress failed to appropriate funds to continue Secretary Hopkins' "brain trust."

The Once Over by H. I. Phillips

IMAGINARY INTERVIEWS: UNCLE SAM AND JOHN Q. CITIZEN

John Q.—Sam, you look different all of a sudden.

Uncle Sam—I feel different. In fact, I haven't felt better in years.

John Q.—You mean to say you feel the best in years, with this war crisis and everything!

Uncle Sam—That's just it. I've suddenly shed the hypocrisy, torn off the blinders and gotten rid of the Little Lord Fauntleroy suit. I'm even beginning to look at facts and not wince. It's wonderful!

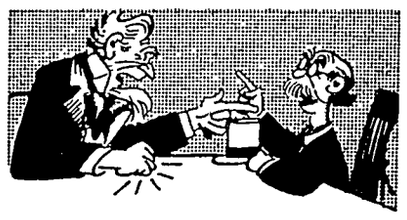
John Q.—But don't you think there are tough days ahead of you?

Uncle Sam—Sure. But I'm never at my best except in tough days. I don't want to seem boastful, but in all these years of coddling, comparative ease and comfort I haven't felt right. There were times when I hated to see myself in a mirror.

John Q.—It's strange, but I feel the same way. I've been squawking and making demands all over the lot; I've been getting sore because I had to keep the old car three seasons; I've been yelling murder because there were worms on the third green at the country club, and I've been working up a terrific peeve because of the lack of free gasoline. And now, suddenly, they all seem unimportant and trivial.

Uncle Sam—It's a swell break for us both.

John Q.—But it means plenty of trouble, I suppose. Do you feel in condition for it?



Uncle Sam—No, darn it! I've grown so soft it's going to be a terrific battle to get into shape.

John Q.—I feel pretty flabby, too. Say, why did you let me get this way?

Uncle Sam (indignantly)—How did I let YOU get this way! What I wanna know is how YOU let ME get this way.

John Q.—You're the boss; I just do as I'm told.

Uncle Sam—That's your story, and we're both stuck with it. You're the real boss.

John Q.—Who? Me?

Uncle Sam.—I only reflect your wishes and opinions. And for years I got the idea all you wanted was plenty of white meat.

John Q.—Don't blame it all on me, Sam. Every time I looked at you you were busy on plans for the more abundant life. Instead of a tough, wiry old guy with his fists clenched and his sleeves rolled up, you were like a fat spendthrift, yelling that life was just a bowl of cherries and asking everybody to step up and help himself.

Uncle Sam—That was your fault. You got so you thought I was a SLOT MACHINE. And you were always looking for the jackpot.

John Q.—Why, listen, when you you should have been down to brass tacks, developing your muscles and hardening yourself for any contingency, you were behaving as if all anybody had to worry about in this world was a bigger recreation program.

Uncle Sam — There you've got yourself mixed up with me again.

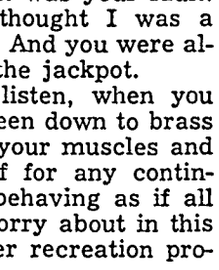
You were the fellow who demanded tile bathrooms, an orchid bed in every back yard, three days a week for auto trips and a guaranty against slippery roads, cold nights and sand in your lettuce.

John Q.—You babied me so much I got to like it, I admit.

Uncle Sam.—All you wanted was the brass ring, caviar with the free lunch, government distribution of strawberries and cream.

John Q.—Why did you cater to me so much?

Uncle Sam—I wish I knew. Every time I thought of letting you shift for yourself you'd start wiring me for aid in every crisis, from falling hair to a leak in the radiator.



John Q.—Well, I guess it's all over now. I guess we've got to cut out the petting party and get on our own.

Uncle Sam.—Waddaya mean you "GUESS"!

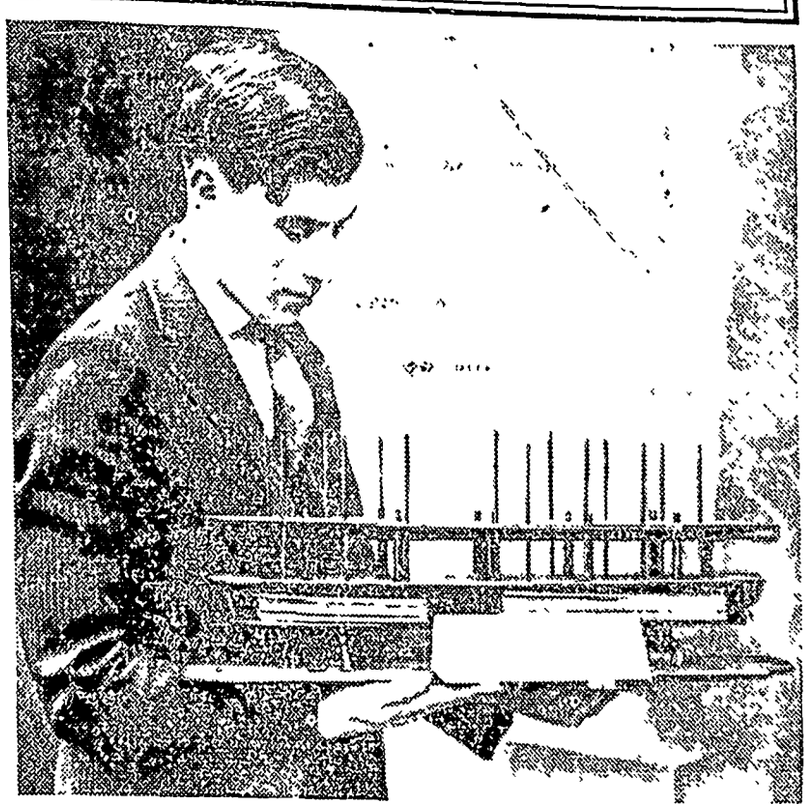
the patent office grew, it me necessary to appoint a intendent to direct its work.



An employee of the Smithsonian institution holds the model of an invention which was an "improvement in the method of lifting vessels over shoals." The patent, issued May 22, 1849, was granted to an inventor from Illinois, named Abraham Lincoln. (Yes, THE Abraham Lincoln.)

J. W. Thornton was the man selected and he was given a salary of $1,400 a year, allowed a clerk at $500 and a messenger at $72 a year. Later Thornton was given the title of commissioner and removed the office to "Croker's 2-story house" on Eighth street. Again in 1810 the patent office was moved, this time to a famous hotel, Blodgett's on E. street, where it shared quarters with the post office department.

Thornton's Great Service.

Thornton deserves to be remembered gratefully by his countrymen for a deed which he performed during the War of 1812. When a British force captured Washington in 1814 and began burning the public buildings, Thornton went to the British major who was in charge of the burning in that section of the city, and pleaded his case so earnestly that the patent office with its records and models were spared. Twenty-two years later a force against which his eloquence would have been unavailing nullified his patriotic effort.

In 1836, during the administration of H. L. Ellsworth, who became commissioner of patents upon Thornton's death in 1828, a fire swept through the patent office and destroyed the accumulation of 7,000 models and all the records excepting one book. Fortunately, a clerk had taken that book home the night before the fire. As the result of this disaster a new patent office building was erected at F and Ninth streets, Northwest, and it served as the home of the patent office until 1932 when all departments of the office were moved to the new Commerce building, erected during the administration of President Hoover, former secretary of commerce.

Incidentally, the patent office is the father of the department of agriculture because in 1839 the commissioner of patents was given the duty of collecting and publishing farm statistics and for many years patent office funds were used to distribute free seeds to the farmers. This arrangement continued until 1862 when the present department of agriculture was founded The patent office, with the Smithsonian institution also served as the official United States weather bureau for a time. Its duties overlapped into the agricultural field again in 1930 when it was authorized to issue patents for new sorts of plants in the "Plant Patent" bill for which Luther Burbank, the "plant wizard" and Thomas A. Edison did some effective lobbying.

In 1877 a second fire took its toll of more than 200,000 models damaged or destroyed and three years later the patent office discontinued its practice of requiring inventors to submit models along with their applications for patents. By this time, even with the destruction wrought by the fire of 1877, there was such a great stock of them on hand that their storage became a problem. In 1925 congress passed an act changing requirements for getting a patent.

Instead of requiring models and keeping them for inspection by prospective inventors, drawings and specifications of all patented inventions are now printed in small pamphlets which may be purchased at a small cost and studied at leisure. However, thousands of scientists, engineers, scholars and others visit the examining room of the patent office in the Commerce building to pore over its records, for here is the largest single source of scientific information in the world.

Roll Call of Fame.

There the visitor may read the contemporary records of inventions which have profoundly affected the course of history, not only in America but in the whole world. There he may be reminded again of the inventors whose fame ranks with our statesmen and military and naval heroes. Beginning with Eli Whitney and his cotton gin, they include such names as McCormick and his reaper, Morse and the telegraph, Bell and the telephone, Fulton and the steamboat, Sholes and the typewriter, Westinghouse and the air brake, Thomas A. Edison and a score of inventions which gave to the world more than $3,000,000,000 of new property; and Orville and Wilbur Wright and the airplane.

Incidentally, away back in 1822 a Philadelphia mathematician named James Bennett presented to congress this statement:

"That your petitioner, having invented a machine by which a man can fly through the air—can soar to any height—steer in any direction—can start from any place and light without risk of injury; and, whereas, a like machine has never been invented in any country or age of the world, so as to be applied to purposes of practical utility, and it is more than probable that artificial flying would not for a hundred years to come, be brought to the same degree of perfection, had not your petitioner, under Providence, accomplished it; and, as it must be evident to all that letters patent would be of little use to the inventor in consequence of various modifications or improvements which might be made, and which never would have been thought of had not the way first been opened by your petitioner. He therefore solicits a special act of the Congress of the United States to secure to him and his heirs for the term of 40 years, or for such other term as in their wisdom may be deemed just, the right of steering flying machines through that portion of the earth's atmosphere which presses on the United States, or so far as their jurisdiction may extend. By granting your petitioner's request, the honor of the invention shall be conferred on the United States.

Bennett's petition was passed back and forth between various committees in congress. Then he was notified that no action would be taken on it because the members "had so much business of a terrestrial character before them that they felt this matter above their reach." Thereby they proved themselves "bum guessers" indeed—much worse than Bennett. He missed it by only 14 years. He had said that "artificial flying" would not be perfected for "a hundred years to come."

The date of the Wrights' first successful flight at Kitty Hawk, N. C., was 1908.

MUST WIN MARKETS

It is all right by Pan-American conferences and unions, to create as much good-will as possible, but let's not kid ourselves into any reliance on them or into heavy commitments on our side.

The plainest lesson of this war is that dependence on any kind of collective security among nations is madness. Each nation will follow the path of its individual interest and its former friends must take care of themselves—regardless of treaties or alliances.

There is nothing new about this. George Washington said it almost a century and a half ago.

It had been proved many times then.

Never has it been so clearly proved as in the past seven years.

The fall of the little central European nations of the cordon sanitaire, which vainly relied on France, as she vainly relied on them, proved it no less clearly than the fall of France and the deadly peril of Britain—among the strongest nations on earth.

* * *

In a military, economic and racial sense, the strength and the ties that bound England, Norway, Denmark, Holland and Belgium were many times greater than any Pan-American union could possibly be.

The recorded stability and responsibility of those nations were far better than those of any Latin-American country. Yet that community of interest proved a rope of sand.

Of course, the principle of our policy is to allay actual jealousy and ill-feeling to the south of us, to procure naval and air bases absolutely necessary to our defense and to make it harder for any sudden Nazi-engineered eruption in a South American country to surprise us with an axis-country in this hemisphere. O. K., but let's not deceive ourselves on its value or give away our body, soul and breeches in the process.

When this war is over, the business of this world has got to proceed. If we are not going back to the Glacial age, international commerce must continue. While England has a sporting chance to defend herself and her empire, there is going to be a new industrial situation in Europe. It may not be the dream of Napoleon (by force) or Briand (by agreement)—a United States of Europe on our model. But it will be a great industrial grouping no longer frozen into a honeycomb of water-tight trade compartments by tariff barriers.

It needs markets and it needs raw materials—especially such foodstuffs as South America and this country produces in vast surplus. Is it our policy to prevent this exchange of merchandise—either by some vast cartel through which we buy the mountainous surplus of South American meat and grain and add to our own unmanageable abundance, or by diplomatic or naval quarantine? Something that points in that direction has been suggested for the Havana conference. We must not rely on any military promises of that conference. We must not there engage to underwrite the exports of this hemisphere.

Our job on the military and naval side is to get too strong for anybody to dare to intimidate us on the economic side. The economic side is not to intimidate or subsidize others. It is to win and hold markets in the only way it can be done permanently and soundly—by producing better goods and services at lower prices.

The outlines of this proposed $2,000,000,000 cartel system are not yet clear but they seem to be a new boondoggling futility so vast as to make all the other magnificent squandering put together look like a poor piker's penny ante.

* * *

TWO-WAY DOCTRINE

An editorial in the Washington Post emphasized that the Monroe Doctrine is a two-way street.

The forgotten part is: "In wars of European powers relating to themselves we have never taken any part nor does it comport with our policy to do so . . . our policy in regard to Europe . . . remains the same, which is not to interfere in the internal concerns of any of its powers; to consider the government de facto as the legitimate government to us."

This is much too often forgotten. The "military expert" Major Eliot has now joined our "military expert" secretary of war in insisting that we make our harbors bases for the British fleet.

Of course, this would be war. To excuse it as "undeclared war" or "undercover war" is to adopt the very poisonous deceit we so lately condemned in Spain and China and other unfortunate lands.

Why should we rush to war with many of the controlling strategic developments still unknown? The tide of battle may turn eastward. Russia may collide with either Japan or Germany. The British navy is still so superior that it doesn't need ours—we have no army or equipment to send

Gay Plaids and Stripes Add Zest to Smart Play Clothes

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

AN outstanding movement developing in the world of fashion during the last several seasons is the increasing attention given to the styling of play clothes. It is indeed something to reckon with, this matter of being correctly outfitted in the field of sports. This new importance attached to play clothes is proving a lively incentive to designers to turn out outfits that shall add to the picture as well as prove practical down to the last detail. There is no more fascinating endeavor that the field of costume design has to offer than this of creating play-clothes for young moderns.

It adds greatly to the pleasurable excitement that materials these days are produced so nearly perfect, not alone from the pictorial standpoint, but that they neither fade nor shrink in the wash, neither do they wrinkle or prove unseemly in the wearing. Playgrounds this season, because of the spectacular garb of fun-loving outdoor enthusiasts, burst forth in a blaze of color that fairly dazzles the eye. And of all the conspirators in the color game we know of none that are so loyally flying cheer-inspiring colorings as are the fashionable-for-play clothes plaids and stripes.

The picture shows how dramatically and picturesquely color-bright stripes and plaids are being fashioned into clothes that go golfing, tennis playing, cruising, dude-ranching and so forth wherever your wanderlust happens to take you this summer.

The very attractive outfit which you see to the right in the illustration makes one parasol-conscious at very first glance. Which is as it should be for one of the very most important events on the fashion program this summer is the come-back of parasols. Designers of beach clothes find big appeal in the parasol idea and whenever and wherever it is consistent to do so they introduce an eye-thrilling parasol. It worked out beautifully for the outfit pictured to add a matching parasol, and here you see it in all its glory flaunting the same gay stripes that give color to the smartly fashioned skirt. The fabric combination for this costume is a very happy one of stripe-printed celanese crepe for the skirt and parasol with sharkskin in monotone for the blouse top.

You can get such easy-to-follow patterns for play clothes nowadays, and modern sewing machines have such a vast equipment of gadgets and attachments that almost perform miracles in stitching, tucking, quilting, shirring, cording, it is a temptation to make one's own outfits. Many smart, fashion-aware women are doing just that, buying up pretty materials and making their own. It is a fact the records show that the home-sewing idea is decidedly on the increase.

Consider, in the light of being your own dressmaker, the charming gaytime sun suit which the girl seated is wearing. Just a few yards of seersucker plaided in vivid colors were required. You can make the whole outfit by spending only a couple of hours at your sewing machine even if you are a beginner at the sewing game. A little gathering attachment in your sewing machine kit will dispose of the yards of gathering at the waistline in just a few moments. You'll love the swirling ballerina skirt and the smartly fitted jacket top that furnish the styling theme for this outfit.

New Handknit

Fashion experts predict an enthusiastic revival of knitted costumes with emphasis on hand-knit sweaters for fall. This pert little bolero sweater is just the thing to slip on with your summer outfits and it will prove a life-saver to bridge over midseason days. It is easily made in simple drop stitch using contrasting pastel yarns. Though the yarn gives the impression of being heavy and substantial it is in reality light as a feather.

Patriotic Jewelry Is Latest Fashion

The latest fashion gesture is to wear a decorative piece of patriotic jewelry. Of course the American flag comes first in clips or brooches. It has jeweled stripes and stars in red white and blue. Glittering American eagle emblems eloquently bespeak patriotism and they are ever so decorative posed on suit lapel or at the neckline of your summer frocks.

Sheer Black Hat Is Smart Fashion

The new hats of sheer black horsehair braid or of thin net or chiffon are registering as one of the season's outstanding successes. The smartest ones have large brims that are styled to wear far back on the head so that they halo hair and face with a mist of wispy black. They give you the dress-up look that is so important for special occasions. You'll love a hat of this type with your black and white prints and with the all-black afternoon sheer costumes that are high fashion this summer.

Berets for Smart Summer Headwear

For chic millinery to wear now and through the fall, the beret, big, black and dramatic carries the honors. The present beret vogue is gaining momentum by leaps and bounds. One way of wearing the new beret is to pose it far back on the head. There are also dramatic profile berets that turn up picturesquely at one side. It is worth while to study up on the beret movement for be assured berets are important millinery news.

Big Revival for Knitted Fashions

Knitwear enthusiasts here's good news for you, in that nearly every fashion report mentions the coming importance of hand-knitted costumes, capes, sweaters and three-quarter cardigans. So "attend to your knitting" so as to be ready and smartly knit clad when fall comes.

A charming novelty is the sweater with a picturesque detachable matching knitted hood.

Collison.

Cletus Pavelka. 14, and Paul Polka, of Belle Plaine, were going fishing on their bicycles when the tackle box the Pavelka boy was carrying caught and locked the handlebars, causing the wheel to run directly into the path of a car. The wheels of the car did not pass over the boy's body, but he suffered a deep cut on the leg and general bruises.

What shall we eat?

6 4 inch rounds left over cake
6 fresh or canned half peaches
½ cup whipping cream
1 tablespoon sugar
¼ teaspoon grated orange rind

Peach Dessert

Toast rounds of cake under the broiler unit of your oven. Place a halved peach on top of each round and top with the cream which has been sweetened with the sugar and mixed with the grated orange rind. An interesting variation to this recipe is to force the whipped cream onto the peaches through a pastry tube. Another suggestion is to toast the cake rounds right at the table in your good-looking electric toaster. Serves six.

When melting chocolate, you can prevent sticking by rubbing the inside of the pan with a little butter before placing the chocolate in it.

Contrary to many recipes, searing a roast doesn't help to hold in the juices. In fact, searing actually drives juices out. To retain all the juice possible, keep your oven at a moderate, even temperature.

NEED TO DIG SOME POTATOES AT ONCE

Summer diggings of early potatoes, with immediate sale or storage, is recommended Iowa growers by C L. Fitch, horticulturist at Iowa State College.

Potatoes dug before the vines are fully dead, or immediately upon maturity, make better seed and are more palatable, are subject to less insect injury and are more satisfactory for storing, Fitch says.

In hot weather, cellars are cooler than potato beds. Care should be taken to store potatoes in good basements or caves, in dark and narrow bins, shallow piles or in crates. Chief danger in sunscald in the field, resulting in rot a few days later. Potatoes should be protected from both light and sun heat, which is most severe at the surface of the ground They should be picked up a few minutes after digging and the containers immediately covered with vines or sacks, placed on empty crates or otherwise away from the ground, and promptly stored

Early morning is a good time for digging; the potatoes also may be dug in the evening, left to cool over night, and picked up early next morning.

Machine Age.

There's a saying about "Time Marching On" but Gifford Tuttle hardware dealer of Chartton is beginning to wonder. Recently a man came into his store and purchased a pair of shafts. Oldsters will recall that shafts are an essential part of a buggy. Shortly afterwards, another customer came in to buy some Tip-Top wagon box sides His very next customer wanted harness hooks. Tuttle wonders how they can call this the "machine age"

It was "Gala Day" at Strawberry Point A tipsy celebrator weaved up to the ferris wheel ticket office with an empty keg and announced that he wanted a ride The girl selling tickets said he couldn't take the keg along without an extra ticket, so the happy one bought two tickets, mounted the wheel with his keg, put it down on the seat beside him and enjoyed the ride. He embraced the keg lovingly as the big wheel made its round.

Remember the wonderful ice cream you used to love, as a child—the kind you had at parties and picnics and Sunday school socials, too? Eleanor Howe has a collection of her favorite ice cream recipes to give you, next week, and recipes for frosty drinks, as well. Let 'Better Baking' Solve Your Baking Problems.

True it is we all have baking problems. Yet, if solved correctly, we save time because fallen cakes don't have to be made over again and we save money too—because the family simply won't eat tough, chewy pastry, heavy, soggy cakes, etc.

In fact, it is to avoid just such baking failures as these (and many more) that I have compiled this cookbook, "Better Baking." "Better Baking" brings to you a whole series of baking hints, as well as a compilation of many of my own favorite baking recipes, including such unusual good-to-eat ones as a frosted nut spice cake, gumdrop cake, chocolate fudge cake, quick apple cake, and even a maraschino cherry cake.

To secure your copy of this book, simply send 10 cents in coin and please address, "Better Baking," care of Eleanor Howe, 919 North Michigan Avenue, Chicago, Illinois.

Star Dust
STAGE SCREEN RADIO

By VIRGINIA VALE
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

EDWARD GRIFFITH, who's producer and director of Paramount's "Virginia," drew a long breath of relief when Madeleine Carroll landed safely in New York. She'd said that she would be back in time to start work promptly, but it seemed unlikely that she would be able to keep her word, especially when nothing was known about her except that she was somewhere in France.

For her the trip was a disappointing one. She couldn't reach either her family or the orphans to whom she had turned over her chateau near Paris. She couldn't see her fiance, although she did succeed in learning that he was in Tunisia. Despite the harrowing experiences that she went through, she looked lovelier than ever when she returned; she spent a few days in New York, and then departed for Charlottesville, Va., and "Virginia."

Remember the girl who won a contest that was conducted over the radio, and got the name of "Alice Eden" and a part in a movie as a result? Her name was Rowena Cook, and she's taken it back again and gone on record as saying that the lot of a contest winner in Hollywood is certainly not an easy one.

She was thrilled over winning the contest and getting a role and a contract. Everybody was swell to her. She'd spent years studying dramatic art, and naturally thought she'd be considered an actress. But she learned that people just thought of her as a contest winner.

Her contract expired, and she was on her own. Instead of giving up hope, she decided that this was really her chance to make good. "I literally buried Alice Eden," she said the other day. "And started out to be just Rowena Cook."

And as Rowena she landed a part in Edward Small's "Kit Carson," and did so well that she's had a lot of other offers.

"Love Thy Neighbor" has been officially set as the title for the comedy in which Jack Benny and Fred Allen will share starring honors. Mary Martin will have the feminine lead, and Rochester, Virginia Dale and Theresa Harris will have supporting roles.

It takes only one good idea to make a successful radio program—Ralph Edwards had one a while ago, and his "Truth or Consequences" resulted. It's so good that on August 17 it will switch to the coast to coast NBC Red network—after starting out with only four stations!

An announcer of many a quiz program, Edwards got the idea that contestants would have more fun—and so would listeners—if they had to do something as well as say something. So he adapted the old parlor game, "Truth or Consequences"; if a contestant fails to answer a question, he must act out some humorous feat. For example, one contestant recently had to don a 10-gallon sombrero and sing "I'm an Old Cowhand," while riding a bucking electric horse and shooting a cap pistol.

The Merry Macs (you used to hear them on Fred Allen's program, and now they're on Al Pearce's,) are a curious combination—the three brothers improvise their own arrangements, can't read a note of music and seldom know what key they're singing in. They hired the fourth member of their group, Helen Carroll, because she'd been elected beauty queen at the University of Indiana—only after she'd begun singing with them did they learn that she's an accomplished musician.

ODDS AND ENDS

It's possible nowadays to make money by listening to "The Court of Missing Heirs"—a reward of fifty dollars is awarded for information leading to the discovery of heirs sought on the program.

Ray Milland has taken out a $2,000 insurance policy on two rubber trees he imported from Java for his garden.

Preston Foster has applied for a button in the swordfish club—after seven years of trying he finally landed a 275 pound fish, which entitles him to the coveted button.

THE WORKS AND THE WORD OF GOD

LESSON TEXT—Psalm 19.
GOLDEN TEXT—Let the words of my mouth, and the meditation of my heart, be acceptable in thy sight, O Lord, my strength and my redeemer —Psalm 19:14.

Consistently beautiful and beautifully consistent is the revelation of God, whether it be in the glory of His works, in the perfection of His Word, or in His gracious dealings with man. The spiritually minded man sees God in all of His works, whereas the blind materialist sees only matter and natural laws which he may use or abuse. He makes of God's creation things for his own comfort or for the destruction of his fellow men, not recognizing "the Creator, who is blessed forever." This is a serious matter, for in so doing the unbeliever has "changed the truth of God into a lie" (read Rom. 1 20-25).

The psalmist here presents God as He is revealed in nature, in His Word, and in the heart of man.

I. God's Glory Revealed in Nature (vv. 1-6).

"The heavens declare the glory of God." The sun in all its glory and power and the starry stillness of the night all "utter forth a glorious voice," as Joseph Addison expresses it:

"Forever singing, as they shine,
'The hand that made us is divine.'"

Nature speaks eloquently of God without saying a single word. The eye, the mind, and the heart of men may see in and know from nature alone the "eternal power and Godhead; so that they are without excuse" (Rom. 1:20). "No man living beneath the copes of heaven dwells beyond the bounds of God's court preachers."

Those who do not hear or heed these voices, whether their ears "are stopped with the clay of earthly tastes and occupations, or stuffed with scientific wadding of the most modern kind" (Maclaren), are described by Paul as having their foolish heart darkened: "Professing themselves to be wise, they became fools" (Rom. 1:21, 22).

Nature gives only a limited revelation of God, showing His existence, power and wisdom; but to really know Him we must see

II. God's Perfection Revealed in His Word (vv. 7-11).

Nowhere in the book of nature is it written that God is a Redeemer, a cleanser from sin, a restorer of the soul. That truth is found only in His Word—the Bible. What folly then for sinful men who need redemption to see God only in nature, but never look into His Word or go to church that they may hear His truth proclaimed. The final and perfect revelation of God is in His Son, Jesus Christ, the Redeemer. The psalmist with the eye of faith saw the perfection of God revealed in His law. We are privileged to know the Son of God who came not "to destroy the law . . . but to fulfill."

Note the beautiful symmetry of verses 7-9:

Law	perfect	restoring (R.V.)
Testimony	sure	making wise
Statutes	right	rejoicing
Commandment	pure	enlightening
Fear	clean	enduring
Judgments	true	altogether righteous

Little wonder that the psalmist says that the words of God are sweeter than honey, more precious than gold, and worthy to be heeded and kept. The great reward of thus knowing God's Word is that we may learn of

III. God's Grace Revealed in the Heart of Man (vv. 12-14).

Man is a sinner; sometimes he sins unwittingly and ignorantly; sometimes deliberately and in presumption; and sometimes both. What shall he do with his sin? The psalmist says to bring it to God in repentance and prayer for cleansing. We may add to his invitation the admonition to come for cleansing in the blood of Christ.

"Come to this fountain, so rich and sweet;
Cast thy poor soul at the Saviour's feet;
Plunge in today, and be made complete,
Glory to His name!"

God's grace not only cleanses—it keeps us. He is able and willing to make not only the words of our mouth, but the very meditation of our hearts acceptable in His sight. That means holy living. There is nothing more needed in our day than a revival of Christian living in the daily responsibilities of life Personal purity of heart and motive, recognition of God's Word in thought and life—these things will make the believer "upright" (v. 13) and reflect honor and glory on the Lord who is our "strength" (R. V. "rock") "and redeemer" (v. 14).

Principle Holds Good

Except a man become like a little child, we are told, he cannot enter into the kingdom of heaven. This principle holds good in other kingdoms as well. Unless we become as humble as a child and are willing to be taught we cannot enter into the kingdom of music, or art, or knowledge, or scientific agriculture.

MAKE it in a few hours, and wear it day after day after day! You can see, from the small diagram sketch, how easy this dress is to put together—merely five pieces, including the sleeves, and the only detailing consists of a few simple darts at the waistline. But you can't really tell until you get it on, how easy it is to wear and work in, how unhampering and becoming. The waistline looks slim but is completely unrestraining.

The front fastening makes it easy to get into. This is an easily tubbable dress, too. Make up design No. 1966-B in seersucker, linen, percale or gingham.

Benefits to Our Readers

THE PUBLIC nature of advertising benefits everyone it touches. It benefits the public by describing exactly the products that are offered. It benefits employees, because the advertiser must be more fair and just than the employer who has no obligation to the public. These benefits of advertising are quite apart from the obvious benefits which advertising confers—the lower prices, the higher quality, the better service that go with advertised goods and firms.

Geyser.

K. B. Clark, farmer living near Ames, was having a new well drilled when, at a depth of 118 feet water gushed up like a geyser, 80 feet into the air. This lasted for 45 minutes and then subsided into regular 5-minute periods throughout the afternoon. By nightfall the water quit spouting and the diggers found it had all run out. They went on down to 150 feet but found no more water. Gas pockets supposedly formed by decaying peat were responsible for the geyser.

Hay windrowed when one-fourth cured keeps its color and its leaves better than that cured any other way.

MOVING MACHINES SOURCE OF DANGER

Attempting to lubricate, clean or adjust machines while the motor is running is the "most important single cause of farm accidents" despite precautions which manufacturers have taken to discourage it.

This warning was voiced recently by the Iowa State Medical Society through its farm accident speaker, Dr. Leo C. Nelson of Jefferson.

Too often, he says. physicians hear the old explanation, "Doctor, I've done it a thousand times, but this time it caught me." And each year the profession is called upon to amputate, or to repair mutilated bodies which had been caught in corn pickers, hammer-mills and buzz saws.

Stop The Machine

Time and again accidents take place with full knowledge of the dangers involved, such as reaching through a moving belt to oil a machine, or brushing a piece of wood from the carriage of a spinning saw.

The only safe thing to do when lubricating or adjusting machinery is to bring it to a full stop. Dr. Nelson warned.

"Another cause of farm accidents is long hours," the physician says. "In former days a man could stand practically as long hours in the field as his horses could. The horses became tired along with the man and were not nearly so likely to cause an accident as fresh horses.

Tractors Too Tough

"But today, tractors are so well constructed that they wear out the farmer. The constant vibration and noise, hour after hour, fatigue the nervous system, slow down the reactions and make one less conscious of the element of danger. In one year 145 farmers in Nebraska and Kansas were killed by tractors, he said.

One man should not spend long hours day after day on the tractor. If the work is urgent, extra help should be hired so that each man may take his turn.

Watch For Infection

So-called minor accidents are soon forgotten. but even the smallest wound carries the possibility of infection and sometimes serious complications, Nelson says. Infected hands are common as a result of blisters incurred while working.

"A serious injury is a major financial catastrophe to many farmers, Nelson warns. Months and even years sometimes are required for the complete discharge of debts incurred. A very small percentage of farmers, probably less than 10 per cent, carry accident insurance or any other type of protection.

"WHO'S WHO" WORK GETS UNDERWAY IN COUNTY

Iowa Press Association Representative Begins Work in Hancock

Rex Shaner representing the Iowa Press Association arrived in town to gather data on the forthcoming publication of "Who's Who in Iowa."

This compilation will contain the biographies of the leading citizens in each county including farmers, business and professional men and also the outstanding women in the various counties who have achieved a certain amount of success in their respective fields or by virtue of some outstanding deed they contributed to the welfare of the respective community.

A short histoy of each county will precede the biographies of the county and will contain the important features in each county since its organization.

The representative men and women who have been selected to appear in this compilation are urged to give their cooperation in order to make this part of Hancock county stand out and deserve its place in the county.

Don Reid, field secretary of the Iowa Press Association, reports that each county is giving this enterprise their fullest cooperation and in many instances, some very interesting stories are being unearthed on early Iowa history. In the event there is any subscriber who has any important information on the early history of this county, we urge that they give this to Mr. Shaner or bring same into our office.

This compilation will contain no advertising matter of any kind. and when completed it is the concensus of the Press association that it will be the most complete and up to the minute biographies and history that the people of Iowa will have had the pleasure to receive.

KLEMME SCHOOLS SCHEDULED TO OPEN ON MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 2nd.

Two New Teachers On Faculty For The Coming School Year

Supt. W. Henry Galbreth has announced that the Klemme school year will begin on Monday, September 2nd in both the grade and high school departments.

Two new teachers are on the staff for the coming school year. Bernard Onerheim, who has been directing the Klemme Band this summer, will be in charge of the music department and also instructs in the high school. He takes the place of Marvin Batchelder. who resigned to take another position. Miss Margaret Ott is the other new teacher who will instruct in the high school and domestic science department. She fills the vacancy caused by the resignation of Miss Greiner, who has accepted a position as home demonstrator in Farm Bureau work.

Members of the faculty for the high school include Supt. W. Henry Galbreth; Principal A. L. Kingery; G. R. Bowles, athletic director; Bernard Onerheim, music director; Margaret Ott, domestic science.

Grade teachers include Irma Merritt, Marion Irvine, Claudia Michalek and Ruth Potter.

Music has come to the front in Klemme and a great deal of interest is being taken in band work. The school band has provided concerts during the summer on Wednesday nights in Klemme. Orchestra, Glee Club and small musical groups have also attracted a lot of attention the past year. Dramatics are playing an important part in school work here, and several plays were given the past year.

High school athletics continue to hold the spot light here, with interest centered mainly around basket ball. Coach Bowles completed a very successful season last year when he upset the dope bucket by coaching a green team through the season to win a sectional tournament against stiff competition. Only one regular was lost through graduation, so prospects look very bright for another good season in basket ball.

Rural students coming to Klemme have taken a large part in all of the extra curricular work and they have found prominent places in basket ball, baso ball, dramatics and music.

KLEMME COUPLE WILL SPEND TWO MONTHS ON NORTH SHORE OF SUPERIOR

Mr. and Mrs. Conrad Quandt left Monday morning for the north country, to spend two months at their cottage on the north shore of Lake Superior at Two Harbors, Minnesota.

Mr. and Mrs. Quandt planned to drive through the state of Wisconsin and will take in the scenic spots of that state before going to their cottage.

Mr. Quandt is a hay fever victim, but found complete relief last year when they spent a couple of months in the north. This year they plan to do a lot of driving to visit the many scenic spots in the north country.

Subterranean Wonders Hidden for Ages Discovered by Guides at Mammoth Cave

By JOHN MAC DONALD
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

THE eyes of scientists and sightseers the nation over have been turned toward Mammoth Cave, Kentucky. For there the National Park service has just announced the discovery of a far-flung network of galleries, avenues, streams, subterranean gardens and geological formations that for countless centuries have lain hidden from the eyes of man.

The new discovery is said by park authorities to be the greatest find since Mammoth Cave itelf was first entered by pioneers in 1799.

News of the first penetration of the hidden labyrinth of limestone caverns has been a closely guarded secret, known only by a few cave guides and officials and park service employees. On October 10, 1938, four excited cave explorers, exhausted and coated with mud, came up out of the depths to report that they had just gone "through Purgatory to Paradise."

The four discoverers were Carl Hanson, his son Pete, Leo Hunt and his cousin, Claude Hunt. Their find developed out of an expedition up the black recesses of Roaring river under Lee Ridge to catch eyeless fish for display.

Years of Search.

For 20 years explorers had sought in vain to get beneath Lee Ridge. Because of its proximity to Mammoth Cave ridge and its similarity in size and topography, they were certain that beneath it lay a network of channels like those of Mammoth cave.

Years of disappointment in this search made the guides cautious about announcing their find. They confided first only in Martin L. Charlet, cave manager, a veteran of nearly 40 years' experience at Mammoth cave.

Their complete story, revealed for the first time, is an amazing account of hardship, of underground rivers which threatened to trap them hundreds of feet underground, of tortuous crawling, stooping and twisting through narrow crevices, past gaping pits, into towering domes and finally of stumbling into a yawning cavern which stretches for miles into a new world never before trod by the footsteps of man.

Since then park and cave officials and engineers have followed the twisting trail of the four explorers. For months every main avenue in the new discovery has been explored, surveyed and checked by these men, who today verify it as the greatest find at Mammoth cave in 140 years.

Above, a view of one of the passageways in the vast, newly-discovered network of caverns, domes, avenues and pits found by guides at Mammoth Cave, Ky. Said to be the greatest find since the discovery of the cave itself in 1799, this subterranean wonderland has lain for ages unseen by man. Below, across a crystal and sand "carpet" hitherto untrodden by man, the explorer plods his way, figuratively leaving his footsteps on the "Sands of Time."

While public showing of the new treasures unearthed by the discovery will be a comparatively simple matter, it has been determined to "make haste slowly" in preparing the new scenic wonderland for sightseers' eyes, according to R. Taylor Hoskins, acting superintendent of Mammoth Cave National park

It will probably be about two years before the work is completed. This, he says, is because of the intricate engineering problems and development of protective devices. Before a single shot of dynamite was fired at the site of the proposed work entrance, observations were made above and below the surface to detect any possibility of disturbance to any of the delicate formations from concussion. The construction of trails, entrances, exits, placement of lights, and scores of other matters that contribute to the safety and comfort of visitors must require care and patience, Mr. Hoskins says.

Gypsum Paradise.

The guides who made the discovery consider its outstanding spectacle to be the great profusion of gypsum found in one section which they have called Paradise, and another which they identify as Little Paradise. Here for hundreds of feet one may walk through a garden of gypsum flowers that decorate walls, ceiling and floor. Great bursts of gypsum simulating every floral pattern found in nature hang in clusters of buds and rosettes, some with petals 18 inches long.

Mineral deposits on some of the crystalline gypsum blend into a variety of pastel colors to create the effect of a fairy castle built of candy. One grotto covered with formations like rock candy, pink honeycomb, peppermint stick and taffy, particularly appealed to the discoverers who call it the Candy Kitchen.

Snowball Formation.

In one section of the cave white ovals of gypsum cling to the walls like hundreds of snowballs, while others, forced off by the thrust of new crystals forming underneath, clutter the cave floor.

Flaked gypsum covers part of the cave like a white sheet. Here and there it has peeled back into folds and curves, creating patterns of every description Thin banded lines in a variety of colors are etched into the white background.

Crystal gypsum on the floor of the cave, mixed with red sand, makes the walk-way sparkle like a jeweled carpet. Sand banks for hundreds of feet are covered with crusted gypsum like a snow drift caked by a hard wind. Below this crust is the pepper-red sand.

Three Main Avenues.

Three main avenues constitute the major part of the newly found cave network, though dozens of smaller channels spread fan-wise in every direction.

Largest of the three, which the guides call simply Big avenue, extends fully 7,000 feet. It is unequaled by anything previously known, being comparable only to the great Broadway avenue of Mammoth cave, except that it is more evenly cut, in straighter lines, and holds to its vast dimensions more consistently. Throughout its length it maintains an average width of 50 feet and a height of 30 to 35 feet.

Walls and ceiling for hundreds of feet in Big avenue are glistening white with flaked gypsum or studded with gypsum crystals. Frequently the ceiling has been watercut in the shape of great capitol domes, rotundas or cones; the creamy-white limestone fringed with a web-like tracery in red, rust, black or brown.

Fossil avenue, so called by guides because masses of crustaceans are imbedded in its walls, is distinctive for the uniformity of its carving and coloring. It runs for nearly a mile at right angles to Big avenue. A thin layer of sparkling gypsum gives this limestone channel the appearance of a white-washed tunnel.

Another link in the network is tentatively called "Onyx" avenue because of its stalactite and stalagmite formations. Although only about 1,200 feet long, 12 feet high, and 15 feet long, it is in many respects the most beautiful cave in the new discovery.

Here at one time swirling currents of water etched out intricate patterns in the chalk-white limestone to leave an endless array of grotesque contorted shapes. The bed of a pond here is encrusted with simulated cave pearls.

Of the travertine formations, the most unusual is a solid rimstone wall, 42 feet long and 4 feet high. It forms a natural dam across one large avenue where for centuries it had held back an underground lake.

The former water bed rises up in a series of crystallized terraces to another strange formation called the Mushroom, though it looks more like an inverted cocktail glass of gigantic proportions. A five-foot red stalagtite stem hangs 15 feet from a dome Near the floor the stem is attached to a bowl-like stalagmite, 40 feet in circumference—one of the largest of its kind anywhere.

The area below the bowl was once filled with water, and now the entire stone mass seems suspended from the ceiling.

Single Factor Seldom Causes Auto Accident, Expert Reveals

By EDWARD DUNCAN

BRAKES shrieked. The car skidded dizzily, then left the pavement to hurtle against a tree: Not long before, its driver had taken a few drinks and stepped out into the rain to race for home. He was driving all right until he failed to make that curve.

Newspaper stories of the accident would probably attribute the driver's death to "driving while drunk." But enforcement officials and highway engineers who must work to prevent such accidents regret that the explanation isn't as simple as that.

"An automobile accident is a lot like a winning poker hand—or a losing one," according to J. Stannard Baker, traffic safety consultant with the National Safety council.

"Suppose you're sitting in a game and draw a straight flush. You win the pot. Did any one card contribute more to the winning hand than the rest? Of course not. It took all five cards to complete the flush.

"The same test should be applied to a traffic accident," Baker explained. "Darkness, rain, intoxication, a curve—if any one of these circumstances had not been present, the accident probably would not have happened."

This fundamental analysis will be one of those presented by Baker in the course he is teaching at the National Institute for Traffic Safety Training at the University of Tennessee in Knoxville from August 12 to 24. The course will be one of nine to be taught at the institute by the nation's outstanding traffic authorities.

"Now let's look at our sample accident again," said Mr. Baker. "The circumstances—darkness, rain, intoxication and a curve—are familiar. It is possible, even probable, that the darkness, rain, the curve or the car's speed had as much to do with the accident as the driver's degree of intoxication.

"If we keep statistics on that same curve for a year, we may find that 20 drivers missed it and piled up in accidents, and that of the 20, only 4 had been drinking.

"So we put a safety engineer to work on the curve. He studies all the statistics on the accidents that have occurred.

"Perhaps the curve will be straightened out a little, or obstructions to the view may be removed. Possibly the engineer finds that the crown in the surface around the curve gives a reverse bank which throws into a ditch any car taking the curve at more than 45 miles per hour on the right half of the road. This is changed.

"The following year we find that only five drivers missed the curve, and that four of these had been drinking. The number of drivers who can't negotiate it safely has been reduced to a minimum—to those who are grossly careless or quite drunk."

"It is true," said Mr. Baker, "that one factor alone seldom causes an accident. But it is equally true that if any single factor which contributes to motor vehicle accidents can be called a joker or wild card in our poker game analogy, it is intoxication.

"The car and the highway can be improved for the safety of sober drivers, but when a joker or wild card is introduced in the form of a drinking driver, things can go wrong anywhere any time."

The Washington MERRY-GO-ROUND

By DREW PEARSON & ROBERT ALLEN

Washington, D. C.

STIMSON GIVEN FULL AUTHORITY

Henry L. Stimson, Republican secretary of war, and the only man in the United States who has served in three cabinets (Taft's, Hoover's and Roosevelt's) is proceeding cautiously. But he has been given complete authority by Roosevelt to reorganize the entire war department, even including the ousting of Democratic appointees.

The inside story of Stimson's appointment can now be told.

It so happened that he had just delivered a strong pro-allied address at the Yale university commencement exercises, when he got home and received the long distance call from Roosevelt inviting him to become secretary of war.

Henry L. Stimson

"Mr. President," replied Stimson, "I have just delivered an address which no man in high official position should make."

"I know all about your speech," Roosevelt replied in effect, "and I still want you to be secretary of war."

Stimson then replied that the decision was so momentous that he wanted two or three hours to talk it over with his wife and close friends.

"Take all the time you want, Henry," said the President.

Note—To get the full significance of this exchange, it is necessary to remember that Stimson and Roosevelt had fought each other in New York state politics ever since 1910, when Stimson ran for governor and Roosevelt, just out of Harvard, ran for the state senate.

After two or three hours Stimson telephoned the President and accepted the appointment. However, he added one condition.

"I'm not as young as I used to be," he said, "and I can't work 18 and 20 hours a day any more. Therefore I've got to have men around me whom I know intimately and can absolutely trust. A tremendous responsibility will be on my shoulders," Stimson added, "and I cannot afford to fail."

To this Roosevelt replied in bantering tone: "Appoint anyone you want, Henry. The only thing I ask is not to appoint too many Republicans at the very first."

Stimson apparently did not catch the joking note in the President's voice, for he replied: "You can rest assured, Mr. President, that whether Democrats or Republicans, they will be good men."

The first man Stimson asked to help him in Washington was a Democrat, Benedict Crowell, now president of the Central National bank of Cleveland and formerly assistant secretary of war under Woodrow Wilson. He is also a close friend of Roosevelt's, who was then assistant secretary of the navy. Crowell got to know Stimson when the war department was under bitter Republican attack in 1920, and Stimson, a Republican and an ex-secretary of war, defended him.

So this time Stimson asked Crowell to help him, by going to Washington and making a quiet survey of the situation inside the war department. Stimson had not yet been confirmed by the senate and could not make the survey himself. But he wanted to know all the facts in advance in order to waste no time once he took the oath of office.

Crowell made the survey and reported that the production of new war weapons and material was progressing most satisfactorily. However, he found the war department rent with feuds and the personnel situation badly in need of reorganization.

NEW NAVAL BOSS

Col. Frank Knox, new Republican secretary of the navy, already has been sized up by the admirals. They describe their new boss this way: "Hard-boiled and seems to know his stuff."

Naval officers frankly admit, however, that they don't like Knox—which is a good omen For the admirals never like a secretary of the navy who really runs the show. And in the navy today they certainly need a two-fisted secretary

Note—It is significant that Knox is clearing all naval changes through Roosevelt. The President still keeps the navy as his governmental pet.

RITA HAYWORTH won a victory when Director Charles Vidor offered her a chance to become Brian Aherne's leading lady in "The Lady in Question." Because the sultry-eyed actress wears clothes so well she's been labelled "the best dressed girl in filmland." And because she's what she is, she found herself in danger of acquiring another label—that of a glamour girl.

But the lovely Rita wants to act. If you've seen her in "Susan and God," with Joan Crawford and Frederic March, you know that she can do it, too.

But in that one she was beautifully dressed. She wanted a role that would give her a chance to show what she could do in spite of being dowdily dressed. Vidor certainly gave it to her in "The Lady in Question."

Her entire wardrobe for this one cost less than $45. A drab suit, shoes with run-over heels, and a very simple afternoon frock—that's what this "best dressed" young woman was given to wear. She was delighted. But she couldn't go dowdy all the way—she had to wear silk stockings.

Remember Marie Wilson, the cunning blonde who was clever enough to put herself across in Hollywood by playing dumb? Her most recent picture was "Boy Meets Girl," which isn't exactly recent, after all.

She has just concluded a 20 weeks' personal appearance tour, and now she's back in pictures; you'll see Grim fate pursues Bette Davis on the screen. She's died, gone insane, lost her eyesight, faced certain death on a plague-ridden island, been murdered, and caused a scandal that rocked the world. In her new picture, "The Letter," she starts right out by killing a man. However, her roles haven't affected her private life—she's taking rhumba lessons in her free moments.

Speaking of free time—Raymond Gram Swing (whom Radio Guide recently named "the wisest and most scholarly of the war commentators") has had but two free weeks for vacation in the past four years. And with the European situation what it is there's no telling when he'll ever again have time off.

A honeymoon that was delayed for five years started recently, when Laurette Fillbrandt ("Virginia Richman" of "Girl Alone") and her husband, Russ Young, finally departed for Hollywood and points north. He's a radio announcer, and ever since their marriage, when he wasn't booked to announce she was committed to acting—getting 16 free weeks together was something of a triumph.

Are you one of these movie fans who implore the stars to do something on the screen that will really be a message to you? If you are, you annoy your favorite star no end.

George Brent has one of those fans, a girl who wants him to tap his cigarette three times on an ash tray at least once in each picture, just to let her know that he was thinking of her. He did it as a gag in one picture, and regrets it—says since then she's been so insistent that he'd be muscle-bound if he acceded to her demands.

Pretty Brenda Marshall (now working in "East of the River") gets regular letters from a youth who wants her to mention his name just once during the picture. And Jane Wyman receives roses to wear.

When the roses arrived when she started work in "Tugboat Annie Sails Again" Jane took steps. She wrote him that she couldn't do it if she wanted to, because she has to do what the script tells her to, that she has rose fever and can't stand the flowers—and besides, that she's married.

But because Mrs. Pierce was a shy woman who hated public life, Pierce resigned from the senate and went back to his law practice in Concord. At the outbreak of the War with Mexico he entered the service, came out as a brigadier-general and announced that he was through with public life forever.

But the political situation during the next five years changed all that. When the Democratic convention opened in Baltimore on June 1, 1852, the leading candidates were Lewis Cass of Michigan, James Buchanan of Pennsylvania and Stephen A. Douglas of Illinois. For 28 ballots none of these men was able to secure the necessary two-thirds majority. Then the convention decided it had better turn to a new candidate who had taken no part in the slavery dispute and had therefore incurred no bitter enmities, in other words, a "nobody."

Some of the Maine delegates suggested the ex-senator from their neighboring state. So Franklin Pierce was trotted out as a "dark horse," received 15 votes on the 29th ballot and gained steadily until the 48th, when he received 55. By that time it was apparent that the band wagon was on its way and the delegates hastily climbed on. On the 49th ballot Pierce received 282 of the 288 votes.

The Whigs nominated Gen. Winfield Scott, hoping that "Old Fuss and Feathers" could repeat the victory of that other hero of the Mexican war, "Old Rough and Ready" Taylor. But the Democrats' young Mexican war general swept the election field with 254 electoral votes to Scott's 42.

Pierce tried for renomination in 1856 but was defeated and vanished from the political scene.

First Republican 'Dark Horse.'

Thus far the Democratic party had been the one which supplied "dark horse" candidates. But beginning in 1876 the Republicans took their turn. In that year James G Blaine was their logical candidate and in the early balloting at the convention in Cincinnati he was within 30 votes of victory. However, the "Man From Maine" had his enemies who were determined to block his nomination.

Among the "favorite sons" who were trailing along on complimentary votes was Rutherford B. Hayes of Ohio, a lawyer who became a major-general in the Union army, then returned home to serve two terms in congress and three terms as governor of his native state. He was scarcely known outside the borders of Ohio and during the spirited contest between Blaine's partisans and his enemies no one paid much attention to Hayes' 61 votes.

Roscoe Conkling of New York had the support of the New York and Pennsylvania delegates but when it became apparent that Conkling had no chance to beat Blaine the Pennsylvanians began to throw their support to Ohio's favorite son. This started a swing which carried the Buckeye "dark horse" to victory by 384 votes to Blaine's 351.

The Democrats nominated Samuel J. Tilden of New York and in the election it seemed that Tilden had won. Then occurred the famous incident of the contested electoral votes of Florida, Louisiana and South Carolina, the appointment by congress of an electoral commission and its 8 to 7 vote in favor of Hayes. So another "dark horse" went to the White House but there are those who still believe that he had lost the election before the electoral commission's vote sent him there.

Although Hayes was not a great President, he was probably the best of any of the "dark horses." Declaring that "he serves his party best who serves his country best," Hayes gave the country an administration which set a high mark for future "dark horse" Presidents to try to equal.

The first of these was another Buckeye, James A. Garfield. Securing an education by his own efforts, he became a teacher and was elected to the Ohio senate which he left in 1861 to become the youngest brigadier-general in the Union army. He came out of the war a major-general and was sent to congress where his principal distinction was his loyalty to Blaine.

Grant Tries for a Third Term.

The 1880 Republican convention was again a battle between Conkling and Blaine but this time the New York leader was trying to secure a third term for Ulysses S. Grant Although Grant led Blaine in the voting from the first ballot, Conkling could not muster up quite enough votes to secure the nomination for the ex-President.

Garfield was present at the convention as the leader of the Ohio delegation pledged to John Sherman. He made the speech placing Sherman's name in nomination and, as it turned out, succeeded in nominating himself by doing it. For when it became apparent that neither Grant nor Blaine could win, the convention turned to a compromise candidate.

On the 34th ballot Garfield received 17 votes. He immediately protested that he was there in the interests of Sherman but the chairman ruled him out of order and the balloting proceeded. On the 36th ballot the break came. The Blaine and Sherman forces swung behind Garfield and he was nominated with 399 votes to Grant's 306. Garfield easily defeated the Democratic nominee, Gen. Winfield Scott Hancock but his career as President was cut short by the bullet of a disappointed office-seeker, Charles J. Guiteau, September 19, 1881, a little more than six months after he had entered the White House.

WARREN G. HARDING

The story of the fifth "dark horse" President is so recent and so familiar to most Americans as to need only brief mention here. The 1920 Republican convention was in Chicago a fight between Gen. Leonard Wood and Gov. Frank O. Lowden of Illinois for the nomination. It soon became apparent that a hopeless deadlock would prevent the nomination of either candidate.

Then followed the now-famous night conference in a "smoke-filled hotel room" and the next day Senator Warren G. Harding, an Ohio "favorite son," was selected as the nominee. Harding defeated his fellow-Buckeye, Gov. James M. Cox, 404 electoral votes to 127 and entered the White House, pledged to bring the country "back to normalcy." His administration, marred by scandals reminiscent of the Grant regime, ended August 2, 1923, when death summoned this ill-fated Ohioan . . . the second "dark horse" President to die "in the harness."

GENERAL HUGH S. JOHNSON Says:

LOANS TO FOREIGN LANDS

WASHINGTON.—Poor Mr. Hoover once set out to help our foreign trade to dispose of our surplus products by loans to "backward and crippled countries." Loans to bankrupts have a way of turning sour. These did, and what a panning Mr. Roosevelt in 1932 gave the Great Engineer for that suggestion.

Mr. Hoover was only proposing a policy of private loans—the money of risk-takers for profit. His project was relatively piker's chickenfeed. Mr. Roosevelt now wants to take $500,000,000 out of the treasury to lend to Latin-American countries to enable their governments to buy up and hold their own surplus of agricultural products. This is a price-pegging plan such as Mr. Wallace has practiced in American farm products. It has never worked in the history of the world although it has frequently been tried—notably in Brazilian coffee, East Indian rubber, Canadian grain and American wheat, corn and cotton.

It doesn't work because it is the presence (rather than the mere ownership) of unmanageable surplus and the certainty of oncoming crops that overhangs the market and depresses price. That was the basic fault with Mr. Wallace's "Joseph" or "ever-normal granary" day dream. Joseph could successfully buy and store the surplus of Egypt for seven fat years and then sell it at hold-up prices during seven lean years until he owned all of Egypt. He could do it because he had a dream-book and a direct wire to the Pearly Gates. Henry apparently has a dream-book but no direct wire, although the President says we are to underwrite the South American surplus only for one year. How does he know?

In the romantic days, when spices were the only practical food preservative and therefore invaluable, the Dutch controlled much of the East Indian trade. They had a rougher remedy for market gluts. If too much anise, cinnamon, pepper, nutmeg, cloves or what-not was congesting on the wharves, they simply sank the surplus in the sea. Mr. Wallace has tried variations of that also. That is why he killed the little pigs and cattle, plowed under the cotton, paid farmers for not producing and recently and more intelligently, through the food-stamp plan, sold farm surplus to the poor at a great discount in price and all the rest of us footed the grocery bill.

O. K. for our own people. This column is for a direct federal subsidy to a "parity price" to our farmers for all their products that can be consumed at home and also for the food-stamp or any similar plan to subsidize consumption of our food products to all low-income groups—not merely to help consume our farm surplus but to relieve us of the insufferable charge of permitting Americans to starve or be undernourished in the midst of rotting overabundance.

But it is absolutely opposed to pouring five hundred or any other number of millions of public money down any Latin-American rat holes to subsidize our own competition and possibly to find their way into Hitler's coffers or certainly, in no small degree, into the pockets of various satellites of the assorted dictatorships of the banana republics.

Sure, we need Pan American solidarity and friendship, but we can't buy it. The only thing that will make it on any worthwhile basis, is cold-blooded community of interest.

If that isn't there, any amount of billions is just money thrown away.

Mr. Roosevelt has neither right nor reason in calling this a "loan," intimating that one year's operation will do the trick, or limiting his request to half a billion.

It is well known in Washington that this first step is part of a two-billion dollar program to make Uncle Sam the international broker for all the products of the Western world.

That, too, is grotesque fantasy.

Its cost would eventually take us out of the multiplication tables and into the field of logarithms.

The essence of all New Deal planning, statesmanship, diplomacy and solution of all public problems can be expressed in a single phrase "give us billions of dollars."

As statesmanship, that is about as realistic as Santa Claus and Aladdin's lamp.

LOUIS JOHNSON

I returned to Washington after the conventions to find a rumor that the new Tory Republican secretary of war had asked his vigorous assistant, Louis Johnson, to get the hell out of there.

Politics marches on—ruthlessly, respecting nothing, sparing nothing

I have not always seen eye to eye with Mr. Johnson. At first I thought he was politicalizing and New Dealizing the army. My criticism was well-informed but it proved premature

That job differs from any other sub-cabinet position It is charged by statute with industrial mobilization of the whole nation in an emergency. My observation was that Mr Johnson did not fully appreciate this vast problem in the beginning He certainly does now His work here is not replicable elsewhere in government

This is an attractive way to serve onions. Peel and slice six large onions crosswise. Separate the rings and use only the larger ones, while saving the rest for other use. Cover the selected rings with milk and soak one hour. Then dredge the onion rings with flour seasoned with salt and pepper and fry in deep fat for two minutes. Drain on soft paper to remove any excess grease.

Put a basin of cold water in the oven if you want to cool it down. It reduces the heat and helps with the cooking.

If you have been painting woodwork, the best way of removing the smell is to leave quarters of a large onion in the room until they have absorbed it. Be careful to throw away the onion immediately it has done its work.

GRASS GIVES TREES NEEDED COMPETITION

Orchards that have been clean cultivated during the summer now need a seeding of oats or rye to "toughen" the trees for winter. says S. W. Edgecombe, Iowa State College extension horticulturist.

"Competition between trees and grass isn't a good thing during the spring and summer when fruit trees need all the soil nutrients and moisture they can get," Edgecombe says. "But at this time of year a little competition will keep the trees from making too much new growth."

Trees which produce a tender, succelent growth in late summer are likely to suffer considerable winter injury. the hortculturist explains.

Clean cultivation of orchards is generally recommended in Iowa, but where ercsion is seriuos it should be used only in conjunction with contour planting, terracing, or other essential soil-protecting practices. Sowing oats and rye will not only "harden" the trees for winter but help control runoff from now until spring.

Why more boys than girls are born during wartime Cautious old Mother Nature compensates for wholesale slaughter by speeding up production of male children during and just after hostilities. Don't miss this popular science article in which Dr. Donald A. Laird explains this odd fact, in The American Weekly, the magazine distributed with next week's Sunday Chicago Herald-American.

Tinting white barn paint with lamp black or raw umber to make gray shades increases the durability of the paint.

TRY THIRTEEN METHODS OF MAKING BEST HAY

Curing One-Fourth In Swath Balance In Windrow, Best Method

The method by which hay is cured makes a difference in the value of the hay in the barn and in the cost of getting it there.

Two agronomists report the results of a long experiment in haymaking in the July issue of Farm Science Reporter, quarterly publication of the Iowa Agricultural Experiment Station and the Extension Service. They are H. D. Hughes, head of farm crops at Iowa State College, and E. R. Henson, former staff member at the Iowa Station.

Entirely in Swath

Quickest, but poorest, of the 13 haymaking methods tried was curing the hay in the swath. Loss of leaves and color was greatest by this method.

Hay which was allowed to wilt in the swath and was then placed in the windrow to cure ranked at the top in color value and at the bottom in leaf-loss.

Best results were obtained when the hay was windrowed while one-fourth to one-half cured. Hay can be considered one-fourth cured when the plants are completely wilted, thoroughly limp or soft. The plants will be in the same condition when one-half cured, but some of the leaves will be dry and hard.

Moisture Test

Hay which cures longer than this in the swath is likely to be poor in color and low in leaf content. Such a combination of defects means low feeding value.

When the hay contains only 30 per cent moisture it is safe to be put in the barn. The method used for years by farmers in determining the right stage of curing is satisfactory. A small handful of representative stems are twisted with the two hands until the stems twist in two If no moisture is brought to the surface the hay is safe to put in the barn.

Turning the windrow was found to be of little value in hastening the curing, except when the hay had been rained on.

"Rained On" Hay

Hay that has been rained on in the windrow can be salvaged if it was windrowed with a side delivery rake, but is pretty much lost if a dump rake was used, believes Dr. C. P Wilsie, Iowa State College agronomist If the side delivery method was used the hay can be turned to facilitate drying

Hay that was rained on before it started to cure can be saved without an excessive loss, Wilsie says, but any hay which has been wet loses color and food value, and also weight.

Hot.

Another hot weather story is told by Mr and Mrs J. V Stilson of Montezuma They claim to have found an egg in their pasture last week which they knew was laid sometime during the day. When the egg was broken it was found to be cooked enough to hold its shape after the shell had been taken away. They have the egg to prove it, too.

One method recommended by Iowa State College specialists to keep egg temperatures down, is cooling eggs on a wire screen or in a wire basket before they are put in the case

Regular watering of tomato plants will prevent the development of "blossom end rot." a condition in which the vegetable develops a firm, black dead spot on the bottom

Fall gardens lighten the task of canning by lengthing the canning season. They also furnish vegetables that, because of late planting date and proper maturity, are best for home storage.

Prospects for rising hog prices this summer depend on future developments in the business situation and whether the expected increases in foreign demand materialize.

Temperature in the freezing room Clarence Dirks accompanied Harold Westphal, creamery employee, into the freezing room. Dirks pulled the inner door shut behind them, locking the men in the room. Dirks was in his shirt sleeves and Westphal had on a light suede jacket. The men were locked in the room for about 15 minutes before manager Hazel Smith heard their cries for help and released them. Manager Smith stated it was possible for the men to unlatch the door from the inside, but Westphal did not now the combination. Co. was 6 degrees below zero when of the Anamosa Farmers Creamery

HEAT HARD ON SWINE REQUIRE WATER, SHADE

Hogs never get tan. But they sunburn easily. And to make things more uncomfortable, they can't sweat.

For this reason they should be provided with ample shade and plenty of drinking water, advises E. L. Quaife, extension animal husbandryman at Iowa State College.

A wallow also will help the pigs stand the heat, but is not as satisfactory as shade. Drinking water help lower the body temperature and reduces the chance of overheating.

If pigs already have become badly sunburned, they should be placed in shade at once and the cracked or peeled spots treated with some kind of grease such as fresh lard.

White-haired hogs are especially subject to sunburn.

The average pound of meat is moved approximately 1,000 miles from the area where it is produced before it reaches the region where it is consumed.

Beyer of Cedar Rapids who had come to watch her son play as a member of the Eddy Paper company team, Franklin's rivals for the evening. Her glasses were broken, her lower eyelid was cut, and what's more, she fainted. The ball game was being resumed, when someone decided, "We can't pass it off this way. That woman should receive some consideration." A hat was passed and $6.20 was raised to buy her a new lens.

LARGE CROP OF APPLES FORECAST THIS SEASON

Prospects for a "bumper" apple crop in Iowa are the best in 5 years according S. W. Edgecombe, Iowa State College extension horticulturist. He estimates that a crop of about 1,800,000 bushels is likely if weather conditions remain favorable.

Recent heavy rains over the state have done much to improve earlier crop prospects, he says.

The quality of the 1940 crop also promises to be exceptionally good. Growers report that apple scab has not caused much trouble this year and spraying programs have kept codling moths under control.

A MILK SUBSTITUTE OFTEN IS NEEDED

Finding a skimmilk substitute for calf feeding on farms where whole milk is being sold and there is not enough separator milk available is a problem to many Iowa farmers, says E. N. Hansen, dairy husbandryman at Iowa State College.

Skimmilk powder can be used as a substitute with satisfactory results, Hansen says. One pound of skimmilk powder should be fed at as close to 100 degrees F. as possible.

Price Limiting Factor

The advisability of using skimmilk powder depends on the price. When it can be bought for less than 5 cents a pound it is considered practical. Offcolor skimmilk powder that isn't wanted for baking or other commercial use can sometimes be obtained at a low price and is as good for feeding as other grades.

If skimmilk powder cannot be obtained in sufficient quantity, the following substitute will give good results. equal parts by weight of finely ground cornmeal, ground oat groats, linseed oil meal and skimmilk powder. The mixture may be fed dry, or as a gruel made by adding 1 pound of the mixture to 7 pounds of warm water.

Need Hay. Grain

Calves should be 6 weeks old before the feeding of gruel is started, whereas they may be fed skimmilk powder from 10 days or 2 weeks of age.

While calves are being fed milk they also should have hay and grain. About 1 pound of milk for 10 pounds of live weight is a good ratio for young calves, and this amount can be increased up to 20 pounds of skimmilk daily for older calves.

It is wise to give the calf skimmilk for 5 or 6 months before weaning. After weaning, a protein supplement such as a ration of 300 pounds ground corn, 300 pounds ground oats and 100 pounds cracked soybeans or linseed oilmeal may be fed. The roughage for a young calf can consist of almost any kind of hay, but after weaning a legume should be fed.

GOD'S CARE OF HIS PEOPLE

LESSON TEXT—Psalm 23.
GOLDEN TEXT—The Lord is my shepherd, I shall not want.—Psalm 23 1.

Confidence, contentment, assurance, safety, security—all words expressing the deep desires of the human heart—fittingly characterize the blessed and beautiful Shepherd Psalm which is our lesson next Sunday.

Here the soul meets God in personal, intimate fellowship—in the promise of provision for every need, deliverance from every danger, the assurance of both present and ultimate blessing. It has become the best known of all psalms and perhaps the favorite scripture of most Christians.

Familiarity may cause us to miss the blessing of such a scripture passage. To help us to make a fresh approach to this Twenty-third Psalm, let us follow the suggestion of Dr. W. E. Barnes and think of it as describing the journey of life. We find that we may go forth

I. In the Care of a Sure Guide (vv. 1, 2).

Nothing is more important in traversing an unfamiliar land than to have a competent guide. The journey of life is a pilgrimage through a land unknown to us, with its many pleasant places, but also its howling wildernesses, its pitfalls and its enemies in ambush.

"The Lord is my shepherd." If I am in His flock He will guide me, care for me and give me the joy of green pastures and still waters.

The expression "maketh me to lie down" (v. 2) is worthy of special comment—that all too often we become too busy or too important to take the rest we should have, and the Good Shepherd has to "bend the knee" of the sheep and make him lie down, sometimes even by the force of sickness, or of trying circumstance. Why do we make it necessary for our Shepherd to thus deal with us?

II. With Every Need Provided (vv. 3-5).

We are a needy people, constantly dependent on the loving provision of our God. Dr. J. H. Jowett says that man has three enemies: (1) The sin of yesterday, from which he cannot get away; (2) the temptation of today, made more powerful by the pressure of the clever and insidious seducer, Satan; and (3) the fear of death which awaits him tomorrow. Good Shepherd, wilt Thou meet these mine enemies for me? "Yes," comes His answer through the psalmist.

For the sin of yesterday there is the restoring of the soul. Everywhere the power of God is evident, restoring that which has been destroyed or broken down, healing the wound; but nowhere is it more evident or blessed than in His restorative ministries to the soul. He cleanses from sin, gives peace through His Word, joy through a hymn or a bit of poetry, comfort in the fellowship of a friend.

For today—"He leadeth me in the paths of righteousness for his name's sake." The world offers many by-paths, and makes them seem to be the right way, but my heavenly Guide will lead me in the way of righteousness. This He does, not because of any merit in me, but for His own dear name's sake—for "the praise of the glory of his grace" (Eph. 1:6). That cares for the need of today.

But tomorrow, or on some tomorrow, I must go the way of all flesh and (unless Jesus comes) I must "walk through the valley of the shadow of death." Even there I need "fear no evil." The Good Shepherd is as much with me in the dark and swelling waters of that valley as He was with me "beside the still waters." Little wonder that this psalm has been the comfort of tens of thousands of believers in Christ as they have passed through that valley. Why will anyone do without this Christ, who is the Good Shepherd (John 10:11)?

Every need finds its full satisfaction: enemies are discomfited, the oil of gladness anoints our heads, and our cups run over as we go on

III. To a Destination Certain and Blessed (v. 6).

Not all who set out upon a journey reach their goal, but the Lord has never lost one of those entrusted to His care (John 17:12). Goodness and mercy through all the days of our lives would lead only to ultimate disappointment if they did not bring us to the Father's house.

In that house there are "many mansions" or abiding places (John 14:2) prepared for us by our Lord. We know we shall come to that blessed journey's end with safety, because He will bring us there, to go in and out no more forever.

To study such a lesson is to create the desire in one's heart that all men should know about this Good Shepherd, to be brought into His flock. Reader, do you know Christ as your Saviour and the Shepherd of your soul? If not, will you not come to Him now by faith?

Strange Facts

Unstable Pound
Odd Chicken Coops
All Sworn In

¶ In some parts of China, weight instead of price of food fluctuates with market conditions. For example, a housewife always pays the same price for rice, but she gets a "big pound" when it is plentiful and "a little pound" when it is scarce.

¶ Such places as old city warehouses, factories, breweries, hotels and churches provide housing for more than 40,000,000 egg-laying chickens in tiers of individual cages equipped with feed, water and egg-transportation troughs. For instance, a $1,000,000 Florida hotel that failed a short time ago is now a "chicken coop" with 60,000 caged hens.

¶ When witnesses are sworn in the law courts of Germany, all other persons in the room, including the judges, likewise rise and raise their right hand.—Collier's.

IT IS A JOLLY WORLD

A Bad Start

"Why isn't Bill Jones at work this morning?" asked the foreman one Monday.

"He met with an accident at his wedding on Saturday," said one of his mates.

"Accident?"

"Yes. As he and his missus left the church, some of the lads made an archway of picks for them to pass under. Somebody blew a whistle, and the whole lot downed tools."

A good joke isn't damaged when it's cracked.

THE WHEREFROM

"What pretty hair you have, Jean. You get it from your mother, don't you?"

"No, I s'pose I get it from daddy. His is all gone."

Why Bother Then?

"Why don't you show your wife who's master in the house?"

"She knows."

Night as Day

"Don't you find that a new baby brightens up a home?"

"I do. We have the lights on all night now."

Just the Reverse

At a reception the woman chatted for some time with the distinguished guest. One of the listeners complimented her.

"Oh, really," she said with a smile, "I've just been concealing my ignorance."

The distinguished guest smiled gallantly.

"Not at all, not at all, my dear lady. Quite the contrary, I assure you."

After Taste?

"Do you think you could learn to love me?"

"Possibly; but wouldn't you hate to think you were an acquired taste?"

Quite the Opposite

"Is that a popular song your daughter is singing?"

"Not in this house."

Whispered Secrets

As everyone is pleased with imagining that he knows something not yet commonly divulged, secret history easily gains credit; but it is for the most part believed only while it circulates in whispers, and when once it is openly told, is openly refuted.—Dr. Johnson.

Republican Candidate for President.

We are here today to a sacred cause—the pres- American democracy. sly, I cannot lead this e. I need the help of ev- ican—Republican, Demo- dependent—Jew, Catholic, ant—people of every color, l race. Party lines are othing could make that an the nomination by the ns of a liberal Democrat ed his party affiliation be- found democracy in the party and not in tne party.

ous applause greeted Will- ment that party lines are en he said the times de- e help of Americans from , the cheers came wave , the vast crowd having t it typified that very Here were a hundred thou- icans from every part of States, representing ev- every station of life, yet ay by a single devotion.

Foreign Policy.

kie compared the peace a with the conditions in urope, and defined his icy by saying:

is so wise as to foresee uture holds or to lay out it. No man can guaran- intain peace. Peace is ning that a nation can itself. It also depends me other country does. practical, nor desirable, foreign program commit- nited States to future ac- unknown circumstances.

"The best that we can do is to decide what principle shall guide us.

"For me, that principle can be simply defined:

"In the foreign policy of the United States, as in its domestic policy, I would do everything to defend American democracy and I would refrain from doing anything that would injure it.

"We must not permit our emotions—our sympathies or hatreds—to move us from that fixed principle."

Again the crowd let out a deafening cheer. It was an exciting moment. A nation was waiting anxiously to hear Mr. Willkie's views on foreign relations. The enthusiastic response of the crowd reflected a nation thrilled.

National Defense.

From foreign policy Willkie turned to national defense of which he said in part:

"We must not shirk the necessity of preparing our sons to take care of themselves in case the defense of America leads to war. I shall not undertake to analyze the legislation on this subject that is now before congress, or to examine the intentions of the administration with regard to it. I concur with many members of my party, that these intentions must be closely watched. Nevertheless, in spite of these considerations, I cannot ask the American people to put their faith in me, without recording my conviction that some form of selective service is the only democratic way in which to secure the trained and competent manpower we need for national defense."

He stated in definite terms his belief in a policy of providing to the opponents of force the material resources of this nation, and our own preparation for meeting any emergency that may arise, but criticized the President in his conduct of foreign affairs at this critical time, saying:

"There have been occasions when many of us have wondered if he is deliberately inciting us to war. I trust that I have made it plain that in the defense of America, and of our liberties, I should not hesitate to stand for war. But like a great many other Americans I saw what war was like at first hand in 1917. I know what war can do to demoralize civil liberties at home. And I believe it to be the first duty of a President to try to maintain peace.

"But Mr. Roosevelt has not done this. He has dabbled in inflammatory statements and manufactured panics. Of course, we in America like to speak our minds freely, but this does not mean that at a critical period in history our President should cause bitterness and confusion for the sake of a little political oratory. The President's attacks on foreign powers have been useless and dangerous. He has courted a war for which the country is hopelessly unprepared—and which it emphatically does not want. He has secretly meddled in the affairs of Europe, and he has even unscrupulously encouraged other countries to hope for more help than we are able to give.

"'Walk softly and carry a big stick' was the motto of Theodore Roosevelt. It is still good American doctrine for 1940. Under the present administration the country has been placed in the false position of shouting insults and not even beginning to prepare to take the consequences."

Cheers Interrupt.

Several times the speaker was compelled to stop as applause and encouraging shouts drowned out his voice. The cheers grew in volume and frequency as Mr. Willkie, citing France as a tragic example, declared in a firm voice that our foreign policy must "begin in the United States" and be dedicated to making us strong "right here in our own land."

Referring to the defeat of France, Mr. Willkie said in part:

"And in this tragedy let us find our lesson. The foreign policy of the United States begins right here in our own land. The first task of our country in its international affairs is to become strong at home. We must regain prosperity, restore the independence of our people, and protect our defensive forces. If that is not done promptly we are in constant danger. If that is done no enemy on earth dare attack us. I propose to do it.

". . . I promise, by returning to those same American principles that overcame German autocracy once before, both in business and in war, to outdistance Hitler in any contest he chooses in 1940 or after. And I promise that when we beat him, we shall beat him on our own terms, in our own American way."

A Doctrine of Growth.

For our home policy Mr. Willkie proposes to follow a doctrine of increased production, of increased growth, instead of the New Deal "doctrine of division," and said:

"We are not asked to make more for ourselves. We are asked to divide among ourselves that which we already have. The New Deal doctrine does not seek risk, it seeks safety. Let us call it the "I pass" doctrine. The New Deal dealt it, and refused to make any more bets on the American future.

"Why, that is exactly the course France followed to her destruction! Like the Blum government in France, so has our government become entangled in unfruitful political adventures. As in France, so here, we have heard talk of class distinctions and of economic groups preying upon other groups.

"As for me, I want to say here and now that there is no hate in my heart, and that there will be none in my campaign. It is my belief that there is no hate in the hearts

Klemme Schools Will Open Sept. 2 With Record Enrollment

AMERICA OUR HOME SWEET HOME

Ta a nation that can point to approximately 40 per cent of its 130,000,000 people who own their own homes, "Home, Sweet Home" is no mere figure of speech. Here, home has a deeper, richer significance than it has in any other land throughout the world.

Since its glorious founding, America has adopted millions of the hunted, the persecuted, and the oppressed. It has taught them the love of tolerance, the love of liberty, and the love of being able to own and fervently say . . . "Our Home, Sweet Home."

To those few who would lend any moral or physical aid to the forces of dehumanization seeking to violate the sanctity of our home-loving people, a united, aroused America thunders "Beware."

America and its home-lovers do not dread the future. Our love of free speech ,free religious worship, free assembly and a free press is today more deeply imbedded in the heart of each American than ever before. We place our unbounded trust in a Providence who has blessed us for over 150 years. We place our destiny and guidance in the souls, hearts and bodies of our people who will fight to the death for the freedom of their hands, the freedom of their intelligence and the freedom of their conscience.

We are proud to be part of the first line of defense of American liberties . . . to always stand militantly at the side of every true American against the inroads of doctrines seeking to destroy America's priceless heritage.

KLEMME SCHOOL EXPECTED TO GO INTO CLASS A RATING

High School Enrollment Will Hit A New High In Number Of Students

Klemme High School may be a Class A school in athletic competition this year if all prospective students decide to come. A freshman class of twenty-eight will bring the high school enrollment to the hundred mark if all upper class students return, and indications are that they will all be back.

The sophomore class will probably continue to hold the record as the largest Klemme class for some time to come. They are expected to be back thirty-six strong when school is resumed a week from Monday morning. The juniors will be the smallest group with sixteen, while the seniors will boast a total of twenty.

In the grades, a starting group of ten kindergarten students is in prospect. In addition to these, there will be fifteen in the first and second grades, fifteen in the third and fourth grades, twenty-six in the fifth and six grades, and eighteen in the seventh and eighth, making a total of eighty-four for the grades.

The school building and playground are much improved over what they were when school ended last last spring. A good stand of grass is growing all around the school, the playground equipment has been moved to the new site, and an outside basketball court has been set up.

Inside the building, the gym floor has had another coat of finish, the other floors have been waxed, and some painting has been done. Some time this week new louvres will arrive from the heating contractors to improve the circulation of air in the building. A. L. Kingery is assisting Clifford Montgomery with the extra work.

Textbooks again will be handled on the rental plan this year. Next week's Klemme Times will give details about the rental prices for the different grades. Other information about the start of school will also appear at that time.

ANYONE HAVE CORN TALLER THAN THIS CORN STALK?

A couple of corn stalks on display at the Northern Lumber Co. is attracting quite a bit of attention. The corn on display is from Glen Lange's field in Libery township and Glen says he has corn that is even taller than that on display.

One of the stalks at the Northern reaches up into the sky 15 feet and 4 inches! The other is slightly shorter, but it takes a tall man on a step ladder to reach the ears!

If anyone has any taller corn . . . bring them in.

Reformed Ladies Aid

The Ladies Aid Society of the Klemme Reformed Church will meet at the church on Wednesday, afternoon, August 28th. The hostesses for this meeting are Mrs. C. J. Wille and Mrs. Naska Bock.

Free Competition in Foreign Trade Ends For U. S. if Britain Falls, Says Lippmann

(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

DECLARING "that a free economy, such as Americans have known, cannot survive in a world that is elsewhere under a regime of military socialism," Walter Lippmann, writing in Life, emphasizes that there are four great industrial concentrations in the world, the American, the European, the Russian and the Japanese; that if Britain is conquered "the European, the Russian and the Asiatic industrial systems will all be operated by military governments as severely regimented collectivist systems. The following is a summary of the ideas presented by Walter Lippmann.

The American manufacturing area —around such centers as Chicago, Detroit, Cleveland, Pittsburgh, Wilmington, New York, Birmingham and so forth—may soon contain the only primary workshops on earth in which private property still persists under constitutional guaranties, in which the managers, the workers, the shareholders are not under the direct command of an all-powerful National Socialist or Communist government. In this American industrial region alone private firms may still be bargaining collectively; workers may still be free to quit their jobs and great industrialists like Henry Ford may still be free to refuse to make the airplane motors that government policy calls for; banks, insurance companies and private capitalists may still be free to invest or not to invest in this or that enterprise.

In the other industrial regions none of these liberties remain, and if the British commonwealth is conquered and subjugated and revolutionized, none of these liberties which are normal in the American way of conducting industry will be re-established.

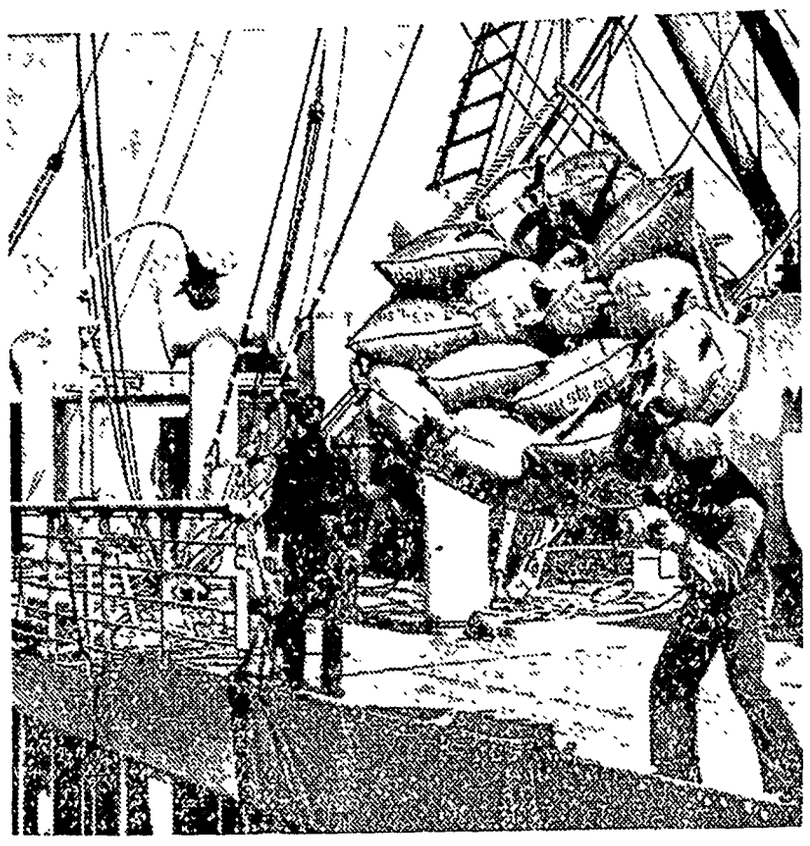
No Private Rights.

Even though nominally and in appearance some of the outward forms of capitalism may still survive, in fact totalitarian industry is regimented and directed by a dictatorial government.

There is property. But it has no rights as against the government.

There are contracts. But there are no contracts, private or public, that the government may not modify or break.

There is no competition among exporters and importers except that which the state cartels and the government which controls foreign exchange will permit. The export prices of goods are controlled by the government.



Loading of ships with American products for sale abroad may become a rarity if the British empire falls before the onslaught of the Axis powers, for the export markets of the world will then be dominated by the totalitarian industrial monopolies and America will face a menacing economical future. This is the belief of Walter Lippmann, noted writer and economist.

Imports are controlled by the government; imports are not bought by business men but by political agents of the government.

The wages of labor, the hours of labor, the movements of labor are set by the decrees of the government. The conquered peoples work as prisoners of war.

Industry as a whole is directed for the purposes of the state—to produce armaments, to obtain supplies abroad, to establish political power abroad.

Trade by Government Monopolies.

If this system established itself finally in Europe and Asia, our own manufacturers, our own farmers and miners and the farmers and miners of South America will no longer be trading and competing with private firms and private producers. They will be competing and trading with these gigantic government monopolies managed by dictators and backed by enormous armed forces. Under these conditions it is absurd to imagine that American manufacturers, farmers, miners, working men and investors can return to normalcy and do business as usual.

If the rest of the world's industry accepts or sinks under totalitarian rule, no doubt we shall have somehow to do some business with the rest of the world. But for any public man to tell the people that they can do normal business by normal methods in such an absolutely abnormal condition of affairs is to mislead the people cruelly, to blind them to the need for the extraordinary measures of protection that they will have to have, to render them defenseless and then to take them down the road to ruin.

The plain fact of the matter is that if Britain falls, then Europe, Asia and Africa will be ruled from Berlin, Moscow and Tokyo. The American manufacturers will then be allowed to supply the totalitarian hemisphere with those products in which the totalitarian empires are temporarily deficient—as a matter of fact, to supply them with those products which will be immediately necessary in order to make totalitarian industry entirely independent of American industry.

American farmers and miners will be allowed to supply the totalitarian empires with the food and raw materials temporarily needed to tide them over until they can make themselves independent of American supplies. And these temporary supplies will be paid for either in goods manufactured by the enslaved labor of Europe or in gold obtained by conquest (gold that we shall then have to bury in Kentucky) or on credit asked of us in the name of humanity and of reconstruction, credit that will never be and can never be repaid.

At the same time the totalitarian industrial monopolies will take possession of the export markets of the world.

Finally, our domestic economy in the U. S. will face unprecedented difficulties. The disposal of the surpluses of agriculture, mining, and industry will have to be done in competition with the products of the enslaved, subjugated or vassal regions of Europe, Asia, Africa and South America.

The important raw materials in which we are deficient will have to be obtained from the totalitarian monopolists. Inevitably we shall have to transform into armament industries many industries that now produce for export. Inevitably we shall have to take hold of our food and raw-material surpluses and use them as instruments of economic warfare.

To do this we shall inevitably have to bring all foreign trade under government control. Inevitably we shall therefore have to bring domestic industry under a control that fixes quotas, allocates raw materials and regulates prices. Inevitably we shall have to reduce the American standard of life.

The Price of Independence.

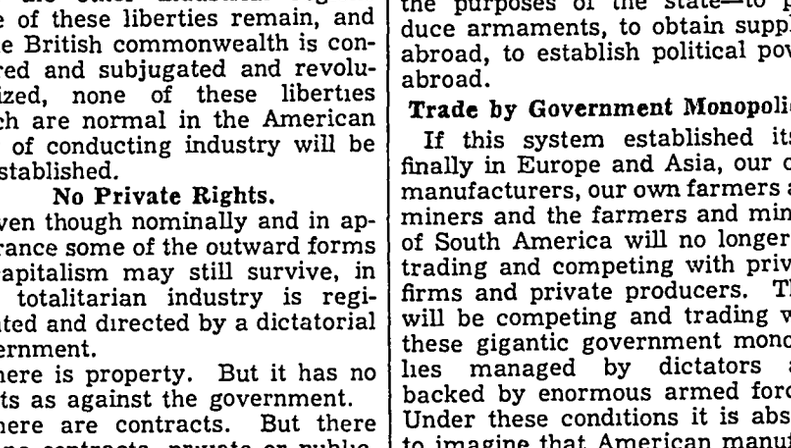
For these measures, which are inexorably necessary if the nation is to maintain its independence, are the indubitable price we shall have to pay for deciding to let ourselves become isolated in a totalitarian world. Americans attempting to do business under a free, competitive, unorganized and unmanaged industrial system would be like naked soldiers trying to stop a charge of tanks.

In this condition of acute economic distress, the country will be invaded by foreign agents seeking to make deals with helpless, frightened, ignorant and shortsighted private interests. These deals will be at the expense of other private interests. They will set one section of the country against another, one industry against other industries.

Private industries that do manage to sell to the totalitarian agents can be paid only by imports, produced by enslaved labor, which will compete ruinously in the domestic market for other American industries. Or these private interests will be paid in stolen gold that cannot be spent and will have to be buried. And if the oppressed industries that are threatened by this competition object, then the few interests that might have done business with the totalitarian agents will clamor and complain.

Preparedness Sets Business Pace

LaSalle Map of Business Conditions



The above map accompanying the August bulletin of U. S. business conditions issued by LaSalle Extension university, illustrates the current trade picture in various sections of the country. Business activity continues to expand; new orders in several industries are greater than output; volume of trade is 7 per cent above 1939.

By L. G. ELLIOTT

President, LaSalle Extension University

CHICAGO.—The expansion of business which began in the latter part of April continues to gain momentum. The rate of production is now close to the highest point of the year, and in some lines it is not far from the peak that was reached last December.

The steel industry has been the leader in the improvement which has already taken place. Operations have increased from 60 per cent of capacity in the early part of April, to 88 per cent. Domestic buying is active, and foreign orders have been received in large volume. These are expected to push the rate several per cent higher during the coming weeks.

Even if foreign orders should decline, the reduction will be more than counterbalanced by added preparedness expenditures. When the defense program gets under way the increase in government spending will provide as large market for industry as has the export trade during the first part of this year.

The building industry has also been moving ahead steadily. The greatest gains have been made in engineering construction. Recently contracts awarded for this type of construction have reached the highest level in history. This program includes projects in nearly all parts of the United States, and will stimulate activity in many lines.

In the textile industry activity has been considerably increased at the woolen mills, and the output of the cotton mills has been maintained at a higher rate than usual. Production of rayon continues to be large.

Prices of commodities have remained relatively stable with only small declines in the general average since the sharp upward spurt at the outbreak of war last September. Farm prices have held firm and total farm income for the first five months of the year was 10 per cent higher than during the corresponding period last year. Crop prospects are promising, and the estimates are that total output this year will be above the 10-year average The vigor with which industry has progressed indicates the basic strength of our economic system.

COSTLY BRIDGE

The war department says Boston must continue to furnish drawbridge service at night on three bridges over Fort Point channel, although it costs the city $2,200 per boat. During the first eight months of 1939 only five vessels passed the bridges during those hours with payroll expenses totaling $11,368 The war department denied the city's petition for closing drawbridges from 10 p m. to 6 a. m.

CONGRESS UNDER GUARD

WASHINGTON.—It has been done so quietly that only a few officials know it but congress now is being guarded by the most elaborate police system since World war days. The legislators are protected almost as carefully as the President.

The first step was taken last fall when a detail of G-men and detectives was assigned to reinforce the Capitol's regular police force, which is made up chiefly of patronage appointees, students working their way through school. Then in the spring a squadron of metropolitan uniformed police was sent to the Hill—making a total of 250 blue-coats and plainclothes men guarding 531 senators and representatives.

Last week, still another protective measure was taken in the form of a set of drastic regulations under which:

The Capitol is closed to the public daily at 4:30, except when congress is in session, and admittance is only by special cards.

Guards are stationed at the subway entrances of the senate and house wings to scrutinize everyone going in and out and to examine all packages.

The Capitol's power plant is guarded 24 hours a day.

Plainclothes men accompany every group of sightseers.

All persons who summon members off the floor are kept under constant surveillance.

A constant police vigil is kept in the public galleries, in the restaurants, and at night, in all corridors inside, and the grounds outside.
